Reds Yield 3 More Villages at Stalingrad; Rain Mires Battlefield

Germans Pour In More Men, Planes; Using Nazi Party's Storm Troopers

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Friday), Sept. 11.—German tanks and infantry smashing frontally at Stalingrad forced the Red army to abandon three more populated places immediately west of that city in the fourth Russian retreat in as many days, the Soviets announced early today.

Over muddy battlefields soaked by the first autumnal rains and strewn with wrecked tanks and mangled bodies the Nazi mechanized masses hammered ever closer to the Volga River stronghold. Soviet airmen were reported taking an increasingly heavy toll of the advancing German legions.

Southwest of Stalingrad, the Russians said, they still were holding despite repeated Nazi attacks.

On the Black Sea the Red army now is engaged in street fighting at Novorossisk against the Germans who crashed through to the northwestern outskirts of the city, the communique said.

Report Success in Caucasus

At Mozdok on the road to the Grozny oil fields the Russians reported their only signal success—the continued annihilation of German infantry battalions which had crossed the Terek River. German officers of the 360th division were quoted as saying their division had been routed and in some companies only 10 or 12 men survived.

Fighting also flared on the relatively dormant front at Voronezh on the upper Don River where the Russians said that German tank-supported troops overran one populated place south of the city, but later were thrown back to their original positions. Twenty German tanks were reported destroyed and three Nazi infantry companies routed.

Storm Troopers in Fray

The new Red army withdrawal west of Stalingrad gave the Nazis five populated areas in two days. Four Nazi tanks were destroyed and 400 Germans killed in one sector, the communique said, but the heaviest destruction was credited to Red airmen who in the last two days "destroyed or damaged about 30 tanks, 100 trucks with troops and supplies, and in air combats brought down 15 German planes."

Shifting the bulk of their equipment and troops directly west of Stalingrad, the Germans have gained

Both Sides Lose Heavily

Bitter Fighting Slows Japs Advancing on Port Moresby

By the Associated Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia, (Friday), Sept. 11.—The Japanese were temporarily checked yesterday in the mountains south of Efogi in their overland drive toward Port Moresby, but bitter fighting is continuing, with heavy casualties on both sides, Allied headquarters announced today.

The communique indicated the Allied ground defenders, aided by Allied planes, had stiffened their resistance since yesterday, when the invaders were reported to have pushed through the Owen Stanley Mountain range to filter down the south slope toward Port Moresby, main Allied base in New Guinea.

The communique said:

"Northeastern Sector, Owen Stanley Area: Bitter fighting continues, with casualties reported heavy on both sides. The enemy yesterday made no further progress in the area.

"Allied attack bombers continue to harass the enemy line of supplies."

Green-painted Japanese veterans of Malayan jungle fighting encountered resolute resistance yesterday from Australian troops 44 air-line miles from Port Moresby.

The probability that an Allied counterattack was in the making was found in the words of General MacArthur, addressed to United States troops.

He advised the Americans never to let the Japanese attack, but to make it a fundamental principle to attack first.

The size of the Japanese force on the south slopes of the mountains nearing the Allied base was not disclosed, but it was not believed large. Moreover, the foe probably had only light equipment.

British Open New Drive on Madagascar

U. S. Approves Move; Allies Charge Island Harbored Jap Subs And Enemy Spies

By Frederick Kuh
London Bureau of the Chicago Sun

London, Sept. 10 (by Telephone).—Action of the Vichy government's administration at Madagascar in allowing the island ports to be used for refueling enemy submarines and in permitting enemy agents to make their headquarters there, today led to the landing of new British forces to take control of the entire island.

British troops were landed at several harbors along Madagascar's western coast and were believed advancing rapidly inland on the Vichy-controlled portions of the island, whose principal base at Diego Suarez in the north was taken at the cost of 500 casualties early in May.

(Vichy sources said the British struck at dawn from Mozambique Channel. Eighteen warships were reported to have poured salvos into Majunga harbor, 320 miles southwest of Diego Suarez, while other squadrons of the British fleet bombarded Morondava, 690 miles southwest of the British-held naval base, and Ambanja, about 120 miles below the top of the island.).

Peaceful Means Futile

British officials at Madagascar opened negotiations with the French after Diego Suarez was taken, in an effort to persuade the authorities to peacefully surrender the 1000-mile-long island to United Nations control for duration of the war, making it clear that the island would be returned to French control after the war. The British, anxious to settle the problem bloodlessly, even offered to let trustworthy French military and civil officials continue to work under the new Allied administration.

But scarcely had these negotiations begun when several Japanese aircraft carriers approached the island through the Indian Ocean and launched a swarm of enemy planes which made reconnaissance flights over the Vichy-controlled portion of the island. The local Vichy authorities made no attempt to hinder these Japanese operations.

The British then learned that the French governor of Madagascar, Armand Annet, was allowing Japanese submarines to refuel and obtain supplies. This directly threatened the Allied supply lines around South Africa to Russia, India and the Middle East.

Were Jap Officers

On June 1 native headmen on the tip of the island north of Diego Suarez discovered two foreigners in a village. A British patrol shot and killed both suspects after they opened fire after being ordered to surrender.

Congress Gets Baruch Board's Plan to Cut Gas, Speed, Mileage To Prevent 'Military Collapse'

Price Action Awaits End Of Recess

Congress Takes Usual Weekend Off; House, Senate Chiefs Parley Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congress recessed for the weekend yesterday without any decision on the form or terms of price and wage control legislation, with just 20 days remaining before the President's October 1 deadline.

A joint House and Senate leadership conference was arranged for this morning to agree if possible on identical bills to start the legislative ball spinning and leaders predicted swift action beginning on Monday.

Way Is Cleared

Although no bill has yet jelled, and there continued wide differences on form, these developments cleared the way for a record-breaking race to enact legislation within the allotted span:

Members of the House Banking Committee, Republicans included, voiced individual willingness to proceed without time-consuming hearings.

Senator Brown (Democrat) of Michigan obtained Senate consent to introduce a bill while the Senate is in recess. The Senate Banking Committee will probably start hearings on Monday.

Ranking leaders on both side of the Capitol said they will exert every effort to report a bill to both Houses before the end of next week and seek enactment in the following seven days.

Cleavage Noted

The chief remaining barrier to action was a cleavage between House and Senate managers on the form and content of the bill, and this may be ironed out at the joint conference this morning.

Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack have declared for a simple all-inclusive resolution authorizing and directing the President to stabilize living costs, notwithstanding provisions of any other law.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley has been working with Senator Brown and Government officials on a more specific formula, prescrib-

High Points of Committee's Recommendations on Rubber

Nine basic recommendations by the Rubber Investigating Committee in its report to President Roosevelt yesterday were:

1. That no speed above 35 miles an hour be permitted for passenger cars and trucks. (In this way the life of tires will be prolonged by nearly 40 per cent.)
2. That the annual average mileage per car, now estimated at 6700, be held to 5000. (This does not mean that each person has a right to 5000; it applies to necessary driving.)
3. That more rubber than is now given to the public be released to maintain, by recapping or new tires, necessary civilian driving.
4. That a new rationing system of gasoline be devised, based on this 5000 miles a year, to save tires.
5. That the restrictions as to gasoline and mileage be national in their application.
6. That compulsory periodic tire inspection be instituted.
7. That a voluntary tire conservation program be put into effect until gasoline rationing can be established.
8. Complete reorganization of existing governmental machinery for handling the rubber program with the supreme command in the hands of a Rubber Administrator.
9. Expansion, as quickly as possible, of the synthetic rubber program, as presently projected, from 870,000 tons annual capacity in 1944 to 1,100,000 tons.

Roosevelt Pledges Quickest Possible Action on Rubber Surveys Findings

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday approved and sent to Congress recommendations for Nation-wide gasoline rationing and other drastic steps to save the country from a crisis "so dangerous that unless corrective measure are taken immediately" military and civilian collapse threatens from failure of the rubber supply.

The recommendations — coupled with a "warning that dare not be ignored" of the prospect of dire consequences if America fails to circumvent Japanese control of crude rubber sources—were those of Mr. Roosevelt's rubber committee headed by the towering World War I figure of Bernard M. Baruch.

In a brief statement accompanying release of the report, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"Recommendations made by the special committee will be put into effect as rapidly as arrangements can be made.

Job Called Excellent

"It is an excellent report. The Government owes a debt of gratitude to the committee members for the time, labor and efficient handling of this most important work."

Aside from national gasoline rationing which the report said should be based on average yearly "essential" driving of 5000 miles and to which it added the stipulation that speeds in excess of 35 miles an hour should be made illegal for passenger cars and trucks, other top recommendations of the committee were:

Complete "reorganization and consolidation" of existing Government machinery for handling the rubber program with full responsibility to be lodged in the chairman of the War Production Board whose authority should be delegated to a Rubber Administrator.

A major expansion of the present program for synthetic rubber manufacture to increase projected output from 870,000 tons a year to 1,100,000 tons.

The three-man committee composed of Baruch, who headed the Nation's war industries in World War I; James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, and Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was caustically critical not only of the conduct of the rubber program thus far but of the failure of the War Production Board to insure an adequate flow of critical materials essential to expedite the facilities-construction phase of the synthetic program.

Various Agencies Blamed

In the overall conduct of the synthetic rubber program, the committee blamed "different Government agencies" for the existence of "overlapping and confusing authority." It charged that the Rubber Reserve Co., subsidiary of Secretary of Commerce Jones' Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Interior Secretary Ickes' Office of Petroleum Coordinator "delayed and complicated" the development

Tax Bill Bears Heavily on Middle Income

Senate Unit Also Approves 15% Levy On Travel Fares

The Senate Finance Committee in its tax bill yesterday approved rises in individual income taxes in the lower middle brackets, approved a heavy tax damper on public travel, and then readied its bill for a weekend "finis."

The income tax action, on the heels of an extra 5 per cent withholding tax on gross income, scaled down the House rates on the lowest income groups, but sharply graded them upward on incomes between $8000 and $10,000.

Tentatively concluding action on individual taxation, the committee then moved into the excise tax field to step up rates on public transportation to ease the war strain on all travel facilities.

15-20% Travel Tax

On recommendation of the Office of Defense Transportation and the Treasury, the committee raised the House 10 per cent tax on railroad, bus and plane fares to 15 per cent, and on travel sleeping accommodations to 20 per cent.

The vote raised the possible yield on the travel tax by 35 million dollars, although Chairman George said revenue was not its purpose. The present tax on transportation fares is 5 per cent. Persons commuting within an area of 30 miles would be exempt. George said soldiers, sailors and marines traveling on furlough or Government business also would be exempt.

Other action by the committee follows:

Rejected Treasury proposals for increases in estate taxes and restored present law provisions for a $40,000 exemption on estates, plus a $40,000 insurance exclusion.

Defeated the House provision for a half-cent tax on each package of cigarette papers or tubes, containing 25 papers or less.

Turned down the House approved increase from 10 to 15 per

Militia Stands By in Cartridge Plant Strike

Production Severely Affected at Alton Ammunition Factory

By the Associated Press

Alton, Ill., Sept. 10.—With more than 1000 men of the Illinois Reserve Militia mobilized and standing by, the huge Western Cartridge Co. plant at East Alton remained virtually shut down tonight by a strike of A. F. of L. chemical workers and sympathizers.

The strike, which began Tuesday over the discharge of one employe in the smokeless powder division, spread to the entire plant early today. Only a skeleton crew of maintenance workers passed through the strongly reinforced but orderly picket lines.

From Washington Chairman William H. Davis, of the War Labor Board, appealed tonight to striking employes to recognize that their idleness was "jeopardizing the lives of thousands of soldiers and sailors."

Davis sent a telegram to Fred Olds, A. F. L. union representative at East Alton, telling "each worker" that "although you may believe that you are helping your fellow worker, you must also recognize that by this strike you are jeopardizing the lives of thousands of soldiers and sailors fighting on the far-flung fronts of the war.

"I therefore call upon you to return to work immediately while the National War Labor Board determines this dispute."

Gov. Dwight H. Green ordered 12 companies of the militia mobilized as a "precautionary arrangement" for possible duty at the scene. They were being held in readiness at their respective armories.

Union leaders protested there was no need for troops. Olds, telephoned President Roosevelt to send regular Army troops instead of State Militia, "if he thinks any armed forces are necessary."

War Department officials at Washington said the strike was "in the War Labor Board's lap." Union members have twice rejected WLB requests to return to work pending

Speedup Hints Huge Army For '43 Drive

College Deferment Plan Out; 9-Million Man Force Predicted

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Strong indications that the Army has speeded its expansion program to provide additional men for an offensive against the Axis next year came from official sources yesterday.

Secretary of War Stimson announced a number of moves to provide additional manpower for the combat forces, among them the virtual abandonment of the college draft deferment program set up less than four months ago.

Designed as Reservoir

Designed to provide a flow of potential officer material for future years in the war, the plan whereby qualified college students could join the Army enlisted reserve and remain in school was announced by the War Department last May.

Citing the "exigencies of war," Stimson yesterday served notice of the Army's intention to call virtually all college members of the enlisted reserve of draft age at the end of the term or semester beginning this month.

At the same time, plans went forward in Congress for the early consideration of legislation lowering the draft age to include 18 and 19-year-old youths.

There was no official disclosure of the size of the military and naval forces contemplated next year, but informed circles believe that eight or nine million men will be under arms before the end of 1943.

Marshall's Statement Recalled

It was recalled that Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said just after the college deferment program was announced last May that the Army would reach a strength of four and a half million by December. Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, recently said the

Japs Fostering Revolt in India, Churchill Says

All-India Party Wants Open Revolution, Premier Charges

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 10.—Prime Minister Churchill today rejected any immediate compromise settlement of India's internal troubles and accused the All-India Party of attempting an open revolution, possibly aided by Japanese fifth columnists.

In a statement to the House of Commons, Churchill declared the Cripps proposals for postwar freedom for India, which the Congress Party and other major Indian political groups turned down last spring, represented the "settled policy" of Great Britain.

He told a questioner that he had no reason to believe there was any tendency in India today to accept the Cripps proposals and asserted an agreement on India's constitutional questions was difficult "with invasion not far off."

The Prime Minister also declared that the course of events in India had been improving "and is, on the whole, reassuring."

"Large reinforcements have reached India and the number of white soldiers now in India is larger than at any time in the British connection," Churchill said.

He noted that "communications of Indian forces defending Bengal and on the Assam frontier had been specially attacked" in recent disorders and said it was quite possible "these activities by the Congress Party have been aided by Japanese fifth column work."

At the same time, he continued, the Congress has demonstrated its inability to win over the Indian army or officials or even stir the country's masses.

Before the Prime Minister spoke, L. S. Amery, Secretary of State for India, told questioners "There is no room for negotiations in the circumstances which Gandhi has described as open rebellion."

Colliflower Backs All-Out Campaign for Scrap Now

Monthly Steel Output Now 5 Million Tons; Demand Is 9 Million

The Nation's steel production is falling about four million tons a month short of meeting the demand, the War Production Board revealed yesterday.

A report by David F. Austin, acting chief of the board's iron and steel division, while emphasizing that more than 75 per cent of the new steel is going into direct war use and the rest into such essential products as railroad equipment and machinery, pointed out that the steel mills are unable to meet all calls from expanded war industries eagerly "chewing up" their product.

The 5,300,000 tons a month now being delivered represent finished steel products, a reduction of approximately 30 per cent from ingot production of more than seven million tons. The residue goes back into the furnaces in the form of scrap.

Far Exceeds Axis'

The WPB reported that current production far exceeded that of the Axis nations, including the German-controlled countries of Europe. It placed Axis steel production in 1941 at approximately 74 million ingot tons, and declared the United Nations last year controlled more than 65 per cent of the world's output.

Despite these figures, WPB reported, it is now necessary to "make

Salvage Chairman Says Processing Can Be Left for Later

A whirlwind campaign to mine scrap metals from every District home was urgently advised by James E. Colliflower, chairman of the District Salvage Committee yesterday at a conference called by Commissioner John Russell Young to determine the best means for the District to get in its share of a demanded five million tons of scrap metal.

Colliflower was in agreement with editors of District papers and with Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst that the permanent, long-range salvage program must be supplemented by an immediate intensive drive to accomplish the emergency aims stated Friday by WPB Chief Donald Nelson.

The Commissioners will decide today whether to follow this sort of program, or the alternative argued for by Horace Walker, Salvage Committee secretary, District Refuse Director William Xanten, and Edwin C. Barringer, director of the National Iron and Steel Scrap Institute. Together with representatives of the junk industry, these men held that a mere acceleration of the present system would be preferable.

Walker contended that because the District collected 27 million pounds of scrap metal between

So Men May Fight

U. S. Calls for 150 Women To Take Jobs at Copper Mines

The Government yesterday appealed to women to take jobs at copper mines to replace men taken into the Army, and at the same time pointed out that married women who replace single men in war industries prolong the deferment of married men.

The two steps followed by only a day assurance by the War Manpower Commission to women welders in the San Francisco area that they will be put to work in shipyards at once despite failure of an A. F. of L. unit to admit them to membership.

Women to the number of 150 were asked by the Federal Employment Service to take copper mine jobs in the Globe, Ariz., area. An Associated Press dispatch said that 92 women already had been employed by the Miami Copper Co., for surface operations.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey yesterday advised the Manpower Commission that married women who replace single men in war industries prolong the draft deferment of married men generally "by exactly the number they release for military service."

Hershey said also that the time at which a married man receives a call to military service would "not necessarily" be affected by his wife's

U. S. Called a Victim

District's Business Landlords Accused of Rent-Rise Squeeze

Representative Ludlow (Democrat) of Indiana yesterday charged Washington business property landlords with unjustified "squeezing" of tenants and warned that mandatory legislation may have to be proposed to give the District Rent Control Administration sweeping powers to cope with the situation.

Speaking on the floor of the House, he said that "mercenary owners of business properties in the District" are taking advantage of the war emergency to increase the rents of their properties sometimes as much as 100 per cent.

"The United States Government," a large tenant, is being "made the victim of this rent squeeze," he charged.

A mass of complaints has been received by Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell from victims of the increases, Representative Ludlow declared. "They came from shopkeepers, lawyers, doctors and others," he said.

Unfortunately, he pointed out, the Rent Control Act gives the administrator no authority to control the situation—imposing his jurisdiction only over residential properties.

Representative Ludlow called the increases "a form of inflation which, unless it is effectively handled, may soon get out of bounds."

WAFS Is Latest Women's Unit

The United States now has three uniformed women "auxiliaries" in the armed forces with the addition yesterday of the WAFS of the Air Transport Command. The WAFS (Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron) is established on an experimental basis and without benefit of special legislation. It will consist initially of about 50 women, all of whom will be recruited on a civil service basis.

Laval Reported Offering to Send Jews to U. S.

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Sept. 10.—A well-informed source said today that Chief of Government Laval had offered to send all Jews in France to the United States instead of to Germany and Poland, if it could be arranged.

The Jews now are being rounded up and many already have been shipped East, despite many protests including those from the Vatican.

The informant, who cannot be quoted by name, said the offer was transmitted to S. Pinckney Tuck, U. S. Charge d'Affaires, when Tuck made informal representations in which he called the roundup of Jews "inhuman."

The Jews, it is understood, will not be required to wear special emblems in the unoccupied zone at present, as is forced in the German-held area.

35-Mile Speed Limit Ordered in Parks

Curb Decreed by Ickes Won't Become Effective Until Present Signs Are Changed

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday ordered a 35-mile-per-hour speed limit established on park roads in the District of Columbia which are under the jurisdiction of the National Capital Parks. He also ordered all Department of the Interior vehicles not to exceed a 35-mile speed.

The double action was taken by Secretary Ickes in line with the recommendations made by President Roosevelt's rubber investigating committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch. The committee report urged that a national speed limit of 35 miles per hour be established for all passenger cars and trucks.

The action by Secretary Ickes makes the Department of the Interior the first Federal agency formally to adopt this recommendation of the investigating committee. In the case of both the park roads and the departmental vehicles, it makes a reduction in speed limits. A 40-mile speed limit has been in effect on department vehicles for many months as the result of an order issued by Secretary Ickes. The park speed limit in the District of Columbia has been 40 miles an hour for a long period.

Violations of the 35-mile order, which is effective immediately, will be dealt with promptly, Secretary Ickes warned.

Capt. Mark H. Raspberry of the Park Police said last night that he had not been notified of the change in speed limit, so that motorists this morning will be allowed to drive at 40 miles an hour. He added that when the order does come through there probably will be some days of grace allowed to change over the present speed limit signs on the park roadways.

The national 35 miles per hour limit would not affect drivers on District streets, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said. The usual limit here is 25 miles per hour—"unless otherwise specified," and even the speedways have a limit of only 30 m. p. h., which is 5 miles lower than the one proposed.

Speeders May Lose Extra Gas Ration

Violators of District speed ordinances were reported to District OPA Administrator Whitney Leary for possible recall of their supplementary gas rationing books, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced yesterday.

Approximately 150 names of persons who have been convicted in Traffic Court of traveling on District streets more than 40 miles an hour were included in the list, Van Duzer said. The drivers will be investigated before any decision on the revocation of their rationing privileges is effected.

Committee Asks Mileage Cut

REPORT FINDINGS TO PRESIDENT—Pictured at the White House yesterday are members of the President's special rubber committee who reported their findings and whose recommendations included Nation-wide gasoline rationing and drastic regulation of civilian driving. East's Congressmen Favor, West's Oppose Baruch Plan

By the Associated Press

A number of Congress members last night declared that if Nation-wide gasoline is a military necessity the people will submit to it cheerfully, but there were some who questioned the wisdom of the move.

The Baruch committee report calling for Nation-wide gas rationing to save rubber was applauded especially by members from the East, where rationing has been in effect for some months. Many of them have been contending that a country-wide curb would help relieve the Eastern oil shortage.

Some comments follow:

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio said he had long been an advocate of rationing, and Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut commented "it's about time" when told of the Baruch proposal. He asked jocularly, "Anybody want to buy a car?"

Bridges in Favor

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire said "although I haven't had opportunity to fully study the report as yet, there are two features in it with which we will all agree—Nation-wide gasoline rationing and a country-wide speed limit of 35 miles per hour."

Senator LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin said he had not had time to read the report but inquired whether it contained any criticism of "the people who have fumbled the rubber program so far?"

Representative Hinshaw (Republican) of California: "Gas rationing in California would cause great confusion. People out there travel great distances to and from work and they need their cars. Public utility systems are not developed like they are in the metropolitan sections of the East."

Representative Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts: "Nation-wide gasoline rationing is only fair, and it certainly would help our situation here in the East. The East now is being discriminated against."

Representative Kilday (Democrat) of Texas: "I feel that it is unnecessary to ration gasoline in Texas. Our storage facilities there are filled to overflowing now. If they need the rubber, that's something else—they should take it and not resort to subterfuge."

Chairman Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois, of the House Rules Committee: "If Nation-wide gasoline rationing is necessary, I believe a majority of the people are unselfish enough to accept it for the general good."

Representative Dirksen (Republican) Illinois: "The recommendation recognizing the feasibility of producing rubber from grain is very significant. It means not only more rubber, but in my judgment it also means the creation of a permanent industry that will be of immense benefits to agriculture."

Congress Gets Proposals for National Gas Rationing and Mileage Limit of new facilities for production of butadiene, synthetic rubber raw material, from petroleum.

In addition, a summary of the committee's report cited "many evidences of procedure bordering on the chaotic in which nontechnical men made decisions without consulting with subordinates nominally in the positions of responsibility."

Although it made many inquiries, the committee said it could not determine "where the responsibility has lain for many of the decisions which have been made in the last eight months."

"There have been many adjustments and readjustments—a 'stop and go' policy—in the synthetic rubber program," the report declared. "Some of these were inevitable; some appear to be the result of bad administration."

Next Year the Crucial One

The committee found 1943 to be the critical year in synthetic rubber production and bearing heavily upon prospects for success in that year, it stated, is the factor of speed in setting up the equipment for making rubber.

By the end of 1943, the committee said, production of Buna S and Neoprene, the two synthetics most relied upon to replace natural rubber on the tires and tank treads of a mechanized army, will reach 425,000 tons. A four-month delay, it declared, would cut this production in half, wiping out a "margin of safety" for military needs of 100,000 tons.

Lacking improvement in the present system of assigning priorities and allocations for scarce materials (nominally the responsibility of the War Production Board), the committee foresaw "grave danger" of "serious delays" in the completion of new synthetic rubber plants.

This warning the committee underscored in its report and coupled with it a declaration that the production of butadiene is jeopardized unless recommended administrative changes are put into effect and Government conflicts ended.

"We have found that although there is every reason to believe that the construction schedule can be met so far as the time of fabrication and construction is concerned, there is grave doubt whether the plants will actually be erected as planned unless something is done at once to change the situation in regard to the flow of materials to the fabricators," the report declared.

"Much has been said of shortages in critical materials. There are two kinds of shortages; the first where there is not enough to go around for essential purposes; the second type of shortage is that where though sufficient material exists, materials are short in the sense of not being available when and where they are urgently needed. There are a few materials short in the first sense, but many have been short in the sense of failure to be where needed when needed.

"Shortages have been accentuated by superimposing upon the heavy military demands and delayed conversion of civilian industry, a vast war construction program approximating 17 billion dollars.

"There has been often an attitude of complacency and a failure to take the vigorous measures necessary to increase supplies, working closely with the industries concerned. There has been some disposition to accept the 'impossible' instead of trying to overcome it.

"The military men must decide what things come first in war production, but it is the duty of this committee to point out that unless the flow of materials for the construction of synthetic rubber plants is insured there will be no rubber in the fourth quarter of 1943 with which to equip a modern mechanized army."

The committee told Congress and the President that tires on civilian cars are now wearing down at a rate eight times greater than they are being replaced. At this rate, the committee stated, most of the cars will be off the road next year and 1944 will find America's transportation resource of 27 million passenger cars "in all but complete collapse."

The committee put at 211,000 tons the rubber deficit merely on the basis of 842,000 tons for military needs alone from July 1, 1942, to January 1, 1944. Without replacements of artificial or natural rubber, military requirements will exhaust crude stocks before the end of the summer, the committee declared.

In addition to national gasoline rationing under a new system calculated to keep mileages at 5000 miles a year and compulsory 35-miles-per-hour speed limit, the committee called for compulsory periodic tire inspection and a voluntary tire conservation program until rationing can be put into effect and recommended that the motoring public be given more rubber than is now available for recapping or new tires.

Rationing Only Way

"Gas rationing is the only way of saving rubber," the committee stated. "Every way of avoiding this method was explored, but it was found to be inescapable. This must be kept in mind: The limitation in the use of gasoline is not due to shortage of that commodity—it is wholly a measure of rubber saving."

Until the synthetic program gets into full swing, the committee urged that "at once" the public be given access to enough reclaimed rubber, an increased supply of Thiokol, a type of synthetic, and a small amount of crude to make possible a tire recapping and replacement program. The committee urged a 20 per cent increase in existing rubber-reclaiming facilities.

To provide for a recapping program, to be maintained partially if 138,000 tons of reclaimed rubber are made available in the next 16 months, the committee called for expansion of Thiokol manufacture from 24,000 to 60,000 tons a year.

Every day of delay in starting a program for preservation of the rubber stockpile represented by the tires on civilian passenger cars, the commmittee said,means "irretrievable, unnecessary loss of rubber" and a "day of disastrous reckoning."

"The Nation now is driving on rubber borrowed from a happier past. Without recaps and replacements the majority of civilian cars would be forced off the road by irreplaceable tire failures."

The committee declared the idea that tires deteriorate as rapidly in storage as they do when being driven to be "completely wrong."

The committee recommended expansion of the Government's synthetic rubber production in two directions:

1. Addition of 140,000 tons annual capacity to the projected capacity of 705,000 in the overall Buna S program.

2. Expansion by 20,000 tons a year of the 40,000-ton program for manufacture of neoprene, the only synthetic which meets requirements for heavy military duty without combination with crude rubber.

The committee recommended that the Buna S program be jumped quickly by increasing the production of butadiene by 100,000 tons through conversion of gasoline refineries to what is known as the "quick butadiene" process. If the conversion can be accomplished quickly enough, the committee said, an additional 40,000 to 50,000 tons of Buna S may be produced in critical 1943.

Alcohol Process Plant Proposed

In addition to the increase to be provided in the refinery program, the committee urged that 30,000 more tons of Buna S be provided by erection of a plant to be built late in 1943 and to come into production in 1944. This plant would make rubber either from grain alcohol or butylene glycol and would be located near the center of grain production. Delay in starting the plant was proposed to give the experts a chance to determine which of the two processes is the better.

Other recommendations include:

1. No further changes in the synthetic rubber program—"the time to freeze" on established processes "has passed, in view of the urgency of 1943."

2. Prompt adjustment in the construction rates for Styrene and polymerization plants to get maximum Buna S production in 1943.

3. Proceed promptly with erection of an alcohol plant to produce 100 million gallons a year, located near the grain belt.

(In connection with its recommendations for greater use of the grain alcohol process, a proposal long agitated in Congress and the basis for an alcohol-rubber administration bill recently vetoed, the committee reported that it had been assured by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard that expansion of this phase of the program would not interfere with the food supply.)

4. Authorization by Congress for additional acreage in guayule, the rubber-bearing shrub of Mexico and the American Southwest. The Department of Agriculture expects from its present guayule planting program to obtain 600 short tons of crude rubber this year, 33,000 in the fall of 1944 and 47,000 in the fall of 1945.

5. Procurement from WPB of adequate priorities to obtain enough farm equipment to prepare land and plant seeds for expanded guayule production.

6. Expansion of milling, mixing and tire building facilities on the basis of a survey to be made about March 1, 1943, to determine how extensive the expansion may be necessary to handle the expected synthetic volume.

7. Utilization of tire molds of tire-recapping plants to meet the needs for recapping. Total recap capacity in the United States, exclusive of tire manufacturers' facilities, approximately 16 million recaps a year. Operation of extra shifts might increase this to 19 millions. The committee's tire-replacement program may call for 25 million recaps annually.

8. Continuation of normal scrap rubber collection and formulation of plans for another intensive drive in about a year. In addition, improved measures should be taken to protect existing stockpiles from sabotage.

Bigger Share for Ickes

While the core of its recommendations on reorganization of Federal rubber agencies was centralization of authority in a rubber "czar" to be named by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson, the committee also proposed greater rubber responsibilities for Petroleum Coordinator Ickes.

Ickes, it urged, should be directed by President Roosevelt to act under specific directives from Nelson, but under the supervision of the "czar," to "explore all methods for the production of butadiene from petroleum and natural gas products and recommended proposals to the rubber administrator."

The report also urged establishment of a technical division under the administrator in line with its criticism of the failure of existing Government machinery to avail itself of adequate technical guidance.

Apart from its criticism of the Jones-Ickes controversy over butadiene processes and of the failure of rubber agencies to take advantage of Russian experience in synthetics, the committee had this to say about other Government failures:

A "more adequately staffed organization" might have "foreseen earlier" the altered alcohol supply situation between the fall of 1941 and the spring of 1942 and, as a result, changed the program "a few months earlier."

"Faulty administration" also was blamed for the fact that full information about the compounding of Buna S to all companies did not become "an accomplished fact" except in "the last few days." The committee reported that on July 3, 1942, Rubber Reserve agreed with the four large rubber companies that it alone would be permitted to give out information to other rubber companies.

However, said the committee, Rubber Reserve did not make this information available to other companies "for some six weeks in spite of repeated efforts of the rubber branch of WPB to have the information released."

"In view of this situation, one hardly needs to point out that there has been very imperfect cooperation between the Rubber Reserve Co. and the rubber branch of WPB."

(These names were mentioned last night as among possible choices for appointment as the rubber "czar" recommended by the committee:

(Dr. E. R. Weidlein, head of the Mellon Institute and technical adviser to the Rubber Reserve Co.; Dr. Waldo S. Semon, expert on synthetic rubber for the B. F. Goodrich Co.; R. T. Haslam, Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; Dr. Charles F. Kettering, General Motors research chief and head of the National Inventors' Council, and Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Rubber Co.)

Hours Must Be Staggered, Transit Head Says

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Government plans for Nation-wide rationing of gasoline and curtailing civilian motoring will put a heavy load on street car and bus lines and give impetus to moves to stagger school, store and work hours.

Those views were expressed tonight by Charles Gordon, managing director of the American Transit Association. He said:

"The effect on city street car and bus systems will be to increase the number of passengers to be handled from 9 to 20 per cent over and above our previous estimates. The heaviest increases will be in the smaller cities, while the lower increases will occur in the large metropolitan centers.

"This further loading of transit facilities emphasizes the importance of adopting the steps laid down by the Office of Defense Transportation, which include the staggering of hours for stores, offices, factories and schools, the elimination of all nonessential and duplicating services and the reduction in the number of stops."

Survey Scores Failure To Accept Soviet Help

Among comments and criticisms in the Baruch Rubber Committee's report yesterday appeared this paragraph:

"Failure of the responsible officials to request the aid of Russia in setting up our synthetic system is a neglect for which we have not had a satisfactory explanation. The Soviet Republics have been first or second in the production of this commodity and we are asking that their 'know how' be obtained. The Soviet has expressed a willingness always to be cooperative. Russia has lost, through the German advance, between 50,000 and 60,000 tons of its rubber-making capacity."

Tires Wear Less When Not in Use, Probers Report

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Tires do not wear out as fast standing in a garage as when actually being driven.

This flat declaration was made yesterday by the President's special rubber inquiry committee in an effort to correct what is described as an "erroneous impression."

"This idea is completely wrong," the report emphasized. "When standing under proper conditions in a garage, the deterioration of the tires amounts to only a few per cent, even in the course of an entire year.

"The conditions which must be observed are that the tires must not be allowed to stand uninflated, that they should not be allowed to stand on grease or oil, and that the car should be jacked up to relieve the pressure on the tires if the car is to stand for several months without use."

WPB Was Denied Data On Synthetic Processes

An example of the lack of cooperation of Government agencies in carrying out the synthetic rubber program was given by the Baruch Committee in these words:

"... the dissemination of technical information on the compounding of Buna S to all rubber companies has become an accomplished fact only in the last few days. On July 3 of this year an agreement was entered into between the Rubber Reserve Co. and four large rubber companies, by which the Rubber Reserve Co. alone was permitted to give out information on compounding to other companies. It took six weeks of repeated effort for the rubber branch of the War Production Board, desiring to launch a program of education throughout the industry, to get this vital information released by the Rubber Reserve."

U. S. Signs Pact To Buy Mexican Surplus Rubber

The State Department announced last night the signing of an agreement with Mexico under which the United States will buy until December 31, 1946, "any exportable surplus" of that country's tree rubber and all of its guayule and other plant rubber production.

This was the second rubber purchase agreement with a southern neighbor announced yesterday, the other being Guatemala. In all, 14 agreements have been made since the Board of Economic Warfare and the RFC Rubber Reserve Company began looking for much needed war supplies of rubber in Latin American republics.

Under the terms of the Mexican agreement, the Rubber Reserve Company will establish a "substantial development" fund to obtain maximum production of wild rubber in Mexico.

Text of Roosevelt's Order on Overtime

Executive Action Forbids Extra Pay Within 40-Hour Week Except on Specified Holidays

The White House yesterday made public the text of President Roosevelt's executive order forbidding payment of double-time "penalty" wages for work on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays, unless those days mark the seventh day of work in a single week.

The order, which lists the holidays for which time-and-a-half pay may be paid, follows:

Executive Order

Regulations relating to overtime wage compensation:

Whereas many labor organizations have already adopted the patriotic policy of waiving double-time-wage compensation or other premium pay for work on Saturday, Sunday and holidays, as such, for the duration of the war; and

Whereas it is desirable and necessary in the prosecution of the war, and to insure uniformity and fair treatment for those labor organizations, employers and employes who are conforming to such wage policies that this principle be universally adopted:

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, as President of the United States and as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, it is hereby ordered:

I. That the following principles and regulations shall apply for the duration of the war to the payment of premium and overtime-wage compensation on all work relating to the prosecution of the war:

A. No premium wage or extra compensation shall be paid to any employe in the United States, its territories or possessions, for work on Saturday or Sunday except where such work is performed by the employe on the sixth or seventh day worked in his regularly scheduled workweek and as hereinafter provided.

(1) Where because of emergency conditions an employe is required to work for seven consecutive days in any regularly scheduled work-week a premium of double-time compensation shall be paid for work on the seventh day.

(2) Where required by the provisions of law or employment contracts, not more than time and one-half wage compensation shall be paid for work in excess of eight hours in any day or 40 hours in any workweek or for work performed on the sixth day worked in any regularly scheduled workweek.

B. No premium wage or extra compensation shall be paid for work on customary holidays except that time and one-half wage compensation shall be paid for work performed on any of the following holidays only:

New Year's Day,
Fourth of July,
Labor Day,
Thanksgiving Day,
Christmas Day,
and either Memorial Day or one other such holiday of greater local importance.

II. All Federal departments and agencies shall conform to provisions in all existing and future contracts negotiated, executed, or supervised by them to the policies of this order. All such departments and agencies shall immediately open negotiations to alter provisions in existing contracts to conform to the requirements of this order.

III. Nothing in this order shall be construed as requiring a modification of the principle that every employe should have at least one day of rest in every seven days. The continuous operation of plants and machines in prosecuting the war does not require that employes should work seven consecutive days.

IV. Nothing herein shall be construed as superseding or in conflict with the provisions of the statutes prescribing the compensation, hours of work and other conditions of employment of employes of the United States.

V. All Federal departments and agencies affected by this order shall refer to the Secretary of Labor for determination questions of interpretation and application arising hereunder.

VI. The provisions of this order shall become effective October 1, 1942.

U. S. Can Help Free Europe, Institute Told

Count Goudenhove-Kalergi, founder in 1923 of the Pan-European Union, yesterday told the Institute on World Organization that he believed the influence of American public opinion, exerted at postwar peace tables, would be a major weapon in forging a new, united and free Europe.

Speaking at American University, where the institute is holding its second annual session, the count, now a research associate at New York University, argued that European peace is impossible without "European Union" and that unless there is European peace, there can be no world peace.

"The great issue of this war," he declared, "is no longer whetner Europe shall be united or not—but whether it shall be united in the spirit of Hitler's Pan-Germanism and barbarism or in hte Pan-European spirit of federalism and of democracy."

Other speakers at yesterday's sessions were Dr. Pitman B. Potter of Brookings Institution who discussed experiences of the United States which should be helpful in planning the postwar world; Dr. Jan Hostie, formerly a legal adviser to the Belgian Foreign Office, whose subject was the constitutional and territorial problems of the European states, and Dr. Imre Ferenczi, formerly of the staff of the International Labor Office, who canvassed the postwar problems of immigration and settlement.

ast night's public lecture was delivered by Charles O. Van der Plas, until recently governor of East Java, who spoke of the positoin the Far East will play in future world organization.

Among today's speakers will be Harold B. Butler, British Minister to the United States. He will be introduced by Adolph Berle, assistant Secretary of State.

Bill Would Raise WAAC's Pay to Army Levels

A raise for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, to put its members on a pay base corresponding to that of the Regular Army, will be considered this afternoon at a joint meeting of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees.

Maj. W. S. Richards, testifying before the House committee yesterday, said that a pay disparity between the WAACS and their naval counterpart, the WAVES, "certainly is going to be a detriment to recruiting" WAAC volunteers.

The WAVES are part of the naval reserve and draw the same pay as Navy men, but the bill setting up the WAACS stipulates the rate of pay Army men had before their recent raises.

WAAC privates now receive $21 a month as starting pay, while a WAVE beginner draws $50 monthly, the same as an Army buck private. The pending legislation was introduced by Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington.

A WAAC first leader, now receiving $72 a month, would get $96 under its provisions, the same as an Army staff sergeant. A leader, now drawing $80, would be paid $78, the present pay of a line sergeant. The $54-a-month junior leader would be boosted to the $66 level of an Army corporal.

The lower-ranking WAAC officers, now getting $125 a month, would get the same $300 annual increase recently voted for the Army second lieutenant. The pay of Director Oveta Culp Hobby, who wears the eagles of an Army colonel, is expected to remain at $3000 annually.

With the exception of Director Hobby, no WAAC now has a rank higher than third officer.

Both WAVES and WAACS have the compensation and pension benefits of civilian employees, rather than of Army and Navy veterans. The equalization in pay for the WAACS would put them on comparable footing financially. Technically, the WAACS serve with the Army and are not in it—while the WAVES actually are in the Naval Reserve. The WAACS can serve overseas but the WAVES cannot. There are other minor regulation differences.

Senate Unit's Tax Bill Bears Heavily on Middle Incomes

cent in the tax on international telephone, telegraph and cable messages. This was done at the request of the Federal Communications Commission, which thought the tax would discourage proper international relations.

Also restored the present 10 per cent tax on photographic apparatus, rejecting the House increase to 25 per cent on such equipment. Retained the House rate of 15 per cent on unexposed photographic films.

Defeated Treasury recommendations for a tax on beer of eight dollars a barrel, then approved the House $7 rate. The present tax on beer is $6 a barrel.

Waived for the duration of the war any import tax on industrial alcohol imported for industrial purposes.

As the committee neared the end of its eight-billion-dollar (net) tax bill, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who has long opposed any form of compulsory savings, told reporters the tempo of war spending makes "inevitable some form of forced savings."

Joint Committee Approved

The committee on Wednesday approved creation of a special joint House-Senate Committee to study with Morgenthau the need for a comprehensive compulsory savings plan and report back to Congress in January.

Morgenthau reiterated his indorsement of the six and one-half billion dollar spending tax program, sidetracked by the committee, and said the three and one-half billion dollar gross income, or "victory" tax the committee substituted "doesn't do the job."

Financial "Gap" Cited

"It doesn't take care of the gap between the amount of money people have in their pockets and the amount of things they can buy," he said.

Swinging publicly to espousal of compulsory savings, Morgenthau conceded that his voluntary program of bond sales isn't "going ahead fast enough or in sufficient volume."

He said the voluntary program would have to be supplemented and "that means forced savings. Let's call it by its ugliest name."

He indicated that if Congress finally rejects his spending tax program, carrying compulsory savings features, he would have to go back to the Capitol early next year and ask for practically the same thing.

Although the Finance Committee would have none of the spending tax, its adjustment of House-approved income taxes yesterday represented a victory for the Treasury.

The rate shake-up, patterned after an even sharper income tax adjustment vainly sought by the Treasury in the House, would yield an estimated 33 million dollars more than House schedules.

Against the 6 per cent normal and 13 per cent flat surtax imposed by the House on the first $2000 of taxable income, the committee approved a lower starting rate with increases in each $500 bracket of the first $2000. The net effect was to reduce the tax load of all earnings up to $1500, after personal exemptions. Surtax rates would be sharply graduated upward until on $8000 of taxable income they would parallel the House-approved levies.

The new percentage rates, compared with present law taxes and House action, were as follows:

	Present Law	House Bill	Senate Bill
$ 0— 500	6	13	10
500—1000	6	13	13

Shoe Strike Settled

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 10 (AP).—An eight-day strike of approximately 3000 Haverhill shoe workers was settled today when the strikers voted, 1370 to 698, to accept the manufacturers' compromise offer of a general seven per cent pay boost and a 10 per cent raise for fancy stitchers. They will return to work on Monday.

The strike, which officials of the United Shoe Workers of America (C.I.O.), described as an "outlaw" walkout, began a week ago yesterday when the workers refused to abide by a decision of United States Conciliation Arbiter Maxwell Kopelof granting increases of from five to 10 per cent to 50 per cent of the shoe workers in the city. They demanded a 10 per cent raise.

In view of what he termed a "repudiation" of his decision, Kopelof submitted his resignation today as arbiter for the industry here.

Argentine Party Urges Axis Break

Buenos Aires, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Radical Party (Liberal) national committee today indorsed a resolution, introduced in the Chamber of Deputies by its own members, calling for an immediate diplomatic break with the Axis as recommended in the January Pan American Conference in Rio de Janeiro.

Raul Damonte Taborda told the committee that Argentina's neutral policy, especially in view of Brazil's entry into the war, constituted "a surrender to the Axis powers, violating Argentina's purest juridical traditions."

Budapest, Berlin Pounded By Red Raiders

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 10.—Russian bombers ranging over wide Axis areas from the East in their part of a great Allied air offensive touched off scores of fires and explosions last night in Berlin, Budapest and Koenigsberg, the Moscow radio announced tonight.

It was the second time within a week that the Red bombers spread alarm over Nazi and Axis areas. This time the Russians said two bombers failed to return to their bases.

Thirty-eight fires, 12 of them large, were observed in Budapest and 8 explosions were caused in the Hungarian capital.

In Berlin, 12 fires and 4 explosions were observed. There were 16 fires in Koenigsberg, East Prussia.

The Germans acknowledged today that Russian planes penetrated again to the environs of Berlin last night and attacked Budapest.

After a period of Axis confusion during which the Budapest attackers were identified as Russian, then English, but finally were named definitely as Russian, the Germans admitted Soviet bombers came close to the heart of Berlin.

The official D. N. B. news agency said the Russians "flew over the outskirts of greater Berlin last night" and added that "they did not drop any bombs in the center of the city"—apparently meaning, by indirection, that the attacks were concentrated on supposedly safe industries on the fringes of the capital, far from the Rhineland target areas of the R. A. F.

The German high command, refraining from detailed accounts of the forays, dismissed the raids on eastern Germany as "harassing flights" and D. N. B. called them "ineffective nuisance raids."

The high command told of some damage inflicted by incendiaries dropped from British planes on western Germany in daylight yesterday and again last night, but the R. A. F. was in a comparative lull.

Sidelights of War

Tommy Atkins' Pay Raised 70c After He Cites Yanks' Bankroll

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 10.—Sir Stafford Cripps announced increases today in the basic pay of British armed forces at an annual cost of 43 million pounds (172 million dollars) after the House of Commons had heard the lament of an anonymous Tommy Atkins over his scale as compared with that in the United States Army.

The pay increase will be about 70 cents a week for all men in the armed services below commissioned ranks and about 45 cents for women, Cripps said. However, members of Britain's armed forces will be among the world's lowest paid.

Capt. Frederick Bellenger, a Laborite, asserted that the British soldier with proficiency pay received about 50 cents a day in contrast with about $2 for American soldiers.

Reread to the members from a soldier's letter:

"I have been asked by my officers to treat the Yanks as good pals and make them feel at home. . . . But as we are now in two different spheres or standards of life financially this makes our intentions hopeless to fulfill unless we want to resort to sponging, and generally speaking Tommy Atkins is not a sponger."

Toll of Chinese Huge

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—China has lost about six million in killed and wounded against Japan's 2½ million in five years of war, Dr. George Yeh, London director of the Chinese information ministry, estimated today.

He put Chinese army strength now at roughly 12 million, but said that a 20 per cent bigger harvest than in 1941 had averted any food problem. In the year up to last June, he said, the Chinese had fought 5580 engagements.

9743 Italian Casualties

Rome (From Italian Broadcasts), Sept. 10 (AP).—August casualties of the Italian army, navy and air force totaled 9734—974 killed, 2455 wounded and 6305 missing, the government announced today.

Greatest losses were in Egypt where casualties totaling 7367 were listed.

Madagascar Drive May Secure Seas

By Fred Vanderschmidt
Associated Press War Editor

The United Nations undertook last night another major operation to secure the main sea passages of the global war reaching out with superior sea-air-land forces to control all of the fourth biggest island in the world, Madagascar in the Indian Ocean.

Madagascar's west coast faces mainland Africa across the broad Mozambique Channel, which is the seaway for all the heavily United States-British traffic bound for the Middle East, for the Persian Gulf route to Russia and for a good deal of the military supplies for India.

The new offensive has the full approval of the United States Government which, unlike Britain, still is on diplomatic speaking terms with Vichy, France.

There were distinct factors which gave the Madagascar movement urgency. These were:

1. Japanese planes are reported to have been scouting Madagascar, with French permission, and Jap submarines are supposed to have used secret island harbors for refueling. Likewise German spies were reported operating in parts of the island, with connivance of local officials and with Vichy.

2. Japan is certainly preparing for a major move somewhere, and if she chooses to follow the long-range Axis strategy she will attack India with the idea of effecting ultimate juncture with the Germans. The first stages of a Japanese campaign against India would certainly include an amphibious attack on Madagascar to clear the western flank.

3. The explosive internal situation in India is reaching climax, with Churchill's statement of Thursday refusing to consider compromise settlement at this time and stating that the post-war dominion plan, which the Indian politicians have rejected, was Britain's "settled policy." It was significant that he withheld this announcement until after the start of the Madagascar operations; it also was significant that he accused the Indian Congress politicos of attempting open revolution, possibly with the aid of a Jap fifth column.

4. The Germans may break through the Caucasus; if they do, the British Tenth Army, the Soviet army below the Caucasus and, probably, United States troops will be fighting to hold the Middle-Eastern land bridge. Their supplies and reinforcements will depend almost entirely on Allied control of the Indian Ocean.

It was logical to suppose that the move to occupy all Madagascar would be extended eventually to Reunion Island, 380 nautical miles off the Madagascar east coast, on the main route to Indian ports. This could probably be occupied from the nearby British island of Mauritius.

Vichy's Protest Held Due to Civilian Toll

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 10.—An authorized source said today that Vichy's protest to the United States of bombings in occupied France was not against the principle of Allied military operations in the occupied zone.

Rather, he said, it was aimed at French civilian losses which the Vichy government considered out of proportion to the military attainments of the raids.

The spokesman said the bone of contention was the use of high-flying planes like Flying Fortresses over population centers, and in respect to the danger to civilians he compared these operations unfavorably with those of dive bombers.

"If the Allies do not have material to wage this kind of war under modern conditions let them abstain from it," he remarked.

Some circles felt that the French-American strain over the bombings may have been eased somewhat by the spokesman's words.

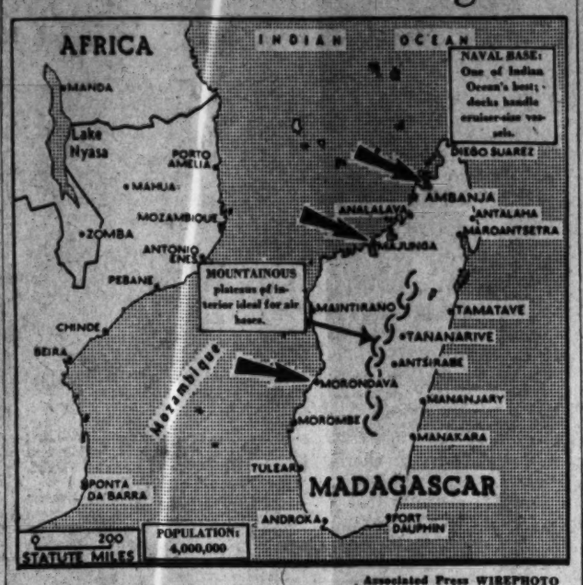
British Invade W. Madagascar



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ISLAND'S KEY PORTS ATTACKED—British naval and air units yesterday attacked the Ambanja, Majunga and Morndava (arrows) on the west coast of the Vichy French Island of Madagascar. It was a renewal of hostilities on the Indian Ocean island, third largest in the world. British forces occupied Diego Suarez, naval base on the northern tip of the island, last May 8

these men revealed them to be Japanese naval officers.

Later the Japanese aircraft carriers returned and again enemy planes made reconaissance flights over the island, spying on British operations.

Finally a group of German secret agents reached the island. Under orders from the Vichy government the local French officials assisted these Nazi spies. The British, it is believed, have since caught some of these German agents and have them in safekeeping.

The British negotiations with Annet and his representatives, meanwhile, dragged on for about two months. During this time timidity and secrecy marked Annet's negotiations with the British, but he openly and brazenly connived with the Japanese and Germans permitting them to use the island's facilities.

About a month ago, the British decided that continuance of negotiations with Annet was a waste of time and would expose Madagascar and the British forces there to unpleasant enemy surprises.

Action Decided Upon

The British War Cabinet then decided to undertake the military operations set in motion today.

The Vichy French made clear their intentions of resisting to the utmost of their limited possibilities "for the interests and the honor of France."

A communique on the attack said in part:

"All the French flay this unqualifiable aggression."

("The British acted with the full agreement of the United States," the State Department announced in Washington, pointing out that the penetration or occupation of any part of Madagascar by the Axis would constitute a definite and serious danger to the United Nations. It added: "The full military occupation of the island by the British forces will therefore not only contribute to the successful conduct of the war against the Axis forces, but will be in the interests of the United Nations.")

Britain's decision to secure control of the southern part of the island was determined by strict military necessity, in view of the island's strategic importance. Many points besides Diego Suarez still offered facilities to Japanese submarines, endangering communications with the Middle East.

Expectations were that the British would achieve their objectives in a few days. Their actions today caught officials napping—literally napping, for some were asleep and had to be aroused by the British landing forces.

Protects Supply Routes

Control of southern Madagascar will improve the safety of the long Allied supply routes around South Africa to Egypt and Russia. With winter coming, the southern channel to Iran will be in greater use for armaments to Russia, because Archangel will be icebound and Murmansk is too close to German air and U-boat bases in Norway. Reinforcements to Egypt also will enjoy more security.

Vichy forces in Madagascar, mostly natives and not very numerous, are not believed capable of formidable or prolonged resistance.

According to the Vichy radio, the British have attacked three ports of Madagascar's west coast—Majunga, Ambaja, and Morondava, from the harbor of Majunga, a town of 25,000 inhabitants, a good road 375 miles long leads to the capital of the colony, Tananarive. The British are expected to take the capital as well, setting up the new administration there.

All indications were that the British expeditionary force included no Fighting French troops. The Vichy radio has reported "a vain attempt by de Gaullists to disembark at a point some 17 miles north of Majunga," but that story appears to be false.

British Statement

The British government issued an important declaration tonight, which said:

"After the occupation of Diego Suarez, His Majesty's government had hoped that the governor general of Madagascar would allow the British command to take such steps as they consider necessary in order to deny to the Axis powers bases and facilities elsewhere in the island.

"The attitude of the Vichy Government, whose intructions the governor-general followed, made it clear, however, that these essential requirements could not be achieved by peaceful means. They have therefore been reluctantly compelled to undertake further military operations in the island.

"Once a friendly administration has been established in the island, willing to enter into full collaboration with the United Nations and thus contribute to the liberation of France, His Majesty's Government will extend to Madagascar all the economic and financial benefits accorded to other French territories which have joined the United Nations. This will include the early reopening of trade with the United Nations, and a guarantee by His Majesty's Government of the payment of salaries and pensions to all civilian and military employes of Madagascar who continue to serve under the new administration.

No Territorial Designs.

"His Majesty's Government has no territorial designs on Madagascar. Madagascar remains French."

An interesting footnote to today's story was contained in the activities of the State Department at Washington. The British and United States governments had agreed that Washington would delay any public statement about the opening of British operations at Madagascar until London gave the green light. The British were awaiting word direct from the scene before telephoning Washington to go ahead. British officials were therefore completely taken back when a flash came through from Washington, publishing the news before London gave the signal.

The ministry of information and other British official sources were worried because Washington had spilled the beans before the operations had progressed to a certain stage. A few hours later, however, the authorities had recovered their philosophical calm, but a slight bewilderment remained that the State Department, of all meticulous institutions, should have obtained a scoop by breaking a news release.

Leopold Said To Reject Nazi Amity Moves

By the United Press

London, Sept. 10.—German authorities are putting heavy pressure on King Leopold of the Belgians to establish a pro-Nazi government in Belgium, but he has refused flatly on grounds that such action would make him a traitor to his people, unimpeachable advices said tonight.

It was understood that several high German officials have visited Leopold in recent weeks at Castle Laeken, where he has been a prisoner since his surrender after 18 days of resistance to the German invasion in 1940.

The Germans reportedly offered Leopold his freedom if he would form a new government and cooperate with Germany.

The advices stated that Leopold, realizing he was only a pawn of the Germans, rejected their proposals and refused all pleas that he cooperate with them.

The principal motive of the German plan to establish Leopold as the actual head of a Belgian government is their desire to obtain the cooperation of the Belgians in the German war effort and stamp out widespread sabotage in the country, the advices said.

The reports said a maority of the Belgian people still trust Leopold and want him to return to the throne after the war.

Togo Quit Over Minor Policy, Japs Say

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 10.—Information given neutral diplomats by the Japanese Embassy in Kuibyshev was reported today to have explained that Shigenori Togo's opposition to a reorganization of the Japanese government was responsible for his resignation.

Informants said the Japanese explained that the foreign ministry was to be divided into two offices, one handling relations with Far Eastern countries and the other dealing with the rest of the world, much as the British divide functions between their foreign office and their colonial ministry.

This explanation apparently was intended to ease any concern felt in Russia as a result of the resignation of Togo. The Japanese cabinet shift was widely interpreted abroad as a possible forerunner to a Japanese attack on Siberia.

Croat Capital Bombed

Rome (from Italian Broadcasts), Sept. 10 (AP).—An enemy plane dropped nine bombs on the Croatian capital of Zagres, killing two persons and damaging several houses, the Rome radio said tonight.

Nazis Gain Again at Stalingrad; Rains Begin to Soak Terrain steadily in the last week. Tough Storm Troopers from the streets of Berlin were reported participating in the assault.

On the southwestern side of the city the Russians said their artillery and infantry had beaten off the enemy, destroying 13 more tanks, 14 trucks and 42 military dumps. The firm defense of this sector as well as the northwestern approaches resulted in the German frontal drive.

Down the Black Sea coast the Germans, who occupy part of the former Soviet naval station of Novorossisk, were trying to land infantry from the sea behind the Russians' backs, but Red dispatches said, they lost at least four cutters and two torpedo boats in the attempt. Frontally the Germans were putting on heavy pressure to get to the center of the city.

In the Terek Valley of the deep Caucasus, 50 miles from the Grozny oil fields, the Germans who have crossed the river near Mozdok were reported driven back to the water's edge in some places.

Several new German river crossings were smashed by strong Soviet airpower.

(The German high command said that strong fortifications at Stalingrad were taken and that 59 Soviet tanks were destroyed when they attempted "relief attacks." More heights were reported taken below Novorossisk; five transports sunk off the Black Sea coast and, in the Terek River sector, Russian counter-attacks were said to have been beaten off. The Germans reported an air raid on Astrakhan, at the mouth of the Volga. They also acknowledged that the Russians had resumed their offensive in the Rzhev area northwest of Moscow, but said the attacks were frustrated and 77 Red army tanks destroyed in a hard battle.)

At Stalingrad, the Luftwaffe was hammering the Russian lines in waves of from six to eight bombers, while in the spacious fields outside the city many bayonet battles were developing.

Southwest of the city the decisive stages of the battle were approaching as the Germans poured in more troops, more tanks, more planes. Tremendous clashes were reported in many parts of this sector and the Nazi ability to draw upon reserves was permitting continuous assault on the Red army defenders.

Speedup Hints Huge Army for 1943

Navy would expand to one and a half million next year.

Whether the accelerated program will result in the Army's going above the four and a half million figure in 1942 was not indicated. But it was clear that after the New Year the expansion of the armed forces would be speeded beyond the plans in effect a few months ago.

"The stepping up of the intensity of the vital combat in which we are engaged and the growing need for enlarged forces," Secretary Stimson said, "make it clear that all young men fortunate enough to have the physical and mental qualifications to enable them to serve their country in the Armed Forces are destined for that service."

"The exigencies of war have now become such," he continued, "that it is now expected that by the end of the college term or semester beginning in September those student members of the reserve who have reached selective service age will all or for the most part be called to active duty and those reaching that age during subsequent terms will similarly be called."

When the college deferment plan was set up, the Army made it plain that those who signed up were subject to call whenever needed, even though it was intended that they be allowed to stay in school as long as possible so they would be better qualified to serve.

Stimson said that the college reservists called into the Army will be given "highly specialized" training to qualify them for "specific" military duties, but did not indicate whether they will be schooled for commissioned or noncommissioned rank.

The War Secretary also stated that the R. O. T. C. training program—a thing separate from the student reservist plan—may be modified or perhaps even discontinued to conform to wartime needs. This matter is now being studied, he said.

Another move taken at the same time to speed the expansion of the service was an order for the recall of several thousand former servicemen to active duty in October and December. They are enlisted men of the Regular Army Reserve, Enlisted Reserve Corps and National Guard, whose call has been deferred because of dependency.

Legislation lowering the draft age from 20 to 18 years is expected to be considered within the next week or ten days. The Senate Military Affairs Committee has tentatively decided to begin hearings on the measure next Wednesday, while Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee says his group probably will start open hearings on the measure a week from Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. F. W. Wilby, superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, yesterday told the House Committee that the military situation will require the drafting of 18 an 19-year-old youths.

He told the committee that more officers would be required to train the additional men coming into the Army and that, therefore, he favored reducing the time required to complete the course of instruction at West Point from four to three years. The committee later approved the bill, making the change.

The seven million high school students in the United States, a goodly number of whom will be affected if the bill to draft the 18 and 19-year-olds goes into effect will be mobilized this autumn to help in the war effort, it was learned today. President Roosevelt is expected to announce details of a program shortly which will enlist all secondary students in school-wide groups organized to prepare for and engage in war services.

Women Offered Copper Mine Jobs

declining to accept a job or quitting a job she already holds.

"The only respect in which a wife's employment might become a factor in the registrant's Selective Service status is in the computation of financial dependency," Hershey said, adding:

"This would seem to be a relatively unimportant matter since in a very substantial number of cases financial dependency is eliminated by the provisions of title 1 of the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act of 1942."

An International News Service dispatch from London last night said that women soon will be maintaining all British army motor vehicles up to three tons to relieve thousands of soldiers for front line duty. The women will be responsible for all army transport in the home service, excepting tanks, armored cars and heavy trucks.

WITH GOD'S HELP WE SHALL WIN THIS WAR

It will take more than the labor of our hands and the best thinking of our minds; we must bring the full strength of our souls before the altar of Almighty God if we are to win this war.

A MESSAGE TO OUR FELLOW AMERICANS IN A TIME OF SPIRITUAL CHALLENGE:

"In this time of crisis above all, none must forget his obligation to the good God," says

His Excellency, the Most Reverend Michael J. Curley,
The Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington

"In this present hour of dire need our Country has called upon every man and woman for patriotic service. The Nation has a right to such service. Thousands of our people from every part of the Country have answered this call and many of them are now engaged in conscientious work in our Nation's Capital. They are devoting themselves energetically to the task before them. They are in many instances making real sacrifices. But we must not lose sight of the fact that as a godly people we have not only to work, but we have also to pray.

"In this time of crisis above all, none must forget his obligation to the good God. There is not one of us that can afford to forego worship and prayer. With God's help victory shall be ours, but that victory will be hastened in the measure in which we recognize our need of God's help, of religion and of prayer. If this Country is worth fighting for, it is worth working for and by the same token it is worth praying for.

"I urge all to deepen their realization of our need as a nation for the protection, the light, and the help of Almighty God. Particularly, I urge our own Catholic people to be practical in living up to their conscientious obligations. I ask them to familiarize themselves with the hours of Masses and other services in their parish churches. I urge them to be faithful to their duty of Sunday Mass and frequently to approach the Sacraments. Let them give more time to meditation and to fervent prayer before Our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament. There we can ponder on our faults as individuals, yes, and even as a nation. We can examine closely into our lives and see wherein we have failed in our moral obligations. On our knees in church we can pray with a contrite and humble heart and beg of God to give us the strength to abide by His law and to do His will. There we may beg Him in all earnestness and sincerity to protect our men in the Armed Services, and there, too, we can the more effectively pour out our petitions for victory and for a just and honorable peace."

"Let us convert not only our factories but our souls," says

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld,
Minister of the Washington Hebrew Congregation

"A great duty falls upon every American in this hour. America must become the shrine of a great faith in the ultimate victory of God's righteousness.

"It is religion that created the rights of man. It is the tradition of faith that flowed from the vision and discipline of the God of justice and mercy revealed in the Law of Sinai that gave birth to our American democracy. It is by the spiritual strength we have derived from our religious tradition that men have had the staying power to labor thru the centuries for a better world. It is by new strength from the fountain of living waters of true religion that America will fulfill its mission of justice and kindness to the generations of free men still unborn.

"Let us convert not only our factories but our souls. It is only by the spiritual insight that will make clear to our generation that this war is not only a struggle for liberation but the result of God's retribution that we will win the war and the peace."

"Come to the churches and find there surcease from life's confusions," says

The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman,
Episcopal Bishop of Washington

" 'Then thought I to understand this, but it was too hard for me, until I went into the Sanctuary of God: then understood I.'

"This was the reflection of one who was confused and distracted by the stern and tragic events of life. Seeking an escape from his bewilderment, he sought the silence and peace of the Sanctuary of God and there the complex problems of life found their answer and solution. On my desk as I write is a thoughtful letter from a woman of refinement. In it she expresses what is common to most of us. She says: 'Life for me these difficult days has been so bewildering as the stern impacts of events strike against it.' She then goes on to speak of what the church and worship have come to mean to her, something they have never meant before. Her experience is, I believe, that of countless thousands of our people. Like the Psalmist they cry out: 'In the time of my trouble I sought the Lord.' Perhaps it may seem a cowardly impulse to turn to God when dark shadows are upon our pathway; we believe it to be a higher and nobler impulse. Someone has said that, 'he saw God in the tragedies of his life.' Why not? Religion and the devotional habit are intensified when material things and the orderly ways of life are threatened and imperilled. The very evidence of their instability, of the insecurity of things that seemed to have permanence, drives men to the consideration of life's deeper, more enduring values. World events, as we see them today, must have a sobering effect upon life and all its interests. Sokolsky put it in a striking way when he wrote: 'The works of man shrink into nothingness before the blazing image of God.' Yes, the church and all that it stands for must make an irresistible appeal to troubled men and women today The churches of every name in this city open wide their doors and extend their quieting, comforting, refreshing ministry to all our people. Come to them, and in them find a brief surcease from life's confusions and trials. Come to them and with neighbors and friends, forge the ties of a closer comradeship and pray earnestly for a better, more satisfying world. In them restore an impaired confidence and ease the burdens that, without a firm faith, are too heavy to be borne. If the home front is to make strong the battle front, the home front must be made strong through the comradeship of faith and worship."

Wakefield Fire

The first and almost instinctive reaction of most people when they read the accounts of the fire which raged through the Navy transport Wakefield as she was moving westward in an Atlantic convoy last week was that this was the work of saboteurs. Whether or not these suspicions are well founded the official investigation which has been ordered will doubtless reveal. The indications are, however, that the disaster, like so many others, was the product of carelessness. Indeed, one reporter on the scene hinted that the fire was probably caused by a lighted cigarette igniting inflammable material.

Whatever the cause, the consequences might have been disastrous. Had it not been for the fact that the sea was as smooth as glass, making it possible to remove all the passengers and crew to safe haven on other ships, many lives might have been lost. As it was, there were few casualties and the burned-out Wakefield (formerly the crack United States liner Manhattan) was towed into an Atlantic port where she may be made usable for sea transport duty again. The incident makes it clear how great is the necessity of eternal vigilance at sea. Every precaution must be taken. That such precaution is the general rule with respect to transports under the American Flag is seen in the fact that not one American life has so far been lost in the convoying of troops. Here is cause for prayerful congratulation. Here is also a reminder that care pays great dividends. In the case of the Wakefield, a careless flick of the wrist by a passenger disposing of a cigarette may have endangered the lives of 1600 men, women and children and deprived the Nation, possibly for many months, of the services of a vessel that is vitally needed in this period of heavy losses at sea.

France Versus Vichy

The passionate and audacious protest flung at Marshal Philippe Petain by Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies, and Jules Jeanneney, president of the French Senate, is proof enough that the Vichy regime is not now, if it ever was, in any sense a legitimate government. It is certainly not such a government in the sense, emphasized by the late Guglielmo Ferrero, that all legitimacy derives in the final analysis from the consent of the governed. Vichy governs, so far as it can govern at all, by coercion and repression and in the shadow of German guns thrown over the unoccupied zone.

Vichy is no longer, in Ferrero's terminology, even a "quasi-legitimate" government, for its authority is evidently not accepted or respected by any considerable element formerly represented on either the Right or the Left. The Deputy Pierre Mendes-France, now with the De Gaullist forces, has reported the complete disillusionment of even the most ardent friends of the Munich agreement. The most remarkable, and historically perhaps the most important, accomplishment of Vichy collaborationism has been on the negative side, that is to say in the unity of opposition it has excited. Herriot and Jeanneney are, of course, old-school Radical Socialists. But, according to reports from London, Laval, having been defied by Pierre Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyons, has been compelled to order the arrest of priests seeking to frustrate the inhuman manhunts of Jewish refugees in the unoccupied zone for delivery to Nazi authorities. Plainly, the French hierarchy considers this order of Vichy in contravention of a higher law and ipso facto illegal.

Technically, the legality of the Vichy regime rested upon the action of the French National Assembly in July, 1940, dissolving the Third Republic and authorizing M. Petain to frame the new constitution. The position of Herriot and Jeanneney apparently is that the authority thus delegated has now been withdrawn; that it was, in fact, abrogated by the marshal himself both in not convoking the legislature to ratify his constitution and in forbidding all national and local activity. At the same time Herriot and Jeanneney assert that the now illegal government has itself recognized the legality of the Parliament by ordering the removal of its permanent staff from Vichy to Chatelguyon. Finally, they warn that "if, despite your solemn engagements, you intend to deprive the nation of its right to decide for itself, freely, its definite regime, or if, without authorization of Parliament, you try to draw France into war against our Allies, which you yourself declared 'honor forbids,' we, by this letter protest in advance in the name of national sovereignty."

Obviously, this warning is intended primarily for Pierre Laval. But it is significant that it is to the no longer sacrosanct person of Petain that the protest is addressed. It is Petain whose illegal actions are attacked; it is Petain's right to be chef d'etat that has been challenged.

Rubber Report

The Baruch report on rubber comes like a clarifying light through a fog of confusion, bungling and inaction. It dispels all the befuddlement of conflicting statements and should likewise dispel all the wishful thinking of political-minded officials. It goes to the heart of the problem and finds a situation "so dangerous that unless corrective measures are taken immediately this country will face both a military and civilian collapse." And when the facts of our rubber shortage have been outlined in terse and unmistakable language, a simple and clear-cut remedy is prescribed.

We believe that the American people will face, without flinching or evasion, the unpleasant facts that the Baruch Committee has disclosed. They now know that our supply of crude rubber is far short of our actual military and other essential demands during this year and next; that the deficiency can be relieved only in part by the use of scrap rubber; that the production of synthetic rubber in large quantities cannot yet be relied upon to supply civilian requirements in the next two years. Now that the committee has spoken it seems amazing that we have waited for many months for the establishment of these obvious facts. Indeed, many observers, The Post included, took most of these facts for granted when the rubber controversy first got under way. But it has remained for an authoritative committee appointed by the President to cut through the fog of misstatement and conflicting advice that induced the country to continue wasting its rubber at a perilous rate.

Some of the committee's recommendations may be regarded as drastic. In other words, they are realistically adjusted to a critical situation. The committee rightly says that rubber is one of our chief weapons. At present we are wasting it with reckless abandon. That waste must stop. So the committee proposes Nation-wide rationing of gasoline to reduce travel to 5000 miles per year for the average car, with the elimination of nonessential driving. Several months ago we advocated such rationing as the only practical means of saving rubber on a large scale.

The proposed 35-mile-per-hour speed limit and the compulsory periodic inspection of tires are simple but effective suggestions that should meet with general approval. For that matter, the report should silence opposition to gasoline rationing also. For it attacks the rubber-shortage problem from the civilian as well as the military point of view. With the curtailment of rubber wastage, it advocates the release of more rubber for recapping of tires for essential civilian driving. Its sensible slogan is: "More rubber to those who need it; less to those who don't." No one can quarrel with that thesis in wartime.

And, by the same token, no one who is interested in winning the war can reasonably protest against the essential conservation measures which the Baruch Committee has outlined. They represent a comparatively minor sacrifice. The average American will be fortunate indeed if his contributions to this globe-circling war can be confined to harder work, higher taxes, more savings, and less gasoline for pleasure driving.

Rosh Hashanah

At sundown tonight all over the world—in some places secretly, in some places without fear—Jews will begin the observance of Rosh Hashanah. Tomorrow morning 30 long peals on the ram's horn, the sacred shofar, will be sounded by the high rabbis in signal of the time for prayer for the Jewish new year, 5703.

The history of the Jewish people has been a long tale of sadness. No people has had such a melancholy fate throughout the centuries. Yet their stoic idealism has kept the Jews alive despite the recurrent pogroms and persecutions which have decimated them time and time again.

Certainly at present the Jewish people are not alone in the struggle for survival which has been their eternal problem. This war against Hitlerism is the war of all the common people—Jews, Christians, Mohammedans, Confucianists, Buddhists. It is a war for the right of all men to worship God as they see fit. It is a war against slavery of the mind as much as it is a war against those who hate the very physical presence of peace-loving men.

In this war, therefore, the problem of the Jews has become the problem of every people. Never before has the case been so clear: It is either to be freedom on earth for all or bondage for everyone. No one will be spared if Nazism is triumphant. Long ago the German people themselves—Herrenvolk though they be—began to taste virtual slavery in the Gestapo-ridden Reich. All the conquered peoples have bitterly learned by the mass hostage killings of innocent compatriots what the New Order means in their ravished homelands. And we must add to this the mass murder at Rotterdam, the terrible vengeance at Lidice and the barbaric evacuation of Jews from their miserable havens to the ghastly ghetto that is Warsaw.

Yet despite the sad year which has just passed for the Jews and all mankind, the coming year, fortunately, offers much promise toward the restoration of decency for all men. Freedom's forces are gathering strength for an assault upon the slave masters. The crusade of the common people will surely win this greatest of all wars.

Silver Lining

Jerry Kluttz reports in The Federal Diary that the War Department is searching desperately for several thousand clerical assistants to man its recently established Allotment and Dependency Unit. Although very disturbing from the viewpoint of the War Department, it is not at all surprising to those familiar with housing conditions and living costs here to learn that Washington is no longer a job-seeker's mecca. Many disillusioned newcomers have discovered that jobs at home paying slightly less yield more in the way of creature comforts. In any case, a few dollars more is frequently found to be inadequate compensation for the hardships of sleeping in congested quarters and working in the midst of turmoil. The net result is an increasing unwillingness of the young to try their luck in the Nation's Capital and a consequent growing scarcity of essential clerical help.

Like most tales of hardship, this one has a silver lining, for it emphasizes the crying need for further decentralization of the Government's administrative agencies. Not all work performed by employes of the War and Navy Departments has to be done in the Nation's Capital. Certainly the unit set up in the War Department to make payments to dependents of men in the armed forces could function quite as efficiently, probably with more efficiency, in another city. Suggestions that the agency be moved to New York, for example, are well worth consideration. New York has empty office space that owners would be overjoyed to rent. It also has a serious unemployment problem and would welcome any Government agency offering work for idle residents.

Accelerated, albeit carefully planned, decentralization of the Government's executive agencies is an absolute necessity, since there is a definite physical limit to the number of people who can be decently housed, fed and put to work within any given geographical area. If those responsible for carrying out the decentralization program lack the imagination and the initiative to complete their task, a public boycott of Washington may provide the required stimulus to action.

Community War Fund

A striking indication of how welfare requirements expand in wartime is provided by the announcement that the Community War Fund will seek $4,141,000 from District contributors next month. This, of course, is a truly enormous total and one that will challenge the beneficence of the community. The nature of the fund, however, should be clearly understood. It covers both home-front and war-front welfare services. As regards the home front the fund is the successor of the Community Chest, for which something over two million dollars were subscribed last year for local needs in 1942. As might be expected when prices are rising and population is expanding, more money is needed to cover the requirements of nearly a hundred local welfare agencies. Consequently, the public will be asked next month to contribute about $2,500,000 dollars to these agencies for use in 1943.

In addition to such agencies, which have regularly been included in the Community Chest, there are now the various home-front war services here which depend on the public's financial support. And there are also eight United Nations war-relief agencies, established to aid war sufferers abroad.

The need, as we all recognize, was never greater, so it is not surprising that the over-all total is by far the largest in District history.

Our Planes

Your editorial in The Post's issue of the 4th is about the last straw anent the derogatory publicity of our warplanes and their performance. The only drawback is that there are not enough of them being flown in the face of the enemy. When they are, we will hear an entirely different story. The final clincher of all battles is the occupation of the enemy's territory and the destruction of his ground forces. A good marksman does not need a dozen guns to hit a target, but he does need a plane that can carry enough gas to keep him in the air for a period long enough to hunt out the enemy and enough ammunition to deliver the punch.

The British Spitfire is a good plane, yes, for just one thing—protection of the British Isle from invasion. It has a very short range because the designer has sacrificed gasoline capacity for altitude and armament. But please note it is still immobilized on the British Isles. The war will never be won by protecting the British Isles from invasion and bombing. If the Spitfires were used against German ground forces, they would meet plenty of German planes much below their vaunted altitude of 30,000 feet.

Both the Jap Zero and the FW-190 are high-flying featherweights. They will both come down when the Allied planes start to work on their ground forces. This race for altitude and armament is utterly silly. It is about time for the public press to let up on the idea. On the other hand, the press can perform a great service by demanding that more good, tough planes be produced and flown against the ground forces of the enemy.

If we have two planes to their one flying in the air we will get somewhere. Rivers of blood are running in Russia because they do not have enough planes in the air to attack the vast horde of German ground forces pouring over their territory. Instead of altitude they need time in the air. Instead of so many guns, they need more ammunition.

Poll Taxes In The South

Mr. Sullivan contends that the abolition of the poll tax by the Congress of the United States is an invasion of the constitutional right of the several States to determine qualifications for voting. Mr. Sullivan could easily have found out that during extended hearings in the House of Representatives and in the Senate over the past two years on the question of constitutionality of Federal anti-poll tax legislation not a single witness has appeared attacking either the constitutionality of the bill or its fundamental merit.

On the contrary, such distinguished constitutional authorities as Senator George Norris of Nebraska, Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, Professor Walton Hamilton of Yale University Law School, Professor J. J. Morrison of Tulane University Law School, and at least a dozen other professors of constitutional law at leading American universities have declared that the poll tax is not a qualification for voting. Moreover, Mr. Sullivan could have consulted the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in United States vs. Classic, which clearly establishes the right of Congress to enact legislation to prevent corruption in any form in Federal elections. This case gives Congress the right to prevent any State from making a mockery of the democratic right of franchise. Eminent witnesses, including leading white Southerners, have testified before congressional committees of the ugly corruption which attends Federal elections in poll-tax States through manipulation by corrupt politicians of thousands of "bought and paid for" poll-tax receipts which the individual voters never see and never use.

Mr. Sullivan attempts to minimize the payment of the poll tax as a barrier to voting and claims that it is a restriction of equal application to both Negro and white voters. These contentions brand him as ignorant both of history and economics. He need only read the history of the Virginia Constitutional Conventions and study the anti-Negro role of Carter Glass in those conventions to convince himself that the poll-tax laws frozen into State constitutions were openly and avowedly intended to prevent Negro citizens from voting. Thus his suggestion that the States themselves will remedy the situation is without merit because in the eight States which continue poll-tax requirements, the provision is a part of the State constitution, and thus is so deeply embedded in the law that it has been a simple thing to frustrate the will of Southern people to abolish the poll tax.

As to the economics of the poll-tax restriction, Mr. Sullivan's phrase "a small tax or fee of a dollar or so" becomes in fact a fee of $36 in the State of Georgia for many voters who are compelled to pay all back taxes charged against them from the age of 21 to the age of 45. In other States similar retroactive taxation makes the fee range from $1 to $24. For the millions of landless peasants of the South the fee of "a dollar or so" is an intolerable hardship because this fee represents a substantial portion of the cash income of individuals in this group. If Mr. Sullivan had sought the truth, he would have found that the actual effect of the poll tax is to disfranchise 10 million otherwise qualified voters in eight Southern States.

The greatest disservice rendered by Mr. Sullivan in this article is found in his suggestion that Negro leaders for selfish reasons are forgetting the grave war crises confronting America and seeking profit for the Negro people at the expense of America. This is a foul slander. Anti-poll-tax legislation is a war measure. It has the support of the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the railway brotherhoods, Southern Methodist Church Women, and scores of outstanding patriotic American organizations, Negro and white. These groups support the effort to abolish the poll tax with a clear understanding that its abolition will mean the heightening of the morale of 10 million voteless Negro and white Americans in the South. Mr. Sullivan might well have taken his own advice when asked to write about anti-poll-tax legislation and might well have admitted that he had "no worthwhile comment."

Steak Dinner

I ordered a cocktail. It was very good. While absorbing the drink I scanned the menu, particularly with reference to the 60-cent dinner, giving one a choice of entree, meats, vegetables and desserts. I tentatively decided on soup (nationality unknown), broiled minute steak, cole slaw, mashed potatoes, tea and ice cream. Before placing the order, however, I questioned my waitress regarding the adjective, "minute," modifying steak. I like steak. I asked her if the term had reference to the sixtieth part of an hour, or whether the diacritical mark (the menu had none) was to be placed over the last syllable, thereby changing both the pronunciation and the entire meaning of the word. She was twinklingly evasive but replied, "Well, it doesn't take long to prepare it, but it's good."

Soon after, having entered with the international soup, which wasn't bad, my benefactress brought on the piece de resistance with the trimmings. Depositing it before me she triumphantly declared, "There it is!"

Carefully polishing and adjusting my bifocals, I peered intently. Sure enough, hiding there behind a medium-sized chunk of French fried, coyly sat my broiled minute steak. It really wasn't a steak. It was merely a flake of steak. A moderately hungry baby Pekingese could have taken it in a gulp and passed his plate for more. To be quite fair the morsel was about 2¼ by 3½ by ⅛ inch.

I made three bites of it, filling in with French fries, cole slaw and mashed potatoes (small cone). It was all good, as my waitress had boasted, and the iced tea was excellent with two spoonfuls (shh) of sugar. So was the thimbleful of ice cream. I enjoyed the collation, but bought a supplementary sandwich elsewhere to further still the pangs of hunger.

Being somewhat analytical of mind, I have attempted to assemble the costs of my "steak" dinner and, herewith, submit my findings:

Old Chiefs' Pay

By now nearly all retired Navy chief petty officers have been recalled to active service. These men, the trusted old reliable standbys of the Navy, to the man returned willingly to service although some of them were pretty old and had by all standards earned their retirement.

Now others from the outside are given considerations such as commissions, allowances for clothing, etc., while the old chiefs remain in their old rates. It seems that their 30 years of honest service is being held against them. It is sad for an old chief who knows the Navy through and through to take orders from youngsters who up to a short time ago were grocery clerks, etc. Forgotten men they are indeed. Something should be done for them. It surely would help the morale of the whole service.

OLD SALTY.
Norfolk, Va., Sept. 5.

The Post Impressionist

Autograph Hunting

It started in the Old Country when everything was still peaceful, and nobody paid much attention to a man by the name of Hitler. Our childhood idol was Erich Kaestner, author of novels for youngsters; no superman adventures, mind you, but real novels. In this country Kaestner is also known, particularly to high-school students taking up German, who have to fight their way through Kaestner's "Emil and the Detectives."

One day our school stage had produced Kaestner's "Puenktchen and Anton," in which I played the little heroine's father. Our show was a success. Out of gratitude I wrote Kaestner a poem, telling him about my appreciation of the wonderful novel he had written which brought my classmates and myself such fame. In return for this contribution, Kaestner graciously presented me with an autographed copy of his book.

My next ambition was to get the autograph of Max Schmeling, the former stevedore and mild shadow of a Joe Louis. That was also before Schmeling was knocked out in the first round by the "Brown Bomber" and also before his "Fuehrer" made a parajumper out of him.

One beautiful Sunday morning my brother and I started out to visit Schmeling, who was furiously training with a couple of sparring partners. We had to stand in line for about an hour because some other youngsters had had the same bright idea. Herr Schmeling did a thriving business because he would sign only on picture postcards which he sold for 10 pfennigs each. It was obvious that the champ took his job seriously. His sparring partners had to take a lot of punishment and were on the floor more than once. They must have sighed with relief when the trainer announced that Schmeling would now sign autographs—after the crowd of signature hunters had taken on menacing proportions. Schmeling, dressed in his robe, stepped down from the ring with a broad grin. He had his gaudy, gold-rimmed fountain pen brought to him, and after he looked over the crowd of young admirers he sat down and began to sign.

The New World was in every respect a paradise on earth for that queer tribe, the autograph collectors of which I was one.

On a gloomy Easter Sunday afternoon in 1939 Marian Anderson was giving her great outdoor song recital in front of the Lincoln Memorial. A crowd had gathered which must have consisted of half of the Washington population (1938 census figures). I had "standing room," a choice location not far from the steps from which Marian Anderson was singing behind a barricade of microphones, dignitaries and park policemen. Having been busy taking pictures with my miniature camera, at the end of the concert I found myself near the singer. I took a good close-up picture and also wanted to get her autograph. With no avail, for the guards would not stand for that and were furious at this impertinence. That seemed to be a great disappointment. But the saint of the autograph hunters undoubtedly was with me that day, for there was the Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes. Nonchalantly I approached the Secretary—and got his autograph. Mr. Ickes was quite sympathetic and seemed to encourage me with my hobby after he had glanced at some of my previous conquests. Remarking that he was not supposed to hand out any signatures, he evidently was surprised to find himself in the same category with concert artists and boxers. His signature, I believe, is the only legible one in my entire collection.

I never specialized my hobby. The only requirement for a notability to enter his name into my little blue book was that I really knew him well enough. Alexander Kipnis, the singer, whose signature I had missed while still in Germany, finds himself in good company with Lawrence Tibbett, who is the most charming granter of autographs. Getting his signature was the only break I ever had at Constitution Hall, where the artists' quarters are as closely guarded as the vaults of the United States Treasury. To meet Mr. Tibbett is a treat in itself, for to him even the autograph collector is a gentleman. Into the same description fits the author of "History of Mankind," Hendrik Van Loon.

One signature which I treasure particularly is that of Paul Muni, whose performances in the movie pictures, "Louis Pasteur," "Emile Zola" and "Juarez," and the play, "Key Largo," made him one of my favorite actors.

By far the most successful "hunting" season was last winter's at the National Theater. Framed over my bed hangs the autographed picture of the impressive portrayers of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth, Maurice Evans and Judith Anderson. My prize possessions are the signatures of that unsurpassable quartet, Katharine Cornell, Raymond Massey, Burgess Meredith and Thomas Mitchell, all of whom starred in Shaw's "Candida."

There is one important refusal in my autograph-collecting career. When President Roosevelt returned to Washington from Hyde Park after he had been reelected for a third term I had the opportunity to take a good photograph of him. Shortly afterward my ambition for my hobby got the better of me. Before I knew it I had written a letter to President Roosevelt, asking him to autograph one of the pictures I had taken. Then something happened that could only have happened in a democratic country like America. I received a letter from the President's secretary saying that "during these critical days when it is so very important to conserve his time for urgent official duties it has been necessary to refrain from bringing to the President's attention the many requests for his signature." I felt quite a bit ashamed for having bothered the busiest man in the world with a trivial thing like an autograph.

But I have not given up hope. I am quite confident that, after victory has been won, I will step into the White House and say, "Mr. President, be kind enough—"

Congress Must Act

By Mark Sullivan

Fears Rise Of One-Man Rule

SULLIVAN

NO CONGRESS ever had a more imperative duty than the duty of the present Congress to act about inflation by October 1. It is not merely that failure would cause inflation. It is a matter of life or death for Congress itself, for the survival of legislative government in the United States. For if Congress does not act, then Congress will have failed to function. And it is failure to function that causes the death of legislative bodies.

The conditions in the present case are starkly clear.—There is on the books a provision of law, passed by Congress some time ago, which says that prices of farm crops shall be allowed to rise until they reach 110 per cent of parity or more. This provision, President Roosevelt asks Congress to repeal by October 1. And the President says that if Congress does not do this, he will disregard the law. He will by his own action bring about prices of farm crops lower than 110 per cent of parity.

If Congress does not act, and President Roosevelt takes the step he describes, his step will be popular. It will be popular because the people want lower prices for food, and in other respects want inflation checked. To most of the people it will not matter that the President will have acted in disregard of law; nor that he will have usurped some of the power of Congress. All that most of the people will see or care about will be a few easily grasped facts. They will say, in effect, "We want lower prices of food; Congress did not give them to us; the President is going to." It is this way that legislative bodies die, and are succeeded by one-man governments. Legislative bodies die because they fail to function. It is not that dictators kill legislative bodies—certainly not in the beginning. What happens is that legislative bodies fail to function. Because the legislative body fails to function, the people are irritated and in distress. Thereupon an individual says he will do what the legislative body has failed to do; and he does it.

AFTER SEVERAL instances of that, the legislative body loses popular respect. As the legislative body declines in popular respect, the individual rises in power. A time comes when the individual says the legislative body is an impediment. Then he destroys it. Or he sends it home, and tells it that it is not to meet again until he summons it. That is the process that has gone on in the European countries in which legislative government has been displaced by one-man government. Always the first cause is, failure of the legislative body—the parliament or Congress—to function.

It does not matter that in the present case in the United States, Congress is only partly to blame. True, Congress so far has failed to legislate in the interest of lower prices of food. But Congress took this attitude for a reason—because they saw the President unwilling to check rising wages for labor. Congress has seen the President again and again intervene to keep matters affecting labor within his control, and out of control of Congress. Over and over, when Congress started to legislate about labor, when indeed the House passed such legislation by votes of more than 2 to 1—in such cases the President has intervened and prevented legislative action, usually by appeal to Democratic leaders in the Senate. These leaders have a heavy responsibility for the crisis the country now faces.

If the country generally is not aware of the crisis, President Roosevelt is. He realizes the seriousness of the step he threatens. He says that he contemplates the step because of his "responsibility as President in time of war." He implies that he may take other extraordinary steps at his discretion: "I cannot tell what powers may have to be exercised in order to win this war."

FINALLY HE says his use of extraordinary powers will be only temporary: "When the war is won, the powers under which I act automatically return to the people—to whom they belong."

When Mr. Roosevelt says that, it is not necessary to question his sincerity. But it would be optimistic to assume the time will come when Mr. Roosevelt, or some successor, will not think there is occasion for extraordinary power. One emergency begets another. Extraordinary power exercised by one man is always quicker than legislative power evolved by debate. But it is not liberty, and it is not the American way.

It is critically urgent that Congress, by legislating about inflation before October 1, avoids the opening precedent for exercise by the President of powers contrary to the law as written.

All that Congress needs to do is simple. It has already given the executive power to put price ceilings over everything except crop prices and wages. Congress needs merely to wipe out the exceptions. It is possible, of course, for Congress to write a detailed measure specifying and limiting the President's powers.

G.O.P. Claims Big States

Martin Foresees Shift

Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin last night predicted his party definitely would carry the "big six" States—Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and California—in the November congressional, senatorial and gubernatorial elections.

His statement was based, he said, on a careful survey of the political situation in those States, which backed President Roosevelt for a third term in 1940.

Martin believed Republican victories would stem from general dissatisfaction with Washington's handling of the war effort and the feeling of a "prudent people" that the Nation will be "safer" with a strong minority party to balance the vast war powers now reposed in the President.

Expects Big Gains Nationally

"A careful survey of the entire country," he said, "leads me to the conclusion that the Republican Party will make very substantial gains in both the House and Senate in the 1942 elections.

"Particularly encouraging is evidence that the States of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and California will definitely go Republican."

He declined to prophesy whether the G. O. P. gains would be extensive enough to win control of the House. The Chamber is now divided—222 Democrats to 166 Republicans. The Republicans could win control by capturing 50 seats and holding their present ones.

The Senate is divided 65 to 29 but there is scant prospect of a shift there since many of the seats to be refilled are in the solidly Democratic South.

New York and California now have Democratic Governors and Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Ohio have Republican Governors whose terms are expiring. In California, Attorney General Earl Warren won the Republican gubernatorial nomination easily and polled a large Democratic vote against Gov. Culbert Olson, seeking renomination.

War's Course a Factor

"The course of the war between now and November will, of course, have some determination on the extent of these gains," Martin said. "There is a general feeling that the war effort is not being handled by Washington as efficiently as it might be. And there is a wiuespread belief that it will be safer to have a strong opposition party.

"The people realize that tremendous powers have necessarily been given the Administration for conduct of the war. They do want, like prudent people, to have some check on the exercise of these powers."

He observed that the G. O. P. is "pledged 100 per cent to support the war effort" and said the elections "should in no way interfere with this effort." He added, however, that the Nation was looking to the new Congress for "vigorous action to meet squarely the problems before the country."

Mr. Roosevelt still would have been elected for a third term in 1940 without the big six States by the narrow margin of 272 to 259 electoral votes. As it was he received 449 electoral votes to 82 for Wendell L. Willkie who carried Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Vermont.

War Taxation

By Ernest Minor Patterson

Taxes On Estates

The author is professor of economics, University of Pennsylvania; president American Academy of Political and Social Science, coauthor of books on international finance, contributor to economic periodicals.

IN THESE DAYS there is no reason for debating the general theory either of inheritance or of estate taxes. They are accepted methods of raising public revenues. Moreover, comments on any of the provisions of the bill now before Congress should in all fairness take into account (1) the confused Federal, State and local tax structure which cannot during an emergency be reorganized and simplified; (2) the pressing need for larger Federal tax revenues to meet growing expenditures; (3) the importance of capturing for the Government as much as possible of the increased national income in order to check inflation; (4) the desirability of doing nothing to check production of those commodities needed for the war effort, and (5) the political necessity of securing additional revenues in ways that will satisfy the general public that the levies are equitable.

This is a large order for Congress. The bill under consideration may increase the yield through estate and gift taxes from the present 500 million dollars to 800 million dollars, an addition of 60 per cent. Assuming a total Federal revenue of roughly 16 billion dollars for the fiscal year 1943, the present taxes would furnish about 2.8 per cent of the total, and the probable total, under the bill as passed by the House, would be about 4.4 per cent. The gain in yield is to come through raising rates and lowering exemptions. Minimum rates on estates are to be raised from the present 3 per cent on the first $5000 to 5 per cent; and the present maximum of 77 per cent on the excess over 10 million dollars is raised to 80 per cent on the excess over 5 million dollars. The estate tax general exemption of $40,000 and the insurance exemption of $40,000 are combined into a total exemption of $60,000.

Of course, there is opposition to the proposed changes, but there is always protest against increased taxes. Since it is impossible under present conditions to reorganize our tax structure, what may be said of the other tests suggested above?

Yield Is Small

Amount of yield. Expressed in terms of the total Federal revenue the extra amount to be secured—300 million dollars—seems small and it is even suggested that this should be secured instead by reducing nondefense expenditures.

But the need for revenue from all possible sources is so great that both methods should be employed. By all means, reduce nondefense expenditures in every proper way, but in addition secure this extra 300 million dollars if there are no more vital objections.

Check on inflation. National income is growing rapidly. The "inflationary gap" to be filled is a large one and 300 million dollars is relatively unimportant. As suggested above, even small amounts are not to be despised, since numerous small items may give a large aggregate when combined. But the amounts sought from this source would probably not be spent in ways that are inflationary. Speaking very broadly, these funds, if not taxed away, would remain in the hands of individuals who would probably reinvest most of the funds instead of spending them on consumption goods. In the present state of the investment market, a large part would go into Government bonds. No matter what may be said in favor of higher personal income taxes, especially in the middle and lower brackets, or in favor of a general sales tax as having an anti-inflationary effect, the same cannot be said of the estate tax. Other arguments must be found if it is to be favored.

A check on production. It is argued that higher estate taxes will have a disruptive effect on production. To the extent that this may be true, the argument is important. It properly concentrates attention upon production, or, worded otherwise, upon the flow of current national income as distinct from the aggregate of values or wealth. If the extra tax on large estates will indirectly reduce production to any significant extent, the yield of revenue will be an inadequate compensation.

Influence on Production

Will an increase in the estate tax (and gift tax) have a disrupting or retarding influence on production? Certainly not in a direct way. Such a tax does not destroy physical equipment. The heirs to the estate may be unable to meet the tax from liquid assets and hence be compelled to sell a considerable part of the property. That forced sales, especially in such times as the present, may have to be made at a sacrifice seems clear and there will accordingly be a loss to the heirs in addition to the higher tax. But this may or may not adversely affect the productivity of the property and hence the national income.

New owners may be less competent to manage the properties wisely than were their predecessors, but they may be more competent than were the former owners. Moreover, the argument assumes that there is a close connection between ownership and control, an assumption that is probably true in a small minority of cases since today ownership and control are so often divorced. Apparently, the most that can fairly be claimed is that heavy estate taxes may discourage the productive effort involved in building accumulations by men who are anxious to leave large fortunes to their children. At best, this is only a partial truth and besides its effect will be on future accumulations rather than on those that will be subject to the tax in the near future.

Is the tax equitable? There is no more difficult concept than the one expressed by "just" and "equitable." Such terms should be used, but objective standards of justice and right are not easy to find. In a democracy there must be a considerable popular support for tax measures, which means that no matter what some may think (or feel) about a given tax, it will be approved if large numbers of people think of it as equitable. That heavy estate taxes have this public support seems clear, even when critics point to the total combined burden of the Federal estate tax and the State inheritance taxes.

There is widely prevalent among business men and others the belief that capitalism as we have known it in recent years is under challenge. There are plenty of reasons for this view. Our economic institutions are always changing, but this is a period of unusually rapid change.

Those who wish to retain whatever they deem the essentials will do well not to oppose legislation which has as one of its purposes the reduction of extreme inequalities in the distribution of income. The transmission of large fortunes is under particularly vigorous attack, and the issues raised should be frankly faced. Heavier taxes on them may be expected, and it is better for conservatives to yield except where the case for their position is indubitably strong than to invite reprisals by more opposition.

The Once Over

Speech To Youth

"Young people of America and the world: you are groping for the truth . . . and who isn't? The youth of the world are puzzled as never before, but they are not as puzzled as their elders think. You have a feeling of being in the dark, but compared to what your elders are in it is a state of brilliant illumination.

"You don't believe that all the troubles of the last two decades were caused entirely by the fact a couple of G. O. P. candidates held office, that Wall Street was permitted to operate on traditional lines and that popper and mommer had a yen to make a lot of money. You know very well that human nature is human nature, that the urge to prosper is pretty general and that even a Democrat likes to have his name in the success magazines. You understand that there was terrific bungling during the last 20 or 25 years but that the record in the last 10 or 12 hasn't been phenomenal either. You realize that a fumble is not limited to any one political party and that no public leader ever played an errorless game.

"You know that in America the rich got too rich, the poor got too poor, the money combinations got too powerful, and that the country got pretty cockeyed, but you are smart enough to know, and fair enough to admit, that the get-rich-quick mania was pretty universal up to the big crash and that you aren't in the war today just because your father saw many people making big money and played some market tips, too.

"You are kids, but you are not dumbbells. You know that most of the evils, troubles and events leading up to this war were due to common errors, a lot of hypocrisy and no little slow-thinking. You know that nobody can guarantee that after this frightful war ends the human race will be so completely foolproof that there will be no mistakes made in running things from that point on.

Anxiety About India

By Ernest Lindley

Still Chance For Negotiation

LITTLE NEWS is coming out of India by normal channels. But the paucity of published matter does not mean that the Indian situation has markedly improved; it signifies, rather, a severe censorship. Actually, information reaching Washington from entirely reliable sources is causing anxiety.

LINDLEY

There is no sign of any further effort to compose internal political difficulties. The British now appear to be relying entirely on repression, and the British authorities in India express full confidence in their ability to smash Gandhi's campaign of civil disobedience. This campaign, according to informed sources, has not yet really begun, but it is supposed to be sprung soon in the leading cities of India. Spokesmen for the All-India Congress group boast that they will paralyze British authority within two months. Their ability to make good this boast is seriously doubted by independent observers. But as things are going now, relations between the Congress party group and the British authorities are becoming even more embittered.

The problem is a delicate one for the American Government. After the rejection of the Cripps proposal, American opinion, official and private alike, swung against the Congress party. It swung even more sharply with the revelation that Gandhi was against armed resistance to the Japanese and proposed to negotiate with them—although this was probably not quislingism, as it is understood in the West, but rather the expression of a religious fanatic's faith in the ability of nonviolent resistance to deprive an armed invader of the fruits of conquest.

THE ATTITUDE of the Congress party leaders has continued to be thoroughly exasperating and dangerous to the security of the United Nations as a whole, as well as to India itself. But it has not altered the American policy favoring self-government for all peoples who are able to exercise it—a policy to which Great Britain also is committed by the Atlantic Charter and the Declaration of United Nations, no matter what exceptions or mental reservations may have been noted by individual British statesmen.

If repression were now the only recourse, there would be no disposition to question the present British policy, regrettable as the necessity for it would be. But informed observers report that there is still a chance of composing the Indian political difficulties by negotiation. They doubt that negotiations could be carried through by the British and Congress party leaders alone, because the distrust of each for the other is now too deep. Friendly intercession probably would be necessary, by the United States and China.

It is believed that a number of the most influential Congress party leaders would now accept less than their previous demands. The reaction against them in the American press came as an unpleasant surprise. There was a danger that the effect would be to turn the Congress party leaders quite as bitterly against the United States as against Great Britain and, in the hands of persistent propagandists, to create the impression that the white peoples of the United Nations were joining hands in a policy of repression. This danger was alleviated by the President's announcement that American troops were in India only to fight the Axis and the instructions to them to hold aloof from internal affairs. But the danger has not been entirely removed and perhaps can be eradicated only if another effort is made to settle Indian internal political difficulties by negotiation.

VARIOUS unofficial proposals have been made for the establishment of a provisional Indian government, giving equal representation on the Viceroy's Council to the Congress party and the Moslem League, with representation also for the Indian princes and dissenting sects and independent groups. Competent persons who have been exploring the problem believe that the possibility of an agreement is greater than the British authorities in India admit or perhaps realize. In fact, there are disquieting signs that some of the latter intend to use the present opportunity to break the power of the Congress party, with the hope of retaining India on a colonial or semicolonial basis. This is certainly not the view of forward-looking Englishmen, and is in direct conflict with the solemnly avowed postwar program of the United Nations and with the policy of the British government as expressed in the Cripps proposal.

The present situation in India is, of course, causing as much anxiety in Chungking as in Washington. Supplies for China go by air from India. The reopening of a major supply line to China will require the reconquest of Burma with forces based on India.

Chungking is understood to favor strongly another attempt to negotiate a settlement in India. Like Washington, it is restrained by the desire to avoid embarrassment to Great Britain. But the Indian situation is a purely British affair only in a legalistic sense. Actually, it is of prime importance to China and the United States and to the United Nations as a whole. If, as competent and well-informed non-British and non-Indian observers believe, there is still a chance for a negotiated settlement, it would seem the merest common sense to make the attempt.

The Gallup Poll

Public Opposes Requiring Workers Mobilized By Government for War Jobs to Join Unions

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 10.—The American public has been ready for at least six months to accept a manpower mobilization program for war industries. But it does not believe that workers thus mobilized by the government should be required to join labor unions.

On the contrary, when a nonunion worker takes a job in a factory at the order of the government, the public thinks he should be able to go to work without joining a union.

The question is one of the most ticklish and controversial problems facing the War Manpower Commission. As war production mounts, millions of additional workers must be found to man the machines. At present only about one-fourth to one-third of all the workers in the country are unionized.

The basic issue is whether the Wagner Labor Act should be construed to apply to workers who are mobilized into war industries by government order, rather than voluntarily.

The question of labor unions in the manpower mobilization program was placed before the country by the Institute in the following form:

"At the present time, workers who take jobs in some war factories that have unions must join the union before they can start work. Do you think that workers who start to work in a factory because the Government has told them to, should have to join the union or should they be able to go to work without joining the union?"

The public's attitude is shown in the following vote:

Should be made to join union	17%
Should not have to join	76
No opinion	7

It is reported from Washington that work has begun on a manpower mobilization bill to be submitted to Congress sometime after the fall elections.

An institute survey conducted last March found the country voting about 2 to 1 in favor of such a mobilization program at that time.

Today's vote on the labor union aspect of the issue does not mean that the country is opposed to labor unions as such.

In fact, every public opinion survey on unions in the past six years has found the country favoring the principle of labor unionism by majorities of better than 2 to 1.

The public is, however, critical of certain practices in the labor union movement.

By and large the surveys have shown that what the public objects to chiefly in the union movement is coercion, or attempts at coercion.

The majority feel that a worker should be free to join a union, or to refrain from joining, as he chooses—that he should not be coerced into joining.

Yanks In India: How They Fight And Frolic

By William McGaffin

Wide World Staff Writer

New Delhi, India, Sept. 10.—The American Air Force in India and its complementary services are concentrated today on the job of expansion since the first contingent began operations in April with an attack on Japanese warships invading the Bay of Bengal. They have been following this up in succeeding months with sorties over occupied Burma.

The second job fell to the ferrying command with a hazardous aerial evacuation of Burma which was carried out with great gallantry and efficiency under the leadership of Col. Caleb Haynes, now commanding the American bomber task force in China.

With the R. A. F., they brought out 8000 military and civil evacuees, and when the Burma Road was closed the ferrying command inherited the job of flying to China.

Americans have done a remarkable job of working in this adverse climate where dust is death on engines and where birds build nests overnight in vital parts of airplanes; where dust storms sweep airports and heat jars the tempers of both men and machines.

Among the various posts, Delhi is considered the best because of the comfortable hotel quarters and new barracks where food is good and a man can have his own personal servant if he wishes to pay a small monthly cost. Harbor City probably has the worst living conditions; there men must live in rough concrete barracks in the middle of the desert far from town, and they glimpse civilization only on short leaves three times a week.

The barracks are lantern lit and the dust seeps in so thickly that one young cynic said, "You need a shovel to dig yourself out of bed in the morning."

American canned goods constitute the fain diet, and the kitchens are run by American Army cooks. The laundry, however, is done by Indian Dhobis who beat the clothes on a rock in the river instead of using soap. When Mark Twain first saw this method of washing he remarked, "This is the first time I ever saw a man trying to break a rock with a shirt." But it is the buttons and not the rocks that break. The British army early learned its lesson and now uses rubber buttons on its uniforms.

The American soldiers have a good time three nights a week when they go to town in buses. Sometimes they dine at a hotel, then go to a ballroom to dance to American music played by an English orchestra. They generally go stag, pairing up with English girls who are there. Malayan and Burmese refugee girls also are popular. There is a peroxide blonde from Burma who is popular and she vies with American nurses who sometimes go to the dances.

The soldiers also go to the cinemas, which show 2- to 5-year-old American pictures that frequently have breaks of 15-minute interval just as the story is getting interesting.

An average evening in town costs a soldier about $8, including drinks.

The Americans frankly admit they are not in love with this distant land with its cruel climate, but the boys are cheerful and have grand morale.

Illinois Democrats Envision Great Postwar Alliance

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 10.—pledging support of a postwar alliance of democracies powerful enough to maintain international peace, Illinois Democrats adopted a platform by acclamation today at the party's biennial State convention.

"To the liberty loving people everywhere in the world we pledge ourselves and our candidates to oppose the making of any peace before the United Nations and the temporarily conquered peoples of the earth shall achieve complete victory, and further, that the peace shall be protected through some international agency sufficiently powerful to insure it perpetually," said the platform's key plank on war and peace.

Both in the platform and in a telegram addressed to President Roosevelt, convention delegates gave an all-out indorsement of the President's conduct of the war program, praised Wendell Willkie for "unselfish, patriotic support" of Mr. Roosevelt, and charged Illinois Republican leaders were "partisan obstructionists" of the war effort and "conscious and unconscious tools" of the Axis leaders.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The pappy of the T-formation was utterly calm yesterday in the face of a ragged workout by the Chicago Bears on the beautiful back lot of Maryland University. George Halas simply stood by reflectively as the Bears fumbled passes, muffed signals and generally butched their assignments.

POVICH

"No use getting excited," he said. "They'll get disgusted with themselves pretty soon, and then everything will be all right. They're pretty smart boys. They know they're not fooling me or themselves. This thing happens sort of regularly. They always snap out of it."

Halas is no fire-eater. At least not every day. He has a healthy respect for the intelligence of his football players. "I can't give 'em that whoop-'em-up stuff all the time," he says. "They'd know it was phony. When the big games come up, that's different. I can get a little bit tough, then. We started practice around the first of August. I'd have myself and the whole squad crazy if I tried to keep 'em fired up for four whole months. These little let-downs don't hurt 'em."

Scouted O'Rourke in Newsreels

The Bears play the Washington (B'ar Meat) Redskins Sunday at Griffith Stadium, and Halas is a mite curious about what will happen in that game. Most of his curiosity is centered around one of his new quarterbacks, tow-headed, beak-faced Charlie O'Rourke, the boy from Boston College who is Halas' own candidate for immortality with the Bears.

Halas plucked O'Rourke out of high school coaching ranks because he visioned the lad as a born quarterback for the Bears. "I never saw him play in college," Halas confessed, "but I rented every football newsreel that showed O'Rourke playing as much as 30 seconds. He struck me as a boy who would fit in nicely in our T-formation where a quarterback has to do more things with a football than any other player on any other club."

The kicking-passing-running O'Rourke didn't accept the Bears' offer to join them last year after he graduated from Boston College. He took a high school coaching job, instead. "I had to talk serious business with him," says Halas. "He saw the point when I told him coaching high school football wasn't getting him anywhere. A few years with us, and he could be a college coach, the way college teams are going for our fellows who know the T-formation. O'Rourke's a pretty smart boy, so he signed."

Nolting, Too, Moves to Quarterback

Association seems to do wonders for a man, incidentally. O'Rourke, a 158-pound stripling from Boston College, has started to grow up to the Bears. He no longer looks like a skeletonized version of the thin man. He's a 173-pounder these days, and that added weight won't hurt him.

"I liked him because those newsreels showed me he could handle a football," said Halas. "That's what makes the T-formation go, our quarterback. Look at Luckman. I know all our plays, but he fools me some of the time with those double passes. O'Rourke is a tricky kid, too. He's a little bit cocky, but that's all right. Quarterback in the T-formation is no place for a shrinking violet. There's only one other man in this league I'd like to have as one of my quarterbacks. Sammy Baugh would be wonderful."

The emphasis that Halas places on an intelligent quarterback is illustrated by his promotion of Ray Nolting, veteran halfback, to one of the quarterback jobs. The Bears lost two quarterbacks, Bob Snyder and Young Bussey, and Halas didn't look around much, beyond O'Rourke. He had Nolting, a man who knows all their plays, which is important.

Leahy Shelves Rockne System

Halas says he doesn't mind other clubs appropriating the T-formation. "There's enough plays off the 'T' for everybody. That's one of the beauties of it. The number of plays are limited only by your quarterback's intelligence and ability to handle the ball. If the T-formation was a great big phony, it would still be wonderful, because look at all the publicity it's gotten us.

But the 'T' is great stuff. It makes for better football and the fans love it. They see wide-open stuff, and tricks, and they like football better. And that's a lot of hooey about needing certain kind of backs to make the T-formation go. If your backs are a little bit slow, move 'em up a foot or so close to the line to give 'em that extra jump. I'd still use the T-formation if I took over a squad I'd never seen before. It figures to win. The man-in-motion business that you can work off the T has revolutioned football."

Halas cited one trump argument. "Look at Frank Leahy, at Notre Dame. In 1940 at Boston College he had an unbeaten season. Last year at Notre Dame he had another unbeaten season. This year he's junking his whole Notre Dame system, and installing the 'T'. That speaks pretty well for the T-formation. Leahy has to be a daring young man to shelve Rockne football and hold a job at South Bend."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 10.—"Of course, we think we can win," snapped Billy Southworth, manager of the Cards, as he awaited the opening of the kee-rooshial 2-game series against the Dodgers.

CONSIDINE

"We've beaten every club in the league more than they've beaten us, and that goes for Brooklyn, too," the doughty pilot of the hot contenders continued. "Brooklyn is leading us in the league standings because they've had better records against some of the tail-enders. We don't worry about that.

"Some people think it must affect our boys to look back and think of losing games to the Braves and Phils earlier in the year—and how important those lost games now are. But we say to hell with that. We're taking each game as it comes along, with no backward glances."

Naturally, Mr. S. is going to lead with his ace when the Cards move into Ebbets Field for the most important series of the season.

"Mort Cooper's in fine shape, and he's our man," Bill said, not without a trace of paternal pride. "I think it's remarkable how that fellow has come back. After the all-star game he could win only once in six weeks. I don't want to lay the blame on the all-star game, but I guess that was the trouble. He wasn't warmed up just right and the first fellow hit a home run off him. Naturally, he bore down in too much of a hurry.

"Anyway, he's back in form. He's got a remarkable record, for a fellow who practically missed six weeks. He's going for number 20 in the first game of the Brooklyn series. I don't know much about the second game, yet, but I guess it'll be either Beazley or Lanier. Beazley's after his twentieth win, too.

"We won't have any excuses, if we blow our chance," Southworth stated flatly. "We're in pretty good physical condition, as ball clubs go. Of course, we miss Ernie White and Marion's foot could be better. But, on the whole, we're okay physically. We kept our spirit going good even when we were losing games we should've won. Our boys know they've beaten Brooklyn more times than they've beaten us, and they intend to keep it up. They're not bothered about Buck Newsom. He's just another Brooklyn pitcher to our boys."

The announcement, at long last, that Joe Louis and Billy Conn would fight again, came at a time when the pulse of the sports world was close to zero.

We thought the nadir had been reached just 24 hours before the announcement. The saintly Times appeared that morning with a streamer which read:

"Ch, Che Le of Matson's Catawba victor in Danbury Show."

Like a man drawn by nature to a scene his intellect shrank from, we plunged into the story. Champion Che Le of Matson's Catawba, or Duck, as his few intimates call him, is a Pekingese. He had just won a ribbon or a bone or something at Danbury, Conn.

We thought this was the end. The golden age of sport, which began just after World War I, was certainly herewith ending on a distressing note. The age that began with a bristly, broken-nosed Dempsey was ending with an implacable, needle-nose peke. It all seemed drearily symbolic.

Then, like a flash, came the flash about Louis and Conn. Great stuff. By unanimous consent, the boys decided it would be a sell-out. Let's sell the tickets first. This could be and should be the biggest fight ever held in New York.

We think the Army insured the ardor of the fight itself by promoting Louis to sergeant. When Private Conn comes out of his corner, on the afternoon of October 12 at the Yankee stadium, he'll have a thousand years of privates' antagonism for sergeants behind him.

Terror Eleven In Hard Drills

Westminster, Md., Sept. 10 (AP).—Western Maryland College football team went through two tough workouts here today, including the first scrimmage of the season.

During the morning session, Terror Mentor Leroy Byham concentrated on blocking and tackling in addition to regular conditioning drills, but in the afternoon actual contact work began.

Manny Kaplan and Tom Terry, two veterans, showed up well, as was expected, while Henry Ferris and Bob Frazier, both freshmen, showed flashes of skill in the scrimmage. All four are backs.

Surging Cards Beat Giants, 5-1, Cut Flock Lead to 2 Games as Brooklyn Loses, 10-2

Howie Pollet Serves Up Four-Hitter

Confident Cards Ready for Crucial Series With Flock Today in Brooklyn

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 10.—With the help of a "crooshal" error charged against a fielder for doing the right thing, the St. Louis Cardinals clouted the Giants, 5 to 1, today to breathe even more fiercely down the necks of the Dodgers in the roaring National League pennant race.

With Brooklyn losing to Chicago, the Cards moved up to within two games of the pace-setters through their own victory, in which young Howie Pollet, the southpaw who always finds his "cousins" in the Giant line-up, served up a four-hitter.

And as they danced into their clubhouse, the St. Louis lads were more confident than ever that they'd make up the difference between them and the top in the two-game series with the Dodgers tomorrow and Saturday.

Score Three in First

Today's outing enabled them to get in some good preliminary licks. They pushed over three runs on Hal Schumacher in the first inning, largely through that unusual "error," added another on a pair of hits in the fifth and wound up their run-making when Terry Moore smashed his fifth homer of the year onto the left field roof in the eighth.

Meantime, Pollet was having the time of his life chalking up his sixth victory of the year. From the first frame, when the New Yorkers connected for two of their safeties, until Mel Ott poked his twenty-seventh round-tripper in the seventh, not a man got on base.

The first inning saw all the fuss and fireworks and peculiar antics. Jimmy Brown walked and Terry More scratched a hit down the third base line. Eros Slaughter then poked a single into right, scoring Brown.

Ott fielded the ball and threw to third—the proper play with two runners on base. However, Thirdsacker Bartell had run in to back up any play at the plate, and the bag was unprotected, so Ott's heave rolled all the way to the box seats, and Moore came home and Slaughter went all the way to third.

No Fault of Ott's

The misplay had to be charged against Mel for throwing to an open base, although it was no fault of his that neither Bartell nor Shortstop Bill Jurges covered the bag.

Later Slaughter came home on Walker Cooper's fly, to finish up the rally that gave the Cards enough to win right there.

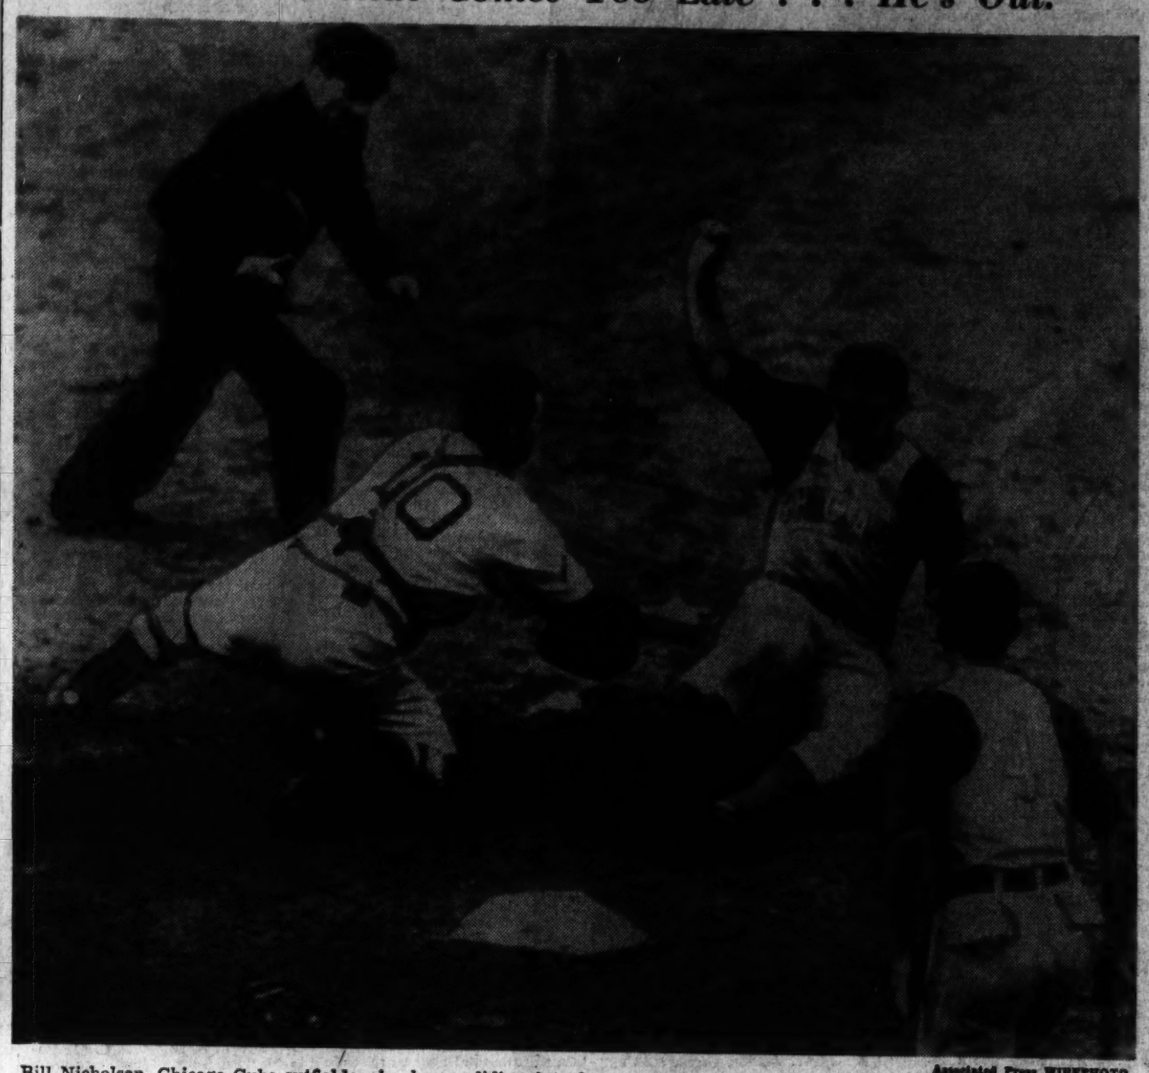
Nicholson's Slide Comes Too Late . . . He's Out!



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Bill Nicholson, Chicago Cubs outfielder, is shown sliding into home plate in yesterday's ninth inning in game with the Dodgers, but he's out on a tag by Catcher Mickey Owen. Nicholson, who was on second when Owen threw wild past third base, advanced when Jimmy Foxx raced home. Nicholson then attempted to score behind Foxx, but was cut down by Joe Medwick's peg. Cubs routed the Dodgers, 10 to 2.

Zivic Easily Wins Decision Over Cochrane

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 10.—Fritzie Zivic tonight gave Red Cochrane the beating he'd been promising him for a year and easily won a 10-round decision over the welterweight champion in Madison Square Garden in a bout that was a nontitle tussle by a mere quarter of a pound. Zivic weighed 147¼; Cochrane, 146.

Finally getting the revenge for which he's been "eating his heart out" ever since the Jersey red-head took the 147-pound crown from him a year ago last July, Fritzie handed Red a guady boxing lesson, puffed his face up with knife-like punches and won going away in a rough and tumble brawl that had a near-full house hopping to its feet time after time.

On the Associated Press score card, the flat-nosed Pittsburgh beauty won eight rounds against two for Freddie the Red, who came out of the Navy to take on this bout for the benefit of the USO and goes from here directly to active sea duty.

Two rounds were taken away from Cochrane by Referee Arthur Donovan for fouls, but one of these Fritzie won by a mile, anyway.

Willie Pep, latest of the long line of featherweight "sensations" to come out of Hartford, Conn., ran his fistic winning streak to 49 straight tonight by stopping Frank Franconeri in the first round of the semiwindup. Pep weighed 130; Franconeri 125.

Pep floored the Bayonne, N. J., youngster once for a count of nine, another time for a count of four. And, when Franconeri went down the third time, Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the bout at 2:07 of the round.

Joey Varoff, 137¾, New York, outpointed Ernie Petrone, 139, Philadelphia, in a six-rounder, and Walter Stevens, 136, Newark, N. J., did the same to Joey Manfro, 141, New York, in four rounds.

Galehouse Shuts Out Yanks, 9-0, for Browns

3-Hit Effort Accounts for 4th N. Y. Goose Egg; Breuer Is Beaten

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 10.—The Browns subjected the pennant-bound New York Yankees to their most humiliating defeat of the season today, shutting them out, 9 to 0, behind the three-hit pitching of the veteran Denny Galehouse.

It was only the fourth time the Yanks had been whitwashed this season and the other three were 1-0 affairs. It also was the third time Marvin Breuer, who suffered his ninth defeat on the hill, had lost by a shutout.

Walt Judnich, the Brownies' big center fielder, supplied the punch to make it a decisive victory. He socked two home runs, one in the first inning and one in the sixth, with Chet Laabs on base each time. He also drew a pass in the fourth and scored on George McQuinn's single and an infield out, and drove in still another tally with a single behind a pair of passes off Lefty Marius Russo in the seventh.

The game wound up the season's affairs between the clubs with the Yanks taking 15 of 22 games. As the second-place Boston Red Sox also lost, the Yankees held their 10-game advantage with 14 games to play.

Terps Please Coach in First Light Work

By the Associated Press

Greatly pleased over the progress his Maryland footballers have made in their first eight days of drilling in plays and fundamentals, Head Coach Clark Shaughnessy today planned to send them through the first scrimmage session of the season tomorrow or Saturday.

Shaughnessy hoped the rough work would unearth some badly needed reserve linesmen.

Shaughnessy professed no liking for "killing off" his players in scrimmaging among themselves and indicated he would hold only three or four such sessions prior to the opening of the season and none after the campaign started.

The "T" system, he explained, didn't call for crushing blocking. This fact, plus the challenging trickiness of the "T" system have made it 100 per cent popular with the Old Liners.

Jack Hufman, soph end who nursed an injured ankle for several days, has returned to the squad.

Yankees' Red Rolfe to Coach at Yale

New York Star To Handle Baseball And Basketball

By the Associated Press

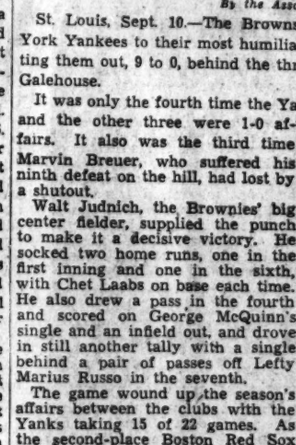
New Haven, Conn., Sept. 10.—Big Robert (Red) Rolfe, slugging third baseman of the world's champion New York Yanks and, at 33, veteran of five World Series, is Yale's new baseball and basketball coach.

Ogden Miller, athletic director of the university, announced Rolfe's acquisition tonight. He did not disclose terms of the contract beyond the fact that Rolfe now apparently headed for participation in his sixth championship series with the surging Yanks, would not be required to report here until November 1.

As diamond coach Rolfe will succeed "Smoky Joe" Wood, one-time Red Sox pitching ace, who was dismissed last spring after 19 years service. As basketball mentor, he replaces Capt. Ken Loeffler, U. S. A., now in charge of physical training at Roswell Field, N. Mex.

Rolfe, a native of Penacook, N. H., starred at Dartmouth in the two sports he will coach at Yale, captaining the baseball team in his senior year.

Signed by the New York Yankees upon graduation in 1931, he was farmed out first to Albany in the Eastern League and subsequently to Newark where, in 1933, he was elected most valuable player in the International League.



RED ROLFE

Since August, 1934, he has held down the Yankee third sack with conspicuous success. Recently he has been troubled by a persistent ailment but, despite this, he has usually been first on the field for the Yanks and the last to leave.

Of him Manager Joe McCarthy has often said: "He's a real ball player, sick or well."

And today Miller said: "I am tickled about getting Rolfe and I'm looking forward with real enthusiasm to his coming to Yale."

Yale has done only fairly well in baseball and basketball in recent years but one of the more important reasons Wood was let go was that, in a period of wartime retrenchment, the university regarded it as important that its coaches be prepared to help out in other sports and Smoky Joe was essentially a baseball man.

Today's announcement virtually completed the realignment of major sports coaching arrangments at Yale, which started with the resignation of Dr. Emerson (Spike) Nelson early in the year and his replacement by Howie Odell as head football coach. Other coaches to go included those of tennis and golf while those who remained were given augmente dduties.

Lon Warneke Bests Higbe As Cubs Win

Casey, French And Allen Pitch For Brooklyn; Vaughan Homers

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 10.—The beleaguered Brooklyn Dodgers had their minds so full of the series starting tomorrow with the St. Louis Cardinals that they overlooked the necessity of beating the Chicago Cubs today.

Consequently the Cubs romped to a 10-to-2 decision that was as costly as it was humiliating, since the Cards captured a 5-to-1 verdict over the New York Giants and moved within two games of the National League leaders.

While a crowd of 6271 looked on, the Cubs took charge of the contest with three runs in each of the first two innings, and old Lon Warneke never let the game get away from him.

Kirby Higbe, who had not lost to the Cubs all season, started on the mound for Brooklyn. He walked the first man he faced, Stan Hack, and Phil Cavaretta followed with a run-scoring double to left center. Bill Nicholson grounded out and Cavaretta advanced to third. When Higbe got a count of two balls and one strike on Dom Dallessandro, time was called by Chicago to insert a runner for Cavaretta, who had an injured leg, and Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers decided this was as good a time as any to change pitchers.

Casey Relieves

Hugh Casey came to the mound and served singles to Lou Novikoff, Chico Hernandez and Lou Stringer for two more runs before ending the inning. After fanning Warneke to open the second, he walked Hack and gave a single to Jimmie Foxx—bringing another switch in Brooklyn pitchers.

This time Lefty Larry French was called in and immediately hit Nicholson with a pitch to load the bases and all runners scored as Dallessandro hit a long fly for one tally and Novikoff tripled for two.

French also was the victim of Nicholson's twentieth home run in the fourth and of a run in the eighth when Hernandez singled, was sacrificed to second and raced home on a double by Len Merullo.

Allen Nicked For 2 Runs

Finally Johnny Allen came on the scene in the ninth and gave two more runs. The Cubs loaded the bases on a single by Hack, a double by Foxx and an intentional walk to Nicholson, a long fly by Dallessandro was good for one run and Foxx lumbered home with the other when Catcher Mickey Owen threw wild trying to pick him off third after Charley Gilbert fanned.

A two-run homer by Arky Vaughan in the third accounted for all Brooklyn's scoring. It was one of eight hits allowed by Warneke in the course of attaining his eleventh triumph. The defeat was also Higbe's eleventh.

Nats Break Even; Beat Chisox in 2d

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 10.—The emptiness of vast stretches of unpeopled stands wasn't the only thing that haunted the White Sox tonight. Bruce Campbell, an old ghost, came back to spook 'em, too.

Before hardly any people at all, which probably is exaggerating the crowd at that, the Pullman, Ill., veteran stepped up with two out and the bases loaded and the Senators a run behind in the eighth inning of tonight's game and singled in the two runs that gave the Washingtonians a 5-4 victory and an even break on the day.

Ted Lyons beat them, 7-1, on seven hits in the twilight portion of what the fans, who proved to be critics at heart, didn't think was a bargain bill.

Bill Zuber went the route for the victory in the nightcap, though he walked eight, including four in a three-run Sox fourth inning.

The paid attendance of 2581 was by far the lowest to see a night bill here in the four seasons Chicago has had electric light ball. Even the worst-drawing single game had drawn more than twice as many.

3 Doubles Hit

The Senators led off three of the first four innings in the nightcap with doubles off Humphries—by Case, Early and Vernon—but were able to cash only one of them. Sullivan sacrificed Early to third in the second frame and Clary's single scored him.

Although evidencing lack of control right from the start, Zuber managed to protect the slim lead until the fourth when he walked the first three batters he saw. Then he closed his eyes and there was a force-out at the plate. The next grounder, however, meant a run. Dickey singled in another and after Humphries single refilled the bases, Zuber walked home a third run.

Kolloway's giving the go-by to Sullivan's inning-ending grounder in the sixth provided entree for the Senator's two tying runs. Estalella, who had hit the fourth inning opening double, scored and Sullivan took second on the error. Sullivan then scored on Clary's second single.

Bailey and Ed Ault Win in District Amateur Golf Upsets

Page Hufty, Nolan Take Two Matches

Burnett and Wenzel Lose in Surprises; Nolan's Golf Best At Congressional

By Merrell W. Whistlesey

Two surprise contenders moved into the semifinals of the District Amateur Championship yesterday at Congressional Country Club along with the form players' favorites, M. Parker Nolan of the host club and Page Hufty of Burning Tree.

Bill Bailey, a 20-year-old junior at the University of Pennsylvania, playing in his first city championship and Eddie Ault, who upset his golfing buddy, Veiney Burnett, in the quarter-finals are the new faces.

In this morning's semifinals Bailey, who has been a junior member of Kenwood since he was 12 years old but who played most of his golf at Rock Creek, will meet Hufty, a four-time champion of the host club from 1927 through '32.

The lower bracket match to decide the other finalist for the afternoon's title round will be between Nolan, playing his best golf of the summer after a long layoff and Ault, an ex-minor league ball player who has been a good amateur golfer for quite a while with limited time for tournament play.

Runner-up to Bogart

Nolan, the husky host club shotmaker who was runner-up to Bogart last year at Kenwood in the city amateur finals played the best golf of the day. In his morning match against W. B. Hankin, of Kenwood, Nolan had a double-bogey six on his out nine card and still played the par 37 layout in 38 strokes. He was even par for the distance, winning, 6 and 4. Against Joe Wilson in the quarter-finals Nolan's putter was his favorite club as he blasted the Kenwood representative out of the tournament, 4 and 3, with one-over par golf.

Hufty, a surprise entry in the championship due to little competitive golf for the past several years, gave Kenwood's Don Pollock and schoolboy champ, Art Myers, what the boys call short hauls.

Hufty was one over par going out and one under par as long as the match lasted on the back nine as he defeated Pollock, 5 and 4, in the first round and in the afternoon the one-time North-South champion walked in from the thirteenth after handing Myers a 7 and 5 defeat.

Good Putting Decisive

Bailey ended Medalist Bill Wenzel's dreams in the first round with a putting exhibition which conquered his Kenwood clubmate, 2 and 1, and in the afternoon he beat Billy Griffin of Roosevelt High's golf team, 3 and 2.

Ault, after beating John Brookes of Burning Tree, 3 and 4, in the first round turned on Burnett, his conqueror last Monday in the Hot Springs Invitation, and won, 2 up. Burnett was 2 up at one time but Ault evened the match at the turn. They divided the first four holes of the back nine but Ault won the fourteenth with a par three, halved the next three and then dropped a 15-foot birdie putt on the eighteenth and Burnett was denied a crack at his putt which he hoped would square the match.

Burnett birdied the eighteenth hole in the morning to halve Martin McCarthy's birdie 3 and send the match into extra holes, Burnett winning with a par on the twentieth.

This afternoon's finals start at 1:15.

Tigers Rally To Top Bosox, 5-4, in Finale

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 10.—The Detroit Tigers pushed over two runs in the eighth inning to nullify home runs by Ted Williams and Dom DiMaggio and defeat the Boston Red Sox today, 5 to 4, in the final meeting between the clubs this season. Boston won 15 of the 22 games.

Singles by Rookie Johnny Lipon and Roger Cramer, an error by Bobby Doerr and an infield out gave Detroit its winning runs. The Tigers had registered three runs in the first inning on a walk, three successive singles and a double play.

Williams hit his thirty-first homer of the season in the third inning and DiMaggio got his fourteenth in the seventh. Both blows came with the bases unoccupied.

Young Hal Newhouser, who was lifted for a pinchhitter in the Tigers' big eighth, was credited with his eighth triumph against 13 losses while Tex Hughso neuffered his sixth defeat against 18 victories. Johnny Gorsica hurled the ninth for the Tigers.

Conn Thinks Louis Is Now 'Dead Pigeon'

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10.—Pvt. Billy Conn, starting workouts for his October 12 title bout with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, said today Louis was "a dead pigeon" already.

The former light-heavyweight champion, on furlough from the Army, began his fight preparations at Pittsburgh. After another workout tomorrow, he will go to New York to attend the Army East-New York Giants football game Saturday. Later, he will go to a permanent training camp on Promoter Mike Jacob's property at Rumson, N. J.

Conn, who was knocked out in his first match with Sergeant Louis last year, sized up his prospects this way:

"I think Joe's ready to be taken by the first good man who comes along. None of them—not even the best—goes on forever. In my book he's a dead pigeon."

Louis in Shape

Chicago, Sept. 10 (INS).—Sergt. Joe Louis indicated today that the Army is the best place for a man to condition himself for a fight, even for one involving boxing gloves.

Stopping briefly in Chicago before he begins training for his October 12 tussle with Billy Conn in New York, the heavyweight champion made this simple prediction:

"I'll win. I'm in better shape right now than I have ever been before a fight."

The bomber, now weighing 212 pounds, expects to enter the ring at 204.

His manager, Julian Black, agreed that the Army has put Joe in great shape.

"The Army has hardened him, especially the cavalry," he said.

Richardson Aids Mulvey At Western

By Bill Burnett

The trials and tribulations of at least one local schoolboy football coach were cut approximately in half yesterday when it was announced by Coach Fred Mulvey of Western that Billy Richardson had been assigned to assist him.

Richardson, George Washington ace of a few years ago, immediately took over the backfield mentorship, leaving Mulvey only the Red Raiders' line to coach instead of the whole team.

"Believe me, I was glad to get Richardson," Mulvey said. "I think he'll work wonders with the backs. And you'll see a whale of a difference in the sort of team we have at Western. Coaching a whole team is too much for one man.

No Pessimist Here

After the first few day's practice, Mulvey already looks forward with some confidence. Only five lettermen are on his squad, but there's plenty of promising material plus another big factor. That is the outfit's spirit and the fact none of the candidates feel they have a berth cinched.

Duke O'Connell, the 1941 season's biggest surprise, and Alex Pappanicolas are the only backs returning. But Capt. Johnny Gentile, a 155-pound veteran guard, is being moved backward to fill blocking assignments. George Neam, another guard, and Wingman Wells Fendrich round out the list of last year's performers.

Those expected to see action, though how much depends on their development, line up like this: Goehenaur and Carpenter, backs; Bishop, Kiawell and Alexander, tackles; Fraley and Lindquist, ends; and Jack Walker, center.

Johnnies 'Loaded'

St. John's High, which is doing its practicing at the Sixteenth and Kennedy field, has almost a full team of veterans to put on the field under Coach Gene Augusterfer. A total of 36 youngsters are out, nine of which worked steadily last year.

One potential star who isn't out, however, is Buddy Speiss. The squat seatback expects to enter Georgetown Prep, it was revealed by Brother Lio, the Johnnies' athletic director.

Charley Wilson and Lawrence O'Day constitute the returning backs though Ed Lucas, an end last year, may be shifted. Left at the ends are Bob Collins, Paddy McCarthy and George Hughes, the latter also a backfield prospect. Bill Davis will probably hold down the center position, flanked by the O'Donnell twins, Bernard and Dan, at guards. The sole surviving tackle with experience is Tony Vaniglio.

Bakei Puts Off Appearance Till Sunday

Because he has been unable to contact the proper sparring partners locally, Joe Bakei, fast rising protege of Whitey Bimstein, yesterday requested Promoter Joe Turner's permission to delay reporting here until Sunday for his scheduled ten-round boxing feature with Georgie Parks, hard hitting local Negro, at Griffith Stadium Tuesday night.

Turner, aware of the current shortage of heavyweight training mates, readily granted the permission and Bakei, who previously has been working out at Stillman's gymnasium, New York, promptly shifted his activites to the late Madame Bey's camp at Summit, N. J.

Bakei, who originally was scheduled to put in an appearance here today apprised Turner—through Bimstein—that he gradually is rounding into the best of shape and expects to be at his peak for Parks.

"Joe has never been in finer fettle than right now," Bimstein told Turner yesterday, "and I wouldn't want to throw him out of stride by bringing him to Washington and finding he has no one to work with.

"Bakei has a hand-picked staff of training mates to work with him at Madame Bey's and will be set for the fight of his life when he squares off with Parks Tuesday."

That Bakei entertains a wholesome respect for Parks is evidenced in the fact that he has been in hard training since the match was made and also by reports that he has been training with sluggers almost exclusively in preparation for this bout.

Bobby Jones Sure Starter At Columbia

Columbia Country Club members in charge of the exhibition match at the club Sunday, September 20, bringing together Bobby Jones and Fred McLeod against Craig Wood and Chick Evans breathed a sigh of relief yesterday after the number one attraction almost got away, but didn't.

Jones, now Capt. R. T. Jones, U. S. A., stationed at an Eastern camp, was not sure he would be able to fulfill the date but after a busy day of wiring and phoning it was learned that Jones will definitely play and will arrive the morning of the match.

All proceeds of the match featuring a quartet of former national champions will go to varied war relief agencies. Tickets are on sale at all country clubs and sports shops at $1.20 each, including tax.

Wiffy Cox, a good friend of all four contestants, will referee the match. The Congressional Country Club pro will hardly confine his duties to refereeing as he is one of the best master of ceremonies in the pro ranks.

Corby Cup Today

The District Women's Golf Association will open its late summer and fall schedule with the annual Corby Cup tournament today at Columbia Country Club. A field of 73 women golfers will compete in the Class A event at 18-hole handicap medal play.

Pro-Am Monday

Greensmen Meet

Mid-Atlantic greenkeepers will meet Monday at Columbia Country Club for a golf match at 1 p. m., dinner at 6 and a meeting featuring a general discussion at 7 o'clock.

Burger Bowls Set of 453; New Record

Johnny Burger monopolized the opening of the Takoma Duckpin Association's play at Art Taylor's alleys by stringing together 16 spares and 5 strikes for a 171 single and all-time record high set of 453, upping his own mark for the latter by 11 sticks. Burger's Raines Plumbers took three from Youngblood Hardware and posted high team set of 1756 as a 626 total gave game honors to Modern Way Movers. Army Medical Center and Stevens Decorating won sweeps over Tru-Blu Beer and Moore Hardware, respectively.

NEW RECREATION

The fourth rolling of the mixed doubles tournament will be staged this evening at New Recreation with Bob and Dot Workman still the defending champions, the pair having won three times in a row. Scratch is 230 and a two-thirds handicap is allowed. Entry fee is $3. Couples may roll more than once if they wish.

BETHESDA

With Capt. H. Saunders rolling the first ball, the Model Basin boys had their inaugural at Bethesda Bowling Center with Oscar Sykes and Jerry Pearce totaling 135 to split high single honors and the former going ahead to post 369 for the best set effort. Pearce's Production team posted highs of 541-1533 and took three from Apprentice No. 1, while Lieut. McInerney's 321 aided the Officers to a sweep over Apprentice No. 2. Both Sheet Metal and Machine Shop No. 2 whitewashed opponents.

CLARENDON

Kelly Beach rolled in mid-season form in the Clarendon Wednesday handicap and breezed through to win with a 449 scratch set to which he added 51 franked pins for an even 500 gross that earned him $25. Ray Watson, also hitting splendidly, had 445 from scratch and a gross of 469 for the runner-up spot.

Army Stars Making Redskins Look Good.

Cardinals and Lions Appear Inferior After Beatings; 15,000 Seats Remain for Bears Game

Either Wallace Wade, coach of the Western Army All-Stars, is a miracle man or the Redskins are several touchdowns better than two of the Western Division clubs they meet later in the season, the Chicago Cardinals and Detroit Lions.

Since the Redskins handed the Army eleven's pro and All-Star college lineup a 26-to-7 beating on the coast in a game the Army backers brushed off as a lack of practice and timing, the Wade-coached outfit has come back to beat the Cards and Lions by 6 and 12 point margins.

The Redskins will tell you that they were no world beaters themselves when they beat John Kimbrough & Co. in Los Angeles, and that if the Army team had been on the field in Baltimore last Monday night instead of the Packers the game would have been a rout—for the Redskins.

The Army outfit has undoubtedly improved but hardly to the extent where it could handle the 'Skins as it did the Chicago and Detroit clubs.

Chances Seem Good

Thus the Redskins' championship hopes are still on the upgrade with the Cardinals and Lions taking the place of the Green Bay Packers and Chicago Bears on the regular season schedule, with the Western clubs looming as no world beaters.

The accent was on speed in the morning workout of Coach Ray Flaherty's squad yesterday in Griffith Stadium. A victory over the Chicago Bears in Sunday's exhibition game at the stadium would give the Redskins an unbeaten preseason record over the best opposition in the Nation and would put the squad in a desired frame of mind for the 11-game schedule which begins September 20 with the Steelers.

A majority of the season ticket holders have retained their seats for the Bear game Sunday and the single game seats are moving, but General Manager Jack Espey announced yesterday that more than 15,000 remain for the practice tilt with the league champions and will remain on sale through tomorrow night at the Redskins' Ninth Street office.

The Whole Show

The Redskin band, the swing unit and all the side attractions of a league encountered will be offered as the Redskins conclude their strongest exhibition schedule in history, one which figures to help them when the games start counting in the standings.

Ray Flaherty and Dutch Bergman, the newly appointed scout, will go to New York tomorrow for the New York Giants—Eastern Army—All-Stars game and Bergman will continue to Pittsburgh on Sunday for the Steelers league opener with the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Redskins will continue workouts this morning while Coach George Halas has another session planned for his Chicago Bears on the big field in back of Byrd Stadium on the University of Maryland campus.

The Bears beat the Redskins in the only game they played last year while the year before the teams split, the Redskins winning by 7-3 and the Bears by you know what.

Ralph Kirk Pilots Favored Bardy to Timonium Race Victory

Bardy Pays $3.90; Gendarme Second With My One 3d; Kirk Applauded

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Timonium, Md., Sept. 10.—Apprentice Jockey Ralph (Boo) Kirk, a diminutive, round-faced youngster who seems to have convinced racing officials that he is 16 years of age, climaxed his first half-mile season by winning the closing-day feature event at this track. Young Kirk, who has two brothers, Carson and Woodrow who follow jockey careers, took G. A. Saportas' Bardy to the front after a quarter mile and guided the 4-year-old filly home four lengths in front of the closest opposition.

The crowd had confidence in the running ability of Bardy and the riding of the tiny boy from Silver Spring, Md., for they installed the combination an odds-on favorite in the group of eight. There was much applauding and cheering when little Kirk brought his mount into the winner's circle. Bardy paid $3.90 and was clocked for the mile and an eighth in 1:58 2/5.

Mrs. P. L. Lydecker's Gendarme was second holding place money safe by a length margin over M. B. Goss' My One. With the exception of Joan Asbestos, the other horses were never close enough to be considered seriously.

Gendarme was first to show in front and saved much ground while setting the pace. Bardy, however, racing in the clear and under rating by Kirk "had dead aim" on the front-runner. When Kirk called on Bardy for speed, the filly went to the front and it was all over but the pay-off. My One had some trouble early and was unable to get to Gendarme in the stretch run.

Well-played horses figured in the daily double which paid $18.70. Jockey Willie Dufford gave W. S. Sprague's Seventeen Guns one of the best rides of the meeting to get her up in time to win by a half length from Queen Minatoka with Euchre, the only pacemaker third. Seventeen Guns paid $7.10. Another close finish marked the second event. Mrs. J. B. Bond's Most Alert got up in the final jump to down R. C. Waple's Rolls Rough under strong handling by Jockey Willie Balzaretti, leading rider at the meeting. Most Alert was a $5.30 favorite.

BARDY was steadied while within striking distance of GENDARME'S pace, came around the latter to take command and opened good lead to win with something in reserve. GENDARME saved ground while setting pace, could not resist winner, but held on gamely. MY ONE was taken up in opening half and failed to respond while racing evenly thereafter. GROUCHER'S BOY saved ground and failed to rally.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOT MAN, $19.00, $7.70, $5.00; ROYAL BUSINESS, $3.10, $2.70; BRILLIANT ONE, $5.60.

HOT MAN, well placed from start, came with bold rush to take command over ROYAL BUSINESS and won with speed in reserve. ROYAL BUSINESS, closer than usual in early stages, went to front boldly, but was no match for winner. BRILLIANT ONE was hard ridden close up and weakened. GINOBI was taken up when unable to get to front.

LUPOBA took command in opening furlong, set good pace but had to be kept to drive to end. EL JELIS was hard ridden and came willingly in final stages. THREE NINES was shuffled back going to first turn, improved position readily to stretch and then hung. CLIFTON'S DAWN had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and five-sixteenths miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:21. Off at 6:14. Winner, B. H. Hutchinson's b. h. Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—The Arrow Athletic Club, which has been sponsoring semipro and professional football here for 20 years, announced today that it was abandoning the sport for the duration.

Business Manager Linwood Jones said he had been unable to contract enough men to put an independent club on the field this fall. The Arrows had played with the now defunct Dixie Pro League for the past six years.

Phils Finally Win One, 2-1, Over Pirates

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The Phils came from behind today to snap a 13-game losing streak with a 2-to-1 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates in an 11-inning contest. The weather broke up the second game of the scheduled double-header after three and one-half innings of play.

Danny Litwhiler walloped a mighty centerfield triple in the eleventh frame to score

Center Market Downs FBI Nine, 4-1, for D. C. Sandlot Title

Post League Champs Win 4th in Row

Watt Strikes Out 10 in 7-Hit Game; Williams Beaten By Rally in Eighth

For the fourth consecutive year The Washington Post-Industrial League champion—this time Center Market's nine—captured the D. C. unlimited sandlot baseball title yesterday on the Ellipse. The Marketmen, with a three-run spree in the eighth inning, took a 4-1 triumph over FBI to remain undefeated in the 1942 championship tournament.

In winning the crown won the past three years by the Heurich Brewers, Center Market was seriously threatened in only one game. That was a 1-1 tie with the Union Printers. The only other club in the playoff was the Navy Yard Marine nine, which bowed out first.

Big Frank Watt put the finishing touches on Center Market's city title. The aging former big leaguer hurled seven-hit ball and struck out ten to decision lanky Tex Williams. The latter was touched for only five safeties, but most of them came at costly places.

The costliest was the eighth, when Mickey Finn opened by singling. Schwab bunted, and when Meyers fumbled the ball there were men on second and third. Charley Kendall was passe dintentionally, filling the bases. That left the stage set for Finn to steal home, which he did.

After Watt had driven Schwab across the plate with a single, FBI Catcher Kittel accounted for the final run when he threw into right field attempting to catch the big pitcher napping.

The Marketmen jumped into a quick lead in the first inning. Jim Durkin delivering the big blow after Dehner had dropped one in left field and stole second. That stood up until the seventh when the G-Men finally tied it on a pair of singles and an error. Then came the eighth.

Rookie Mueller put the Chicagoans back in the lead when he lined a two-bagger to center at the start of the home sixth. Zuber picked up Webb's sacrifice, looked at third, looked at first and finally simply looked foolish holding the ball. A moment later Mueller scored on Kolloway's fly ball.

Alexandria Notes:

G. W. High Adds Hinchey To 1942 Athletic Staff

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 10.—John J. Hinchey, former outstanding physical education director, basketball and football coach at Glen Nor and West Conshohocken High School in Pennsylvania, today was appointed as assistant physical education director of the George Washington High School by T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools, and will report for duty here Monday.

Last season his basketball team at Glen Nor High won 19 of 20 games, and entered the State playoff where they made a creditable showing. His football team also stood high in the league standings. He attended West Chester State Teachers College in Pennsylvania, and also graduated from Temple University. His home is at Highland Park, Pa.

The George Washington Presidents are drilling daily, and over 75 candidates have reported. The majority of the squad is green, but Athletic Director Doran is hopeful for a good season.

Dave Payne, the third of the famous family of Payne athletes in the city, has reported for the squad and is trying out for center. He had two brothers, Jack and Howard, who were captains of the Presidents football teams and good athletes.

Marty Foltz is captain of the team and has reported 15 pounds heavier. He is all-State material.

Forty-six members of the Old Dominion Boat Club are serving Uncle Sam, it was announced today by President John Edmonds.

The rowing program has been completely shut off during the duration, because of the Government sharing the club property.

The Old Dominion Boat Club is one of the oldest nautical clubs in the Nation, and this marks the first time in years they have been forced to suspend all water activities.

Harry Child, managing director of Alexandria Boys' Club, is working on a program for football for the club this fall.

His teams will enter The Washington Post Boys' Club leagues, besides playing independent games. Ike Parker is assistant mentor.

Bowling is the outstanding sport for the nearby employes of the Washington Airport. Already the T. W. A. and Pennsylvania Central Airlines have organized leagues and will compete in matches at the Alexandria Recreation Center.

Next Tuesday the Old Dominion Boat Club and Wednesday the Alexandria Service Club Leagues will begin operation here for the winter season.

The Potomac Blues, champions of "B" Softball League, have entered in the "Little World Series" and will meet the winners of the Eagles-Police game, to be played Friday night at the Municipal Stadium.

Roger Sullivan, president of the loop, is working on plans for the series, which he will announce later.

Records Record Catch

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 10.—Marshall Orndorff, this city, who last year pulled out the record bass catch in this section—a 5¼-pounder—bettered his record yesterday by catching one weighing 5½ pounds at Big Eddy, in the Shenandoah River near here. It measured 20½ inches in length.

Weston, Mass., Sept. 10 (INS).—The Boston University grid team tonight elected Ray Whelan of Watertown, a senior end, as captain for the approaching season. The election was postponed last autumn in deference to the draft.

Derringer Wins for Reds; Second Tied

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 10.—The Cincinnati Reds were given two splendid pitching performances by Paul Derringer and Ray Starr today but they netted only one victory in their final appearances of the season against the Boston Braves. Derringer was credited with a 6-2 win in the opener but Starr's two-hitter was wasted because the Reds had to have the scoreless nightcap called at the end of the ninth to board a train for Philadelphia.

The Reds clinched the opener against Manny Salvo in the sixth when Frank McCormick doubled and scored on Ray Lamanno's single. Then they insured it with a two-run rally against the Boston righthander in the seventh.

Starr was twice betrayed by his teammates. They filled the bases with none out against Johnny Sain in both the fourth and fifth innings, only to have the Braves silence their threats with double plays. The best four Reds could do with the bases choked was dribble to the infield.

Nonplaying Lion Gridder Injured

Detroit, Sept. 10 (AP).—The only Detroit Lion to suffer injury in the team's 12-0 loss to the Western Army All-Stars last night was a man who didn't play.

Between halves, Lloyd Cardwell, veteran halfback, bent over to get a drink of water. Several vertebrae caught and Cardwell was unable to go to the bench for the second half. He remained in Detroit today for treatment while his teammates went to the Lions' camp at Charlevoix, Mich., to prepare for their National Football League opener.

MacPhail Comes Here to Complete Army Entry Plans

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 10 (AP).—L. S. (Larry) MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, arranged to leave tonight for Washington to complete plans for his entry into the Army.

After watching his ball club humbled by the Chicago Cubs 10 to 2, MacPhail told newspapermen, "I warned this ball club when it was eight and one-half games in front that it couldn't win the pennant unless it played better ball and the way it is going now I doubt if it does win."

A captain in the field artillery in the last war, MacPhail said he had been accepted for service again several days ago, but still was arguing for assignment with combat troops.

FBI Identifies Suspect's Pistols as Ones Used in Slaying of Four Persons in Miami

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 10.—Detective Capt. E. W. Melchen of the Miami Police Department said today that two pistols taken from Vincent Christy, 35-year-old Californian, upon his arrest here "have been positively identified by the FBI as the guns used in the slaying of four Miamians July 17.

Melchen said Christy refused to make any statement when confronted with this evidence. Christy has maintained he remembers nothing that happened in the past five months, police reported.

A .38-caliber revolver and a .22-automatic were found in Christy's possession when Jacksonville police nabbed him in the automobile of a local man who had just been held up and robbed in his home.

Ray Mills, chief investigator for the State attorney's office in Miami, took the guns to Washington so the FBI could compare test bullets fired from them with bullets found at the scene of the Miami slayings, which had been sent to Washington previously.

In Washington it was announced the guns had been examined by ballistics experts in the Federal Bureau of Investigation and were "positively" the ones used in the slayings.

Those slain were Erwin Leopold, his wife, Esther; their son, Stephen, 6, and Ralph Morin.

The murderer shot the three members of the Leopold family to death in their home. He then ran outside and commandeered a car driven by Morin. He forced Morin to drive about 2 miles to a grove, where he shot him in the head.

Passenger Ends Life In Leap From Train

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 10 (AP).—A passenger on the twilight limited of the Michigan Central Railroad ended his life by leaping off the train as it sped 75 to 80 miles an hour downgrade near Three Oaks at 8:30 p. m. yesterday.

He was identified by cards in his pocket as James P. Mitchell, 31, of Gary, Ind.

Passengers on the train told Coroner William Pifer at Niles, Mich., the man took his money from his pocket and threw it to the floor of the coach, shouting "you can have it," before he raced to the vestibule and jumped.

4 of Family Found Shot to Death in Beds

Hinsdale, N. H., Sept. 10 (AP).—The bodies of four elderly brothers and sisters, all shot to death, were found in their home today. Although all were in bed, Sheriff Frank J. Bennett said a preliminary report indicated it was a case of murder and suicide.

The victims were Edward White, 65; his brother, Harry, 61; Margie, 76, and Mrs. Hector Cote, 72.

Postmaster Frank J. Young discovered the tragedy when he went to the White home in search of Harry, who is express agent in Hinsdale. He had failed to report for work this morning.

Police said the position of Harry's body indicated that he had crawled back to bed or had been lifted into it.

Boy, 16, Seized in Death Of Child Trussed in Attic

Greenville, S. C., Sept. 10 (AP).—Fifteen-year-old William Arthur Melton, jr., was in jail today in connection with the death September 3 of 5-year-old Henry W. (Mike) Harrison, jr., whose trussed body was found face down on the attic floor of a vacant house across the street from his home.

Melton was arrested yesterday. No charges have been filed against him.

Sheriff R. H. Bearden said Melton in a signed statement early today said he had been playing cowboys and Indians with Harrison and the child stumbled while his hands were corded behind his back and fell down a basement stairway and was knocked unconscious.

Bearden said Melton went on to relate this version of the death:

He took Harrison to the attic and left, thinking the younger child soon would come to and leave. He tied Harrison's feet together before leaving him, but he did not explain to police his reason for doing so.

He came back to the vacant house and, thinking Harrison had gone, raised the attic steps, which he had left down when he first went away.

Bearden said he asked Melton why he had not reported the incident sooner. He quoted Melton's reply as:

"I read about the little boy's death in the papers, but I didn't know it was the same boy I had been playing with."

ORMUND WESTGATE

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 10.—Fingerprints required of him for a war industry job caused the arrest today of Osmund Westgate, 50-year-old electrician, on a charge of being a fugitive from justice for an escape almost 18 years ago from the Illinois State Prison at Joliet, where he was serving a life sentence for robbery.

Westgate, known as a model husband and father to his friends and family, was routed from his home at 1 a. m. by Detectives James Cully and James O'Keefe, who carried instructions from Warden E. M. Stubblefield of the Joliet Prison accusing Westgate of having fled the prison October 12, 1924.

The detectives said Westgate was traced through a Federal Bureau of Investigation examination of fingerprints obtained when he took a $100 a week job with the Roebling Steel Co. in Brooklyn. Authorities said the prints were taken to permit his continuance as an electrician on war production jobs and for a Coast Guard pass.

Police said Westgate's life sentence was the result of a second conviction for robbery, mandatory under Illinois State law. The Illinois warden said extradition proceedings would be started. Westgate indicated he would fight removal, detectives said.

Westgate is married and has a 9-year-old son.

Victory Fund Committeemen Named in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

The financial "blue book" of Washington was thrown yesterday into a drive to stimulate purchases of Treasury issues. Winslow B. Van Devanter, chairman of the Victory Fund Committee for the District of Columbia, announced that outstanding local bankers and investment bankers had accepted appointment to his committee.

"Considerable progress," said Mr. Van Devanter, "has already been made in organizing this city so that prospective investors in all types of United States Treasury issues may be adequately informed and covered, when from time to time the Treasury department announces the offering of Government securities for public subscription.

"Washington bankers, investment bankers and brokers are patriotically offering their voluntary services to assist the Treasury department in raising the vast sums necessary to prosecute the war."

Work of the Victory Fund Committee, he said, will be integrated with that of the War Savings Committee whose sole responsibility is the stimulation of sales of War Bonds. The public will find assistance available in the purchase of all types of Government securities through the usual banking and investment channels here, he said.

Members of the Victory Fund Committee, announced last night, read like the financial "blue book" of Washington. They are:

Francis G. Addison, jr., president, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Bruce Baird, president, National Savings & Trust Co.; Y. R. Booker, partner, Y. R. Booker & Co.; L. Clark Brown, partner, Brown, Goodwyn & Olds; Clarence F. Burton, president, the City Bank; M. F. Calman, president, Liberty National Bank; J. Frank Campbell, president, Anacostia Bank.

Richard P. Dunn, partner, Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath; Robert V. Fleming, president, Riggs National Bank; George A. Garrett, resident partner, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane; Thomas J. Groom, president, Bank of Commerce and Savings; Linwood P. Harrell, executive vice president, Morris Plan Bank; C. F. Jacobsen, president, National Metropolitan Bank.

Joseph F. Kreeger, partner, Robert C. Jones & Co.; Frank W. Lee, vice president, City Bank of Washington; James R. Lemon, partner, Johnston, Lemon & Co.; William W. Mackall, partner, Mackall & Coe; H. M. McKee, president, East Washington Savings Bank and the National Capital Bank; Lanier P. McLachlen, president, McLachlen Banking Corp.; Thomas C. Meem, president, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Frank P. Morse, manager, Memphill, Noyes & Co.; Richard A. Norris, vice president and cashier, Lincoln National Bank.

C. H. Pope, president, Munsey Trust Co.; Ord Preston, president, Union Trust Co.; John J. Reilly, president, Second National Bank; T. Baker Robinson, partner, Robinson, Rohrbaugh & Lukens; F. P. Rodier, partner, W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Frank J. Stryker, president, Columbia National Bank; Corcoran Thom, president, American Security & Trust Co.; Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Hamilton National Bank, and J. Frank White, president, National Bank of Washington.

Previously, it was announced that Robert V. Fleming of the Riggs National Bank and J. Clifford Folger of Folger, Nolan & Co., were the Washington members of the Victory Fund Committee for the Fifth Federal Reserve District.

3 Billion U. S. Issue Seen 'Going Well'

Subscriptions to both sections of the Government's large borrowing launched yesterday and continuing today were reported "going well" as business offices closed.

Only routine efforts were required of the Victory Fund Committee, which found buyers without hunting. Although the securities—$1,500,000,000 in .065 per cent certificates of indebtedness and $1,500,000,000 in 1¼ per cent Treasury notes—appeared aimed chiefly at large banks, many corporations were said to be subscribing. Books on the two issues will close tonight.

Reilly Urges Bankers to Assume Dynamic Role in War Effort

By Thomas M. Cahill

Bankers must assume the role of protecting the most important front in this war, the economic one, John A. Reilly, president District of Columbia Bankers Association and Second National Banks last night told junior banking men and women.

MR. REILLY

Addressing a dinner meeting of the educational committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at Lee Sheraton Hotel, he emphasized that if the Nation is calling on its warriors to make the supreme sacrifice to preserve our way of life and economy, bankers should at least be grateful enough to provide economic leadership to keep America from internal decay. His criticism was, "We hear the bad tidings from the battlefields of the world with heavy hearts and yet we serenely accept the fact that right here in America our economy is steadily becoming paralyzed."

Cites Bankers' Role

"As the managers of money belonging to our people, we have an important responsibility at this tragic hour. Money which loses its purchasing power might just as well be relegated to the attic or forwarded to coin collectors as souvenirs. The real value of money is when it serves as a medium of acquiring goods and meeting human needs. When it fails in this capacity, inflation is present and the economy is definitely impaired."

"What we need is a dynamic economy," was his message. "Such a system would recognize the rights of labor to fair wages and reasonable hours; it would enable capital to expand its activities and be assured of a reasonable return for the risk; and for the people it would stimulate scientific development of our resources and machines to meet the needs of every day life. It stands to reason that in such a system the best men will have the opportunity to earn more than just a livelihood by initiative, leadership and the rest of those similar qualities that inevitably distinguish one man from another."

Regimentation Hit

Referring to the educational work of the institute, he reminded, it is not, its function, or the universities, to build a social order that will keep people free, but they have the definite responsibility of developing the minds of the builders.

The program of the dictators, he explained, involved narrowing down of the scope of education so they could more easily regiment the minds of their youth and by this simple process the people of Germany, Japan and Italy were reduced to slavery.

Admitting our armed forces and industries will require mechanized units to win the war, he declared "if we are to enjoy the blessings of ultimate peace and victory we cannot tolerate mechanized minds now or hereafter.

Mr. Reilly was introduced by George B. Earnshaw, chairman of the educational committee. Mr. Earnshaw also announced that registration for institute courses would begin the week of September 21.

Treasury Lifts Issue Next Week To 400 Million

By the Associated Press

The Treasury increased next week's offering of 91-day Treasury bills to $400,000,000 from the $350,000,000 weekly level of recent weeks.

However, $600,000,000 worth of similar bills will come due for payment next week, so that the net result will be a $200,000,000 reduction in the amount of Treasury bills outstanding in the hands of investors.

This is a temporary reduction of a type customarily made by the Treasury during weeks when heavy income tax payments are made. The third quarter income tax installment will be due September 15.

However, if the $400,000,000 level is adopted by the Treasury in following weeks, it will add $100,000,000 each week to the Federal debt since the amount of similar bills coming due in each of the next five weeks is $300,000,000.

Three New Chemical Plants to Be Built

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—International Minerals & Chemical Corporation, the former International Agricultural Corporation, is undertaking the building of three new plants to provide both war chemicals and greater diversification of operations for the company, Louis Ware, president, announced today.

A contract has been signed with the governmenality owned Metals Reserve Corporation, Ware said, under which the company will construct and supervise a manganese plant in South Dakota, where, he said, there is a huge reserve of low-grade manganese ore.

Two projects being built by the company with its own funds embrace a plant in Ohio which will produce potassium chlorate and a plant in Georgia for production of magnesium sulphate used in textiles.

Late Earnings Statements

Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp. reported net income of $2,580,135, equivalent to $4.58 a share, in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1942. Net income in the previous fiscal year was $2,288,318, or $4.06 a common share. The annual report showed provision of $2,965,800 for Federal income and excess profits taxes and $2,017,192 for depreciation and amortization for the 1941-42 fiscal year.

Crops May Top Best Previous Year by 13%

By the Associated Press

Prospects for an aggregate crop production of unprecedented proportions continued to improve during the past month, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday in estimating the total harvest would be 13 per cent higher than the peak year of 1937.

Secretary Wickard hailed the report as a "tremendous victory over the Axis," but warned that in spite of the great production "demands upon American food and fiber are so great that we will not have enough to give everyone all the food he or she wants."

"It behooves us to conserve this amount carefully in view of the great needs and demands upon us by our soldiers and our Allies all over the world," he added in a statement. "These demands are tremendous, so tremendous that even the productivity of the American farmers cannot meet all of them."

Records for Many Crops

In its report, the department said that with average weather the rest of the season, final surveys should show record production of grain, hay, oil seed, beans, peas, sugar, fruit and vegetables, also a large cotton crop and about average crop of potatoes, sweet potatoes and tobacco.

"With record numbers of livestock and poultry on hand, with milk and egg production continuing substantially above previous levels, with record supplies of feed grain and also of hay and forage in sight and with the best fall pasture since 1915, there seems every reason to expect the production of livestock and livestock products to continue higher than in past years," the report declared.

The large farm production was attributed to record acreage yield for many commodities and favorable growing conditions.

There was only one dull note in the report.

"The problem ahead will be to meet the full labor peak in harvesting the big crop of corn, cotton, soybeans, potatoes, peanuts and other late crops," it said.

Labor Is Dark Spot

Wickard said farmers must keep in mind increasing production difficulties.

"Labor is getting scarcer every day," he declared, "so is farm machinery, insecticides, fertilizers and other materials needed for production."

Bright spots in the report were grains, oil seed, needed for the replacement of vegetable oil imports cut off by the war, and beans, the latter needed for export and as a substitute for meat, with civilians confronted by a shortage because of military and lend-lease requirements.

The report said if present prospects materialize, total production of grain should reach 153 million tons, or about eight million above the 1920 record high.

The September corn estimate was for a crop of 3,016,000,000 bushels, the largest since 1920; wheat, 982 million bushels, largest since 1915; oats, 1,353,000,000 bushels, a record high; barley, 419 million bushels, a near record, and grain sorghums, 145 million bushels, larger than any year except 1941.

Wheat Declines Despite Heavy Flour Buying

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Profit taking lowered grain prices fractions to more than a cent a bushel today despite support that came into some pits as a result of flour and cash grain shipping business.

Mill buying reflecting brisk flour business so far this week helped to check the decline in wheat and rally prices at times but the 3-cent advance scored since the President's Labor Day speech was too much for profit takers to resist.

Wheat closed ¼-¾ cent lower than yesterday, September $1.23½, December $1.26¾-½; corn ½-⅝ down, September 84, December 86½-⅝; oats ½-¾ off; rye ⅛-1⅛ down and soybeans ⅛-⅜ lower.

Milling trade sources estimated the Nation's flour business since Tuesday at around 800,000 barrels, involving approximately 3,680,000 bushels of wheat and more sales were reported in process of negotiation.

She Will Command the WAFS of the Air

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The WAFS of the Air Transport Command yesterday joined the WAACS and the WAVES, of the Army and Navy, respectively, to give the United States three uniformed women's "auxiliaries" to the armed forces.

Established on an experimental basis and without benefit of special legislation, the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron will consist initially of about 50 women, all of whom will be recruited on a civil service basis.

They will be used to ferry planes inside this country and eventually, it is conceivable, may ferry bombers to bases overseas—although such action is not now contemplated.

The WAFS will be commanded by Mrs. Nancy Harkness Love, beautiful 28-year-old blonde who learned to fly 12 years ago and who was one of the original group of pilots who flew aircraft consigned to Britain to the Canadian border—where they were towed across to comply with the Neutrality Act. She is the wife of Lieut. Col. Robert M. Love, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Air Transport Command.

Mrs. Love attended the press conference at which Secretary of War Stimson yesterday announced formation of the WAFS and then went on an inspection trip to New Castle, Del., where the squadron will be based, at the Army air field.

She estimated there were between 500 and 600 women pilots who could meet WAFS requirements and said she expected most of them would be available eventually for the new auxiliary.

Maj. Gen. Harold M. George, commander of the ATC, said tentative plans call for ultimate expansion of the auxiliary to include all the women pilots available. Although at the outset they will fly only lighter planes, he said no limits would be set now on their possible future operations.

MAJOR GENERAL GEORGE

Mrs. Love said there were only 10 to 15 women fliers in the country now qualified to fly the multi-engined planes, but that additional training would enable others to graduate to larger aircraft.

The women pilots will receive a special course of instruction of from a month to six weeks to acquaint them with the operation of military aircraft, military organization and procedure, routes and other related subjects.

Applications for duty in the new squadron may be made by letter to the Air Transport Command, Army Air Forces, War Department.

While on a civil service status, which presumably will be all the time, the WAFS are in the experimental stages, the ferrying pilots will be paid at the rate of $3000 annually. At the end of a 90-day service period, candidates meeting requirements will be eligible for permanent appointment into the WAFS.

A uniform is being designed for the WAFS, Mrs. Love said, but details have not yet been worked out.

A WAFS applicant must be between 21 and 35 years of age, inclusive, have a high school education, be a citizen, have a commercial license with 200-horsepower rating, have not less than 500 hours logged and certified flying time, and have had cross-country flying experience.

It is estimated that 10 of the first 50 candidates will be assigned to administrative duties and the other 40 become active pilots. At New Castle the WAFS will live in barracks.

The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Smith Has Chance for Senate Nomination

It looks like Michigan, which has produced such weird political phenomena as Father Coughlin and 80-year-old Governor Dickinson, was about to lay another egg.

He is the rootin-tootin, rip-snorting former preacher, former disciple of Huey Long, Gerald L. K. Smith, now engaged in haranguing every cross-roads in Michigan in his campaign to become the Republican candidate for the United States Senate.

DREW PEARSON

The Michigan primaries are on September 15. And according to current political dope, Gerald L. K. Smith has a good chance of winning the Republican nomination.

To Washington, the Rev. Smith is a familiar figure. He first appeared on the horizon with Huey Long, when that ebullient Senator was accompanied by a host of bodyguards, camp-followers and others interested in acquiring the secret of Huey's political magic.

After he had sat at Huey's knee long enough to learn the secret of rabble-rousing, Gerald went out to help Coughlin and Lemke organize the "Funny-Money" Third Party in 1936, and he has been haranguing ever since. Incidentally, he gets part of his financial support from certain big business leaders and isolationist newspaper publishers who have leaned toward American fascism.

Tires for Everybody

In his Michigan campaign, however, Gerald is mixing the Huey Long recipe for grand-standing with a lot of smart politics. His chief platform is "TIRES FOR EVERYBODY," and he carries with him a synthetic tire which he says was made out of farm products. He quotes Henry Ford and Dow Chemical to the effect that it is easy to make these tires out of alcohol and thereby help the farmers.

Instead, the Roosevelt Administration, he says, has played into the hands of the big oil companies, who don't want competition from the farmers in making synthetic rubber after the war is over.

What Gerald L. K. Smith has to say about the bungling of synthetic rubber has a great deal of truth in it. And the public knows it.

So Smith has pounded home this simple issue, which every child can understand, at hundreds of cross-roads up and down the State of Michigan. Speaking sometimes to ten communities a day, he has organized automobile owners, with a captain in each community, on the promise that he will get "Tires for Everybody."

Note—If the rabble-rousing Smith should win the Republican nomination and later defeat Democratic Senator Prentiss Brown, he would sit beside Michigan's scholarly, bespectacled Arthur Vandenburg, considered one of the most "sound" and solemn conservatives in the Senate.

We Still Buy Gold

How delicate the pro-Nazi situation is among the Boers of South Africa is illustrated by the fact that the United States is still buying gold from South Africa and burying it in the ground at Fort Knox.

For some time various Government officials have proposed that we cut off the purchase of gold, since it is now considered the most useless metal in the world. However, the State Department has said no.

GEN. JAN SMUTS

The State Department warns that if gold purchases were cut off, South African gold mines would close down and there would be labor unrest which would upset the war effort. Also it might unseat Gen. Jan Smuts, chief friend of Great Britain in South Africa, who is not having an easy time of it. In addition to India, the State Department believes we should keep a helpful eye on this part of the British Empire.

However, Milo Perkins, head of the Board of Economic Warfare, has pointed out that in addition to gold, South Africa is rich in tremendous quantitites of chrome and other valuable ores vitally needed in the United States. So he has proposed buying these ores from South Africa instead of gold.

The State Department was not exactly happy about this suggestion, but Perkins got around it by sending a "gold expert" to South Africa. However, it was carefully and quietly arranged that the "gold expert" should also be an expert on chrome and other ores. He will look into these while he is in South Africa.

NOTE—The delicate South African political situation was behind the removal of General Auchinleck, blamed by the Boers for the fall of Tobruk and Rommel's earlier victory.

Kaiser, Nelson No Nearer To Solution

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Donald M. Nelson and Henry Kaiser, after two days of seeming hide-and-seek, were apparently no closer last night to a solution of the cargo plane problem than they were before Kaiser arrived in town.

Nelson said last night, however, after a long session with Kaiser and his engineers, that they will meet daily until they reach a "logical conclusion" to the problem.

(More information was available, meanwhile, about the kind of "flying freighters" Kaiser wants to build for the Government and for which, he asserted, he has "complete" plans.

(The big plane, it was learned, would weigh 250,000 pounds and, depending upon the round-trip distance to be flown, would carry between 30 and 50 tons of cargo. It would have a speed of 200 miles an hour and would have twin hulls described as being approximately the size of the hulls in the famous "clipper" line of flying boats.)

The War Production Board chairman and the West Coast shipbuilder have had some trouble getting together since Kaiser arrived Wednesday morning.

Kaiser had a date late Wednesday afternoon with Nelson. Kaiser's engineers were supposed to be there to exhibit detailed plans for the plane which Kaiser proposes to build. Kaiser showed up, but the engineers somehow got lost on the way.

Yesterday morning Kaiser found two of his engineers. No explanation was forthcoming as to how they missed Wednesday's appointment.

After he found the engineers, he left his headquarters, leaving no word with his secretary as to where he could be reached. His engineers presumably were with him, and supposedly were talking with various Federal officials.

Early in the afternoon, Nelson decided he would like to see Kaiser and his cohorts. Finally, at some time shortly after 4 o'clock, the Kaiser entourage was located. Then the shipbuilder and his engineers came to Nelson's office at about 5 o'clock.

They stayed with the WPB czar until about 6:30, at which time newsmen who had been waiting in the outer office were called in.

Price Bills Wait Recess End

ing what action the President is to take.

Today's conference between the two groups was called to stave off launching action on divergent measures. No Administration draft has yet appeared, and none is expected.

Meanwhile it was learned that floors under farm prices, suggested by the President for action at some future date, have been sidetracked from the Senate measure at preliminary conferences. Spokesmen said that their inclusion at this time would inevitably involve some floors under wages and would delay any emergency action on ceilings.

The nearest thing to a commitment on the proposed Senate bill was given on the Senate floor by Senator Brown in response to an inquiry by Senate Minority Leader McNary.

McNary, before consenting to Senate Banking Committee jurisdiction, asked if the bill would "refer generally to price control affecting raw materials produced on the farm and wage control." He also asked whether "it will embrace all the factors involved in cost of production and cost of living."

"That is correct," Brown replied.

The Michigan Democrat, who indicated he would introduce the Senate bill tomorrow in behalf of himself and Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, said the Senate Banking Committee has made tentative arrangements to hear Government officials on Monday, farm spokesmen on Tuesday and other interested parties on Wednesday. He said a report to the Senate before the end of next week was his hope.

"I recognize that if we are to have consideration early, we must have the proposed legislation in the Senate before the tax bill," said Brown.

Speaker Rayburn meanwhile was quietly continuing talks with ranking members of the House Banking Committee in an effort to pave the way for action without hearings, a major source of delay in the House.

Cooperating to this end, Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan, speaking for other minority banking committeemen in town, announced they were willing to act without hearings. Previously, Representative Gore (Democrat) of Tennessee, original House sponsor of "Baruch Plan" over-all controls, made a similar announcement.

Speaker Rayburn was reported still holding out for a simple, all-embracing resolution, that would authorize and direct the President to take whatever action was necessary to stabilize the cost of living.

This would avoid specific mention of farm price and wage control, and lay out no formula for controlling them, simply putting the job up to the President. This might be modified by excluding the controversial phrase, "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law."

House leaders felt that once Congress attempts a detailed formula, delaying actions would be fought around the precise terms that would indefinitely hold up the bill. Farm State representatives, however, were insisting that wage action be specifically tied to farm price control, and that the bill do so by name. Others were objecting to so "wide open" a grant of executive power as the simple resolution provides. They wanted either a prior commitment by the President on what wage action he will take, or very definite instructions in the bill.

U. S. Charges du Pont Slowed Plastics Trade

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Sept. 10.—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of Wilmington, Del., and Rohm & Haas Co. of Bristol, Pa., were accused by the Federal Government today of conspiring with a German corporation to suppress competition in the manufacture of a plastic vital to construction of warplanes.

In an indictment returned by a Federal grand jury August 10 but kept secret until today, the firms were accused of entering into a conspiracy in restraint of interstate and foreign trade in acrylic products. These are used to make the transparent noses of bombers, cockpit hoods and machine gun turrets.

Named with them, but not made a defendant, was Rohm & Haas, GmbH, identified as a corporation organized and operating under the German Reich. The combination was alleged to have been formed October 30, 1934, and to have continued until the present.

The two American corporations and three others also were indicted on a charge of conspiracy to restrain trade in "methyl methacrylate," a new plastic material used to make dentures, the plates holding false teeth and used extensively in making tableware, furniture and other products.

Eight company officials were also indicted in the acrylate case and 12 in the latter.

Trial After War

Attorney General Biddle announced that trial of both cases would be postponed until after the war at the request of the Secretaries of War and Navy. A previous indictment, in which the du Pont company was charged with monopolizing the manufacture and sale of dyestuffs, also has been postponed for the duration.

The individual defendants in the plastics indictment included Lammot duPont, chairman of the duPont company; W. F. Herrington, vice president, and F. A. Wardenburg, A. E. Pitcher and W. W. Perry, other duPont officials. Others named were Otto Haas, president; E. C. B. Kirsopp, vice president, and D. S. Frederick, manager of the plastics department, all of Rohm & Haas.

The second indictment included in addition to the duPont and the Rohm & Haas companies, Lammot duPont, Wardenburg, Pitcher, Perry, Haas and Frederick, the L. D. Caulk Dental Supply Co., Milford, Del., its president, G. Layton Grier, and William V. Grier, manager of dental sales; the Vernon-Benshoff Co., Pittsburgh, and L. B. Vernon, its president, and H. M. Vernon, an executive; and the Kerr Dental Manufacturing Co., Detroit, and Robert M. Kerr, sr., president, and Robert M. Kerr, jr., an executive.

The first indictment alleges that the two companies manufactured the entire production of Acrylic products in the United States, and that, in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, they fixed identical prices, restricted production and divided world markets.

Steel Output 4 Million Tons Below Monthly Need

our five million tons of production fit a demand of around nine million tons a month."

It explained that this "lack of balance" was caused by:

1. The ingenuity of American industry in turning out implements of war, as exampled by a reduction of the time required to counterbore 280 holes in the crankcase of an airplane engine from 6 hours to 65 minutes, so that "we have a capacity to 'chew up' steel faster than we can make it."

2. The fact that steelmaking capacity cannot be expanded as rapidly as the plants which consume steel, which is "why the plants operating on war contracts have had to slow down at times for lack of materials."

3. The need of big steel users to receive "a substantial quantity of the steel they consume some time in advance of its use."

The WPB gave this report on where some of the finished steel goes:

Tanks—"It takes about 38 tons of steel to make a medium tank and the United States is turning out a lot of them."

Ships—"Present goals are for eight million tons of dead-weight shipping this year and 16 million tons in 1943. Each cargo ship of the Liberty type now being made in quantity under direction of the Maritime Commission calls for approximately 4500 tons of rough steel. Current production is around 70 ships a month."

Guns—"Some of our antiaircraft guns use up 14 tons of steel each; thousands of rifles, machine guns, antitank guns and howitzers use steel, all the way up to the giant 16-inchers that take 576 tons of steel each."

Also, the WPB noted, "it takes half a ton of steel to make one of the 2000-pound bombs the British have been dumping on German cities lately."

Colliflower for Rapid-Fire Scrap Drive

January and June, and had already 7,500,000 pounds toward the District 34 million quota for the last six months, only a slight speeding up of the program would be required to meet the quota.

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, pointed out, however, that this actually meant that between now and the time the snow flies—when the scrap must be on hand—the District must collect just about as much as it did during the entire first half of the year.

Answering the objection of Walker and the dealers that a concentrated drive would amass a large stockpile which would be difficult to process and would impair the public faith in the collection, Jones said:

"It makes no difference what you or I or any individual says. We've had our orders to get the scrap out, and we have to follow them. We have no more business arguing about that than soldiers would after getting their orders.

"They told us they needed five million tons of scrap, and it's up to us to get it for them. When an urgent call like this goes, out the only thing to do is to answer it. Once we get the metal, if it's put up to the dealers to increase their facilities to handle it, I'm sure the dealers will do it."

Colliflower, explaining that he had been out of the city and had had no chance to confer with his executive secretary, flatly disagreed with Walker.

"In view of the real seriousness of the situation, I cannot agree with Mr. Walker that a slow and gradual campaign would be sufficient," he said. "Once we get the metal out of the homes and at deposits, we have control of it, and then the problem of getting it processed and to the mills can be worked out. I'm sure that with our determination and ingenuity, this can be done."

The results of the aluminum drive of 1941 were repeatedly cited by the opponents of the all-out campaign. Because the aluminum, which was collected without the cooperation of dealers, remained piled up in storage for many months, Walker and Xanten stated that it would be unwise to gather the scrap metal the same way.

However, Xanten said that whatever plan was adopted the city refuse trucks and other facilities would be available. "And we can do the job, if that's the job decided upon," he said.

Barringer, vigorously opposing the concerted drive idea, said that America has not failed once to make the same mistakes that Hitler and England have made in their war economy. He said that this intensive campaigning had been tried in both countries, always resulting in bottlenecks.

"We should profit by their examples and go in for the slow and efficient drive," he said.

All of the advocates of the immediate campaign intended it only to supplement, not to supplant the organization set up by the salvage committee. The only difference would be in the speed and quantity of present collections.

Walker maintained that the overall salvage picture resembled two fans, meeting at the tips. The top fan represented the collection efforts, where the scrap is brought from many sources to the distributional point, whence they are again spread out to the factories. A sudden influx of scrap to the distribution point would, he feared, clog the works.

But as brought out by B. M. McKelway, associate editor of the Evening Star, it would not necessarily slow up the processing if the metal were gathered right away at the depots the committee is planning; then the dealers could work out the most efficient method of getting the scrap to market.

Walker then argued that the sporadic drive would only account for about 45 per cent of the available scrap.

"Then we shall have to go back and get up the rest, and how can we do that if the people's faith has been broken?" he asked. "That's what happens to every speedy drive. They all bog down midway, and then there's no good will left to carry through the permanent long range drive."

McKelway replied that the WPB for a quick campaign was more urgent than any fear of criticism.

"Even if we get a great pile accumulated and it stays, we will have done our part," he said. "It's not our business how or when it is absorbed. We were only asked to collect it, and that's our job."

A comment by Barringer that Nelson had put the editors "on the spot" was promptly discounted. "The WPB is clutching at every possible means of getting the scrap," Barringer added. "But I think it will find that the long haul will, in the end, prove the quickest method."

Captain Whitehurst entered the argument toward its conclusion, coming out emphatically for the quick drive. He said that he had offered the committee a 1000-pound iron safe three weeks ago, and that it had never been collected. To objections that the safe was probably 70 per cent concrete, Whitehurst replied that even so, if there were 300 pounds of iron in it, there should be some way to get it out.

Walker reported that to date between 160 to 175 of the proposed 670 salvage depots already are set up, and that 46 were actually in operation. Whether these, or a central depository—or both—would be used for the rapid-fire campaign was not determined. Because of the objections of dealers that the single stock-pile would eliminate all small dealers from participating in the drive, a decentralized collection might be indicated.

Jones argued not only for a knock-out salvage campaign, but also for a salvage organization that would be geared to meet any emergency as well as to carry on its continuing program.

"This is a terrific emergency," he said. "While I am in sympathy with the long-range plan, the organization must be able to meet any emergency calls, whether it be this, or for more rubber, or for more tin. Anytime the country needs anything right away, we must be ready to get it. We've got to jump into the fight and give them both barrels."

Young, who seemed inclined to the quick campaign, promised that the Commissioners would reach a decision today.

Others attending the meeting were Commissioners Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz, Assistant Engineer Commissioner Beverly Snow, who first postulated the gradual campaign argument, J. Shipley Troth of the WPB, District Sanitary Engineer J. Blake Gordon, Hyman Viner, Joseph and Philip Smith, junk dealers, Herbert Corn and William Hill of the Evening Star, and John O'Rourke of the Washington Daily News.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

President May Get Power to Fix U. S. Pay

The President would be given the authority to fix the salaries of the 2,300,000 Federal workers under a resolution which is being drafted for Speaker Rayburn. The speaker favors giving the President broad powers to fix all wages. The bill in Congress to pay overtime to Federal workers would be dropped if the Rayburn plan was put into effect. In any event, the Administration will insist that no distinction be made between private and public employes and every effort will be made to make the salaries uniform before they are "frozen." This would mean that the overtime provisions of private industry would be applied to the Government service.

Ugo Carusi, executive assistant to Attorney General Biddle, got on the Attorney General's private elevator the other day. The elevator stopped between floors. Carusi used the phone in the elevator to call for help from the building mechanic. He waited several minutes and the elevator phone rang. A voice said: "Some guy is stuck on the AG's elevator. Get him off." The caller hung up as Carusi was yelling: "You're telling me." The official was finally rescued after a long wait.

The latest edict of James C. Petrillo, the A. F. L. radio dictator, which would restrict the use of radio transcriptions, has radio people in the Federal service worried. In the first place, the Government is by far the largest user of radio transcriptions. The transcriptions are made by the hundreds here at Government studios. War bonds, Army and Navy openings and much other vital war information is publicized through transcriptions. Many of the transcriptions have music and Petrillo tells the radio stations what music it can play and when. You can be sure the Government will crack down on the labor czar if its toes are stepped on.

If the WPB conservation division had done a good job, many believe, the intensive campaign now in progress to collect scrap wouldn't have been necessary. The scrap is available but WPB has fallen down on the job of getting it to the steel mills. Chief of the division is Julius Rosenwald, who was formerly Donald Nelson's boss at Sears-Roebuck. The shelving of Rosenwald and some of his assistants is understood to have been urged on Nelson for some time. Latest report is that the salvage work will be taken out of the division and put under a vigorous person who can get the job done That would be a typical solution to a bad Government problem.

From all the street corner gossip you'd conclude that everyone in OPA gets all the gasoline he wants. But, of course, it isn't so. Sarah Turman, an employe in the secretary's office, for example, applied for and received a B ration card. Her husband—an Army officer—was transferred out of the city last week and the very next day she turned her B card back. His leaving meant fewer miles . . . Lou Hazam, who writes radio scripts on the great outdoors for the Interior Department, will have his first children's book published next week. It's called: "The Pig with a Straight Tail."

Col. Roy Lord has been definitely refused a transfer by the Army to head up the new scientific and technical division at WPB. Meantime, the division has no active head and what work, if any, gets done in spite of indecision at the top. An urgent appeal was made to Congress to appropriate funds for the division. The money became available two months ago but now the WPB bigwigs can't decide what to do about it.

Office of War Information will go to Congress next week to ask for an oppropriation for the first time. It's a good guess that OWI officials will be quizzed on the large staff that has been built up and the few economies that have been made by the consolidation of the information agencies. OWI is filled with public relations people but one of them cracked yesterday after it had muffed the story of the meeting here of Allied propaganda chiefs: "What OWI needs is a director of public relations for OWI . . ."

Rescued, Almost

Farmington, Utah.—Sheriff's deputies, a State highway patrolman and a deputy United States marshal overtook an automobile that North Farmington residents said was carrying a bound and gagged woman. It was, almost. She had a handkerchief tied cross her face—trying to relieve a case of hay fever.

Mama, Where's My Saw?

Olympia Wash.—Carl Neal, supervisor of Olympic National Forest, reports he saw in the Quinalt River area a felled spruce tree scaling 38,000 board feet of lumber. Neal said it would sell for $1200—or a net profit of $400 on the single tree.

Henderson Urged as Gas Rate 'Czar'

Pending D. C. Rate Raise Would Be Covered by Bill Of Senator Norris

In a move to block proposed District gas-rate increases, Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska yesterday asked the Senate to give Price Administrator Leon Henderson control over public utility rate boosts.

Senator Norris introduced a bill to provide that no public utility rate could be increased without the consent of the price administrator, and said that while it would apply to the entire country the legislation was aimed primarily at the District.

His proposal came on the eve of a District Public Utilities Commission hearing, set for 10 a. m. today, at which representatives of the Washington Gas Light Co. are expected to ask final approval for the rate increases that had originally been scheduled to go into effect September 1.

Senator Norris seconded the plea which OPA Counsel Harry Booth had urged upon the District PUC, that the rates charged by the public utility enter into the cost of living and increases must be controlled as a guard against inflation.

Pointing out that the Price Control Act does not give Henderson power over utility rates, Senator Norris explained that the OPA organization had succeeded in persuading public utilities in various parts of the country to prevent rate boosts, but had been unable to do this in Washington.

In line with his effort to get the gas light company to waive the rate increases due under Washington's sliding scale rate system, Booth had urged that the wartime taxes should not be considered a part of the rate base. PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan, however, ruled last Monday that the rate hearing was not the time to consider altering basic elements of the sliding scale system.

Chairman Flanagan last night declined to comment on the Norris proposal. As for the local rate hearing, he said that the commission would be just as anxious as the gas light company representatives to see the hearings completed, but that it was doubtful whether this would be accomplished today.

Merchants Ask December School Holiday

If the District school children are to be given a month's holiday this winter, as the Board of Education is considering, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association would like it to be between Thanksgiving and Christmas rather than in January, as suggested.

In a letter to the Board of Education, which Wednesday discussed the possibility of keeping schools open Saturdays during the Fall and closing them for the month of January to save fuel costs, Arthur J. Sundlun, association president, proposed the earlier vacation.

It would give ambitious high school students a chance to work in shops during the pre-Christmas season and earn enough money to do some shopping of their own, Sundlun pointed out. Furthermore, it would be of inestimable help to the merchants, who otherwise face a serious labor shortage for the rush season.

In addition, Sundlun said, his suggestion would result in only three weeks of extra vacation, but taking into account the regular holidays would keep the school buildings closed quite as long as the January holiday would. Sundlun thought it would effect almost as great a saving of fuel.

The board, which will consider the earlier proposition at its meeting next Wednesday, was told Wednesday that it cost $5000 last year to heat three schools with oil, and $35,000 to heat the rest with coal.

5 D. C. Area Aides Complete Courses At Nursing School

Five Washington girls were graduated last night from the Bryn Mawr College summer school of nursing. They, with the 71 other graduates of the course, will continue training in the nursing schools of Johns Hopkins, Columbia-Presbyterian or Lincoln Hospitals as part of the Federal program for nurses training.

The local graduates are Elizabeth B. Beavers, Box 151, Sandy Spring, Md.; Mabelyn Bertholf, Stony Vista, Uniontown Road, Westminster, Md.; Mary A. Bier, 2030 Pierce Road Northwest; Cordella R. Burwell, 2822 Sherman Avenue Northwest, and Ada A. Randall, 1944 Third Street Northwest.

Boy, 7, Injured By Automobile

Cloyd Jones, 7, who resides at 1315 North Capitol Street, was in an undetermined condition last night at Sibley Hospital where he was removed after being struck by an auto as he crossed O Street between North Capitol and First Streets Northwest. He was treated for facial lacerations and possible fractures of the chin and left leg.

The auto was driven by William Ford, Negro, 53, of 213 O Street Northwest.

Wilhite Sanity Jury Sent HomeForNight

A jury of six men and six women had not reached a decision last night in the sanity hearing of Richard L. Wilhite, 17, accused slayer of Miss Madeline Matthes, Jehovah's Witnesses worker, after deliberating more than eight hours in District Court.

At 11 p. m., the jury returned to the courtroom and after a brief charge by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, was sent home to return at 10 a. m. today. The jurors were sent home and not to a hotel, Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius said, because United States marshals were unable to find accommodations in a hotel for them.

Justice Letts told the jury that everyone is presumed to be sane and in the event the youth is found sane, he will have to stand trial on an indictment charging him with first degree murder. If he is adjudged insane, Justice Letts said, he will be sent to an institution for treatment.

Members of the jury told Justice Letts that they stood nine to three, but gave no indication whether the majority thought him sane or not.

Uniformed Man Gets $25, Liquor In Store Holdup

A man wearing a soldier's uniform last night robbed a liquor store clerk of $25, which he said he needed to get to Texas, and then fled after grabbing a half pint of cheap liquor from the store shelves.

Mrs. Veronica Robinson, clerk in the Hamilton Liquor Store, 1020 Fourteenth Street Northwest, said the man entered the store at 9 p. m., brandishing a snub-nosed blue steel revolver.

She told police she insisted that "you can't do this to me," but allowed the robber to win the argument when he became overly active with the weapon.

FSA Aide Urges Expansion Of Social Security Program

Assistant FSA Administrator Watson B. Miller yesterday urged expansion of the social security programs as a war measure and advocated extension of unemployment insurance "to protect the returned soldier and to cover all kinds of jobs not now covered."

These jobs he enumerated before the Federal Bar Association's luncheon meeting yesterday as domestic service, farm jobs, employment in non-profit institutions as well as in business and industrial establishments and the self-employed. "We want to include employes of small farms, as well as large ones. Half the States now provide benefits only for employes of firms with eight or more on the payroll," he stated.

The social security programs, he said, "must be maintained for the sake of the present and the future. And they should not be static. I believe they should be expanded and this should be done now as a war measure—no less."

"As to unemployment benefits, the great inadequacy at present is their limited duration," he asserted. "Last year the figures for the country as a whole showed that 50 per cent of the workers who had qualified for unemployment benefits exhausted their benefit rights before they found their next job. In some States that percentage was as high as 80 per cent. If that was the situation in a period of rising employment, it is easy to imagine what it would be when a decline sets in."

The administrator said there is a great inconsistency among the States as to eligibility and benefit provisions, "and this creates interstate problems of serious import to unemployed men and women who have worked in more than one State.

"We want to see uniform eligibility and benefit provisions, with liberal standards and without the present interstate complications. We want to see also a sounder financial basis than some of the States can or do provide by themselves. A national pooling of funds to meet the requirements of a national unemployment problem is to our minds much sounder as well as more logical than 50 State funds, with the heaviest strains often times on the weakest States," the administrator said.

Hearings Set On D. C. Tax Exemptions

The fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee will hold open hearings Monday and Tuesday morning on the bill to clarify Washington's law in regard to tax exemption of institutions.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman, said the general public would be heard on Monday and that Tuesday's hearings would be given over to testimony by District officials.

The Senate District Committee will meet in executive session this morning to vote on its draft of the measure.

A clarification of the tax laws was asked several weeks ago as a result of protests from hospitals, educational and charitable institutions which had been removed from the tax exempt lists by District officials.

Following a strict interpretation of the law, which provides at present that exemption can be made only for educational institutions "not used for private gain" and for charities operated "without charge to inmates" and without profit of income, Budget Officer Walter Fowler removed a number of private hospitals and educational institutions from the tax-exempt lists.

Chairman McCarran said yesterday a "liberal policy" had been followed in the Senate bill, but that everybody claiming exemption would be provided with it.

Muriel Hinds to Head AWVS Night School

The American Women's Voluntary Services yesterday announced the appointment of Muriel Hinds as director of the night training school at A'VVS headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue.

Miss Hinds has worked with the AWVS for two years, bringing to the "night staff an enthusiasm that accounted for a rising tide of registrants in the evening classes." She was born in England and has spent most of her life in Europe, but is now an American citizen.

FTC Accuses 2 in Trapping Of Debtors

The "lure" of sharing in make-believe "trust funds" is being used as a means of securing from debtors information useful to their creditors, the Federal Trade Commission charged yesterday in issuing a complaint against Sidney Dean Sarff and H. J. Whittington, who maintain an office at 1420 New York Avenue Northwest, and Edward Lowenthal of Chicago.

The "trust funds" occasionally materialized, the FTC said, as sums ranging from one to four cents which Lowenthal took from his own resources and sent to debtors who mailed in the requested information.

According to the complaint, Lowenthal is in the busines of selling and distributing printed matter known to bill collectors as "lures," one of which reads as follows:

"The name of —— is among those to whom we have been ordered to pay a sum of money from a trust fund. From information received we believe you are this person, but under the provisions of the trust we are compelled to obtain positive identification before payment can be made. For this reason we require the complete information requested below——"

The cards were signed "International Research" and, the F. T. C. said, are stamped and addressed by the purchasers, returned to Lowenthal and then sent by him to Sarff and Whittington who mail them out. All return letters received by the two Washington respondents are sent to Lowenthal, the complaint charges and then distributed by him to the proper customers.

The complaint, which charges false representation in several particulars, falls in the same field as those which recently were issued by the commission against William E. Spicer, chairman of Draft Board No. 5, who was charged with being a party to sending out collection cards falsely giving the impression that they came from the Federal Government and with using cards which bore a signature resembling that of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau.

Douglas Steinberg Wins Lieutenancy In 3d Air Force

Douglas S. Steinberg, son of Dean S. S. Steinberg of the College of Engineering at the University of Maryland, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Third Air Force at MacDill Field, Tampa, Fla., after completing officers' training.

Young Steinberg was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1940 and was active in student affairs there. He was a member of the Washington National Guard when he was mustered into service in February of 1941.

USO to Observe First Anniversary

Three dances going simultaneously will mark the first anniversary celebration of the U. S. O. of the Y. W. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest, Saturday night, Director Mabel Cook announced yesterday.

Two of the dances will be in the "Y" and the other in a roped-off section of Seventeenth Street. In the receiving line with Miss Cook will be Lieut. Comdr. Mildred H. McAfee, director of the WAVES; Sidney Taliaferro, chairman of the local U. S. O. Council; John Schoolcraft, assistant regional U. S. O. director; Elsa Peterson, president of the "Y," Floyd Akers, chairman of the Community War Fund, and Mrs. William Chevy, assistant U. S. O. director.

All Quiet On Raid Aide Front

Warden Squabble In Southeast Area Settled, None Will Quit, Chief Says

Chief Air-raid Warden Mileham and wardens of Sector 11, Zone 5, Southeast area, last night agreed that in the future all air raid equipment would be purchased by the Southeast area civilian defense committee treasury, and that all funds now in the hands of the sector would be turned over to the treasury.

It also was stipulated that the sector wardens would not conduct any more collections for purchase of equipment. The equipment already acquired by the sector is to remain with them.

"The wardens are all back on good terms and everybody is satisfied," declared Mileham.

Controversy developed in the Southeast area when W. G. Cornelius, deputy warden, ordered the sector to turn over the $18 it had in its treasury to the zone. When the sector refused Cornelius ordered Charles I. Schwinger, zone warden, to take up OCD equipment issued to Sector 11 and expunge the names of those who refused to comply with the orders from his books.

A number of wardens threatened to quit if Paul H. Delawter, sector warden, were forced to resign for upholding the contention of the sector that the citizens of that area had donated the funds and were not willing to have them thrown into a general pool without a more definite understanding as to the entire setup.

Bladensburg Bicentennial Starts Today

Historic Bladensburg will celebrate the bicentennial anniversary of the founding of the town today and tomorrow with an elaborate program to be staged in conjunction with the annual two-day convention of the Prince Georges County Firemen's Association.

Men and women of the town will be garbed in Colonial dress for the occasion and hoopskirted ladies will be on hand to show visitors through a number of the historic homes and land sites of the town.

Bladensburg, which at one time was the most important tobacco exporting town in the county, is noted as the site of the Battle of Bladensburg in the War of 1812 when the British defeated a detachment of American militia while the former were marching against Washington culminating in the burning of the White House and Capitol.

Noted Dueling Grounds

The town is also the site of the country's most famous dueling ground where early American statesmen settled questions of honor with pistols. Commodore Stephan Decatur was killed there in a duel. The Palo Alto, a tavern near the historic cock-fighting grounds, is reputed to be the birthplace of the "cocktail."

The first postoffice in the United States was established at Bladensburg by Benjamin Franklin in 1775.

State Senator Harold Sothoron and John S. White, majority floor leader of the Maryland House of Delegates, will be the principal speakers at the opening business session of the firemen's convention tonight at the Bladensburg Elementary School. At the same time the ladies' auxiliary will hold its opening business session at the Bladensburg firehouse, at which Robert W. McCullough, attorney of Tuxedo, Md., will speak.

The convention program tomorrow will begin at noon with the registration of visiting firemen and a parade at 2 p. m., led by Andrew Gasch, Bladensburg fire chief and a descendant of one of the town's first settlers. In the line of march will be 25 county fire companies, 15 ladies auxiliary units and six rescue squads and a number of fire companies from Montgomery, Arlington and Fairfax Counties and from Alexandria, Annapolis, Rosedale, West Annapolis, Herald Harbor, North Beach and Leonardtown.

Others in the parade will be the Maryland State Guard, the Minutemen, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Boy and Girl Scouts. Music will be provided by the Washington Elks' Club Band, the National Training School Band and the Seat Pleasant Drum and Bugle Corps.

Prizes are to be awarded the fire companies, rescue squad and ladies auxiliary unit making the best appearance in the parade. Later the fire companies will compete for trophies in fire-fighting contests. Officials of the Washington and Baltimore Fire Departments will serve as judges.

Following a dinner given by the ladies auxiliary at 5 p. m. at St. Luke's Parish House the convention will conclude with a final business session and election of officers for the coming year.

Gas Supplement Seekers Advised

Persons eligible to apply for renewal of supplemental gasoline rations should do so within 30 days before expiration of present rations, Whitney Leary, District OPA director, said Wednesday.

Leary advised the various area boards handling requests for renewal that in addition to investigating supplemental rations already issued, applications should also be closely investigated before renewal.

Disease-Peril Study Starts Today in S.E.

Southeast Washington has been chosen by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, as the beginning point of the house-to-house survey to be started today by his department as a means of determining the potential danger of epidemics locally.

This area includes both the Frederick Douglass and the Knox Hill housing projects, and the volunteer women workers will be ringing doorbells in those parts soon after 9 a. m., according to Mrs. Olive Walker Swinney, executive secretary of the mobilization division of the District OCD.

Householders are expected to be prepared to answer the canvassers with information about the immunity status of children and adults in their families.

Catholics Weigh New School Plan

Children to Get Two Hours of Church Training Twice a Week

Overcrowded conditions in the Capital make more imperative than ever the need of religious instruction for Catholic children attending public schools, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, said here yesterday.

He addressed 130 priests meeting in Carroll Hall, on G Street near Tenth Northwest, to discuss further steps for a city-wide plan of religious instruction for Catholic children in public schools, under the leadership of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine of the Washington area.

According to the plan as outlined by the Archbishop and by the Rev. Dr. Leo McCormick, director of the confraternity of the Washington area, Catholic children in public schools will spend two hours a day for two days a week after public school hours in a special religious education course in the parochial school nearest their public schools.

Calls for Uniformity

Archbishop Curley's recommendation for the adoption of such a plan calls for uniformity according to directions supplied by the office of the director.

Each parish in the Washington area is being urged to establish a branch of the confraternity under the direction of the pastor or his assistant.

The parish organization will include teachers (sisters teaching in the parochial schools), "fishers" and helpers appointed by the director. The "fishers" will be a group of adults giving one hour or more weekly in recruiting public school children for religious instruction. "Fishers" will be allotted limited districts and they will visit every home where there are Catholic children attending public school. The sisters, together with the parish clergy, will follow a graded course of studies in instructing the children.

Father FitzGibbons Speaks

The Rev. Francis X. FitzGibbons, director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine in the Brooklyn Diocese, told the priests at the meeting that more than 80,000 Catholic children attending public schools in his diocese were now receiving religious instruction after public school hours. The plan that he said was adopted about six years ago is similar to the one proposed for the Washington area.

Another speaker was the Rev. Thomas A. Ryan, director of the confraternity in the Philadelphia, Pa., area. Also attending the discussions were the Rev. John J. Duggan, confraternity director in the Baltimore area; the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Collins, S. S., professor of Catechetics at Catholic University.

WarBondRally Nets $30,000 In Bethesda

Thirty thousand dollars in war-bond purchases was collected last night in the Bethesda community Victory Day program, it was announced last night by Nelson Smith, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Employes of the community's stores pledged more than $6000 in purchases to the drive, while a large part of the total was collected during a "whiteout" in stores, during which nothing was sold between 8:30 and 8:45 p. m. but war bonds and stamps.

The program started with a community sing at the Parking Shop, Wisconsin Avenue and Leland Street, and terminated with a rally at Hampden and Wisconsin Avenues, with music furnished by The Washington Gas Light Band. Arch MacDonald, radio announcer, was master of ceremonies.

Chief attraction at the rally was a torpedo on which bond purchasers signed their names, sending their personal regards to the Axis.

Police Seek Girl Who Dropped $1000 in Loot

Police last night were searching for an 11-year-old girl who dropped a first aid kit containing stolen jewels valued at more than $1000 in the rear of the Y. W. C. A. at 901 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

The loot, including a valuable strand of pearls, several rings and other articles, including the first aid kit, was stolen during the day from the room of Henrietta Abernathy, who resides in the "Y". Miss Abernathy reported the theft to Miss Dorothy Height, secretary, who a short time later saw the girl in the rear of the building with the kit under her arm.

When Miss Height screamed at the child, the latter dropped the box and fled. Nothing was missing when the kit was returned to its owner, police said.

Mid City Defense Meeting Tomorrow

Arnall Appears Victorious in Georgia Battle

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Sept. 10.—Ellis Gibbs Arnall, who campaigned for 10 months on a pledge to "destroy dictatorship" in Georgia, tonight apparently had dealt Eugene Talmadge a political knockout in their battle for the State's Democratic governorship.

The 35-year-old attorney general, conductor of the most extensive hand-shaking campaign Georgia has known, steadily increased his lead in belated and unofficial returns over the veteran Talmadge, but the 57-year-old Governor refused to concede defeat and had no comment.

Talmadge, three-time chief executive and known as the "Sage from Sugar Creek," staked his bid for reelection on the issues of "white supremacy, State's rights, local self-government and old-time religion."

Calls Racial Issue Fake

Arnall belittled the racial issue by insisting it was a "fake" to becloud the situation, and today emphatically claimed victory for "good government."

In the latest, unofficial tabulation of votes, Arnall had won 81 counties, with a total unit vote of 241, 35 more than necessary for the nomination. Talmadge had won 49 counties, with 109 unit votes. Arnall had a wide margin in the popular vote.

House Whip Robert Ramspeck appeared to have retained his seat in the House in a close primary finish against two opponents.

Complete, unofficial returns from the Fifth (Atlanta) District showed the veteran Administration leader with 22,664 to 21,152 for Jere Wells, former county superintendent, and 3534 for J. E. B. Stewart.

Only a plurality of the popular vote is required for the renomination.

Both his opponents hammered at his authorship of the repealed act which provided pensions for members of Congress.

Representative E. E. Cox, vice chairman of the House Rules Committee, had an apparent safe lead over J. H. Smithwich of Moultrie, a former Congressman.

Peterson Apparently In

Representative Hugh Peterson of the First District also apparently won renomination over two opponents.

Representative Frank Whelchel was also apparently leading his opponent, Phil Landrum, a school teacher, in enough counties to win.

Representative John Gibson held on to a narrow lead in the Eighth District. Incomplete returns showed Gibson with 3031 votes to 2934 for his closest opponent, Emory Bass of Valdosta. Braswell Deen of Alma, a former Congressman, had 1590 votes, and T. V. Williams of Douglas was trailing with 155 votes. Nomination is by popular vote.

Charter Foes, Backers Toss New Charges

Charges and countercharges continued to fill the air of Montgomery County last night as spokesmen for the County Charter Committee and the United Democratic Organization continued their fight over the election of a charter board.

Through Joseph A. Cantrel and J. Bond Smith of its publicity committee, the Democratic organization assailed what they termed the "partisan activity" of Allen H. Gardiner of the Fusion-Republican-Charter Coalition, while Gardiner in turn demanded that Cantrel and Smith publicly announce that they "favored" the right of the people through petition to vote in November on the election of a charter board and that they postpone any opposition until they know what kind of a charter is drafted.

In addition, Cantrel and Smith accused Mrs. Willie Green Day Perry of "working with complete political venom and deception for the 1942 Republican Fusion candidates whose administration in 1934 produced the most general era of confusion, corruption and incompetence that Montgomery County has ever seen."

In yesterday's blast against Gardner, Smith and Cantrel said: "Mr. Gardner is the only politician in Montgomery County who pretends to know nothing of this partisan activity by charter workers. In his 'civic and nonpartisan' activity he has not lifted a finger to stop the false and scurrilous abuse of the Democratic record, Democratic officials and the Democratic candidates, currently being dished out by his workers and petition solicitors."

Gardner, in turn, contented himself with the mild request for the public pronouncement by the opposition of his two leading statements. "Such reconsideration will have the effect of attacking our local government problems together without partisanship or malice," he concluded his open letter.

In their statements on Mrs. Perry, the Democrats questioned the "comfort she found in the fact that the man who succeeded her went to jail by misappropriation of public funds" by commenting that not only was he a Republican-Fusion appointee, but that two others of the party appointees were similarly indicted.

Finally, Cantrel and Smith publicized a letter they had written W. M. Kiplinger, Republican publicity committee member, in which they trusted that he would not approve "strategy so dishonest politically."

2 Authors of Nazi Poster Which Tormented Sailor's Mother Quit Fight to Avoid Trial Here

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Facing a Washington judge and jury in a few weeks—on a charge of seditious conspiracy—will be the authors of the cruel and nasty poster used by Nazi propagandists to torment the mother of a sailor killed by a Nazi torpedo a year ago.

These men, Donald J. McDaniel and Otto Brennermann, late today gave up their struggle to stay in Chicago and will stand trial beside 26 others accused with them of plotting to corrupt the loyalty of the armed forces.

However, a third alleged conspirator, Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, who admitted today that she knew a dozen of her fellow defendants, planned a last-ditch fight against removal to Washington. Her counsel said that if U. S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker should rule against Mrs. Dilling tomorrow, she would at once ask for a writ of habeas corpus.

Mrs. Dilling—Red baiter, fiery isolationist and organizer of "mothers" demonstrations against aid to England—agitated so furiously in Washington last year that she was twice convicted of disorderly conduct.

History of Case

Guarding a convoy, the United States destroyer Kearney was torpedoed off Iceland last October 17, the first American ship of war attacked by the Nazis. The Kearney limped into port with a great hole in her hull and 11 of her sailors dead. Their names were given out 12 days later.

One of the dead was George Alexander Calvert, jr., a farm youth from Gillespie, Ill. A week later, the Nation was shocked by the revelation, in The Washington Post, that the Nazi propaganda machine was deriding his family's grief. To his mother was sent a note blaming his death on President Roosevelt and a poster which depicted the President, Wendell Willkie and dozens of other American leaders leering with joy over the crucifixion of the traditional figure of Uncle Sam.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan observed a definite link between this poster and other propaganda which had come before them. After months of dogged detective work by the Secret Service, McDaniel was summoned before the special grand jury on Axis agents in Washington and Brennermann was grilled by Federal grand jurors in Chicago. On July 31, the special grand jury indicted them, with Mrs. Dilling and 25 more on two counts of conspiracy.

McDaniel's Ideas

McDaniel, a dentist, was a member of the Citizens No Foreign War Coalition and the American First Committee. Both were branded by the grand jury as instruments of the alleged conspiracy. It was McDaniel who conceived three posters, one of them the blasphemous picture of Uncle Sam crucified between "peace" and "justice." He hired Brennerman, an artist, to put his ideas on paper.

As today's removal hearing opened, McDaniel and Brennerman refused even to acknowledge that they were the men named in the conspiracy indictment. To identify them Prosecutor Maloney produced Kurt Krouss, the German-born printer whose firm turned out thousands of the crucifixion posters.

Lester E. Purcell, Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. employe who is poll clerk of the grand jury, testified to the finding of the indictment.

News After Adjournment

To meet this, Attorney Maximilian St. George offered McDaniel's denial that he wished to corrupt the Army and Navy. However, soon after the hearing adjourned until Friday morning, with the defense case only half complete, St. George informed Prosecutor Maloney that his clients would drop their resistance. Maloney demanded that this be done in open court, which is scheduled for this morning.

McDaniel in his testimony admitted acquaintance with four of his codefendants, but Mrs. Dilling confessed that she knew a full dozen of them.

Those she named were McDaniel; Gerald B. Winrod, Wichita (Kans.) agitator; Charles B. Hudson, Omaha (Nebr.) editor who circulated an allegedly seditious postcard and was jailed in Washington for refusing to tell who printed it; Hudson De Priest, a collaborator of Winrod and of William Griffin of New York; Elmer J. Garner, whose paper, Publicity, was suppressed for alleged sedition; William Kullgren, California editor, whose magazine, Beacon Light, allegedly hinted at the murder of high officials; Col. Eugene Nelson Sanctuary, who is fighting removal from New York; James C. True and Oscar Brumback, Washington antiwar agitators; Robert E. Edmondson, who is held in California, and William Robert Lyman, who is still a fugitive.

Recalls Garner-De Priest Visit

Mrs. Dilling said Garner and De Priest dropped in to see her on their way to give grand jury testimony. However, she protested furiously that he never conspired with them or with any of the others.

Mrs. Dilling was represented by William Scott Stewart, prominent Chicago criminal lawyer, who had the encouragement of 50 women, veterans of her mother's demonstrations, who crowded about the commissioner's bench, glaring at the prosecutors. These supporters nodded approval when Mrs. Dilling admitted on the stand that she used the alias, the Rev. Frank Woodruff Johnson, in writing her anti-Jewish book, "The Octopus."

Commissioner Walker, an elderly man with long white hair and fame as a Lincoln scholar, is expected to rule on Mrs. Dilling's removal today.

Clare Boothe Says New Deal Bungles War

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 10.—Clare Boothe Luce, keynoting the Republican State convention, accused the Administration tonight of "bungling and muddling" in its conduct of the war, but declared that the party must cooperate fully with both the Government and the President for, "if our commander in chief fails, in the two years ahead, then America fails."

"And that," added Mrs. Luce, the first woman ever to keynote a Connecticut political convention, "is a price not even the most hidebound Administration enemy would be willing to pay for 'embarrassing the President.' For in the end, the only thing which can really embarrass the President is to lose the war, or to win it—at too great a cost.

"And that would be even more embarrassing for 130 million Americans. Indeed civilization itself will be hopelessly embarrassed if that is allowed to happen."

Her address opened the first convention of Connecticut Republicans since the war began. Tomorrow the delegates will nominate a State ticket, generally expected to be headed by former Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, whom Mrs. Luce singled out for praise as a "victory-minded man."

State Democrats will convene next Tuesday and Wednesday with Gov. Robert E. Hurley, who defeated Baldwin by 13,000 votes in 1940 after the latter had served one term, unopposed for renomination.

Mrs. Luce, playwright and war correspondent, wife of Henry R. Luce, publisher of Time, Fortune and Life Magazines, and herself a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Fourth Connecticut Congressional District, assert that it was the "hard but solemn duty of the Republican Party to criticize all the Government's policies."

Not only that, she said, but it must see to it that the two-party system survives. "Only fools or Fascists" believed, she declared, that there was any conflict between "patriotic cooperation and patriotic criticism."

Aged Couple Gains Death A Hard Way

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—After a last walk in their garden, after their last talk in 50 years together, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Podulinski sat down last night before two homemade guns and Joseph lit the fuses in the waiting weapons.

They were eager for death, but the guns were stubborn. Half a dozen times Joseph struck matches in the darkness of the tool shed where he had built the guns, and half a dozen times the fuses sputtered out. Perhaps his hands were trembling.

But at last the guns fired. Joseph Podulinski, 71, and his wife, Victoria, 68, fell forward into death side by side, with joined hands. They had been sitting in chairs opposite the guns, which were held by a vise to a work bench.

Police found the burnt matches, the guns made of iron pipe loaded with powder, and a note written in Polish, signed by Joseph.

"I am so ill, I can no longer eat, smoke or drink the things I want to," the note said. "Victoria doesn't want to go on alone."

And the note told also of their farewell stroll through the flower garden on the lawn at Stapleton, Staten Island, waiting for nightfall.

New Army Supply Command Started For Alaskan Area

A new northwest service command, charged with the supply and maintenance of the ever-growing forces in Western Canada and Alaska, was established by the War Department today.

With headquarters in Whitehorse, Yukon territory, Canada, it will be commanded by Col. James A. O'Connor, 57, of Bay City, Mich., an engineer officer, while Col. Kenneth B. Bush, 49, of Danville, Ill., who has been serving in the adjutant general's department in Washington, will be chief of staff.

Secretary of War Stimson, in announcing the new command, said it was necessary "because we have made so much progress with our work in that area."

Similar to the nine service commands in the United States, the new organization will be responsible for highway and rail travel and generally maintaining and supplying troops.

U. S. Fliers Chase Off Nazi Raiders

London, Sept. 10 (INS).—American fighter planes, cooperating with the R. A. F., today frightened off four groups of enemy raiders approaching a British southeast coast town.

The Axis planes refused to engage the American and British aircraft in combat, fleeing back across the Channel.

The R. A. F. swept over northern France this afternoon as the enemy raiders headed toward England.

Needlework Makes A Comeback

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin

Even in this day of machines and mass production, far more women will make their contribution to the war effort through their handwork than through factory jobs. For this most traditional of woman's work remains a basic skill that contributes valiantly and prodigiously when all the women of the land are adding to the stock pile.

Handiwork is traditional and native in America. The white settlers did not even introduce the needle arts to the American continent . . . the earliest types of needlework in America was the porcupine quill embroidery done by the Indians.

White Man's Influence

The oldest examples of this are characteristically Indian with symbolic geometric designs, but as the white man's influence penetrated, the Indian gradually began to combine native designs with naturalist motifs and even with French flower details. Old Indian beadwork likewise showed very soon the influence of the white man's floral designs. From the Eskimo, there is a heritage of interesting applique utilizing various types of fish skin . . . much of this shows a decided Chinese influence, indicating the early relationship between Alaska and Asia.

Though early settlers in New England lived very simply, there was nothing primitive about their needlework. Partly because fabrics and china coming in from the Orient stimulated the imagination of needlewomen to create intricate and interesting patterns.

Just Ask the Girl Scouts

By Gladys Degner

Want to know what to do in a blitz? The Girl Scouts will teach you. They'll show you how to cook a ten-course dinner over a camp fire, using pots and pans whipped up on the spur of the moment from tin cans. They'll teach you how to make an efficient stove out of a coffee can and some candle grease. They'll instruct you in the art of mass feeding.

Mother is taking lessons from daughter now—and does she love it! Westchester women have been flocking to the Wartime Workshops at Camp Edith Macy, N. Y., the national training school for Girl Scout leaders, this summer to learn emergency skills, should they be stripped of all the normal equipment of a housewife. Sticks, bricks and tin cans go into the making of outdoor kitchens. Hand-dipped candles furnish light in case there is no electricity. Newspapers are used in making warm clothes, and vegetables, berries and bark are used for dyeing fabrics.

Here are some of the things Girl Scouts know how to do: Given a No. 10 tin can and a piece of wire, they can make a large pot, suitable for cooking a lusty stew for a hungry crowd. A few bricks (which could be picked up from the debris of a bombed house) are piled up for a fireplace and the stew goes on.

A small can is turned into a cooking pan this way: Cut around the center of the can, leaving one side uncut. Bend this down and wrap it around a long stick which serves as the handle. A pancake turner is whisked into shape by using the bottom of a small can and a stick for the handle. It is used in turning eggs or pancakes which are fried on a sizzling hot, smooth field stone.

In case of rain, Girl Scouts use a tallow stove. An old coffee can is partly filled with tightly rolled newspaper, a braided string is pushed down through the center of the paper to serve as wick, and then melted candle grease is poured into the can. With this kind of stove there's no need to hunt for dry sticks, twigs or leaves for fuel.

Out of a wire coat hanger a satisfactory toaster can be made. First the hanger is straightened into a long piece of wire, then the one end is twisted round and round to make a flat support for the bread.

The Girl Scouts won't be caught unprepared in a blitz and neither will their mothers.—Wide World.

One-Sided Hat, or Is It the Hairdo?

The ancient controversy about which comes first, the chicken or the egg, has a modern version. Did the new one-sided hats lead to one-sided coiffures for balance—or vice versa? We wouldn't know. But screen Actress Ginger Rogers wears a new one-sided hat in "Once Upon a Honeymoon." It's a tiny round affair of three tiers, like a wedding cake, set at a gravity-defying angle on the left side of her head. To make it even more one-sided, there's a tassel of brushed wool swinging from the top tier to the left shoulder. To balance the hat, Ginger's hair is rolled back from the right temple and right side of her forehead, brought around in a swirl.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME for those addicted to the flattery of veils to edge a small felt sailor and a coarse-mesh veil with velvet ribbon. The hat, veil and ribbon should all be the same color. Nice way to convert a summer felt into a fall felt.

Midget Make-up Kit

Screen Star Ginny Gimms has a new miniature make-up kit, a miracle of the midget, designed to tuck inconspicuously into an evening bag. The box of mascara is so small the brush is jointed in the middle, folds neatly back on itself.

Her New Job

Women and Warships

By Adelaide Kerr

Elinore Herrick is going to pioneer again in work which reflects a new trend. A trend of calling on women for bigger and tougher jobs because men think they can do them.

Seven years ago Mrs. Herrick became regional director of the National Labor Relations Board. It was an unusual job for a woman, for Mrs. Herrick had to sit as arbiter in some of the toughest disputes between capital and labor. Now she has resigned to hire and train women for the Todd Shipyards Corporation, which has 12 yards, and to be its director of labor relations. As far as she knows she will be the only woman in such a shipyard job.

"Mrs. Herrick's experience as regional director of the NLRB made her a natural for the job," a shipbuilding executive said. "But the company was glad she was a woman too. A man foreman knows how to handle men. He knows that Jack takes a few minutes out every day for a couple of quick smokes, and he knows that Jack works hard enough to make up for it. But he may not make allowances for similar feminine foibles. A woman will have a better understanding of women.

"There is nothing about a shipbuilding job that women can't do. They can't always do it to the same extent as men. Because of the physical strength required it may take two—or even five—women to do what one man did. But women could build a ship from keel to truck."

Mrs. Herrick, a big, dark-haired woman with an I-like-you smile and a friendly manner, will begin her recruiting and training program September 15.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for me and it didn't take me 2 seconds to say 'yes'," she said. "I can scarcely wait to get started.

"Women workers are going to be used in shipbuilding because there is a need for them. Some men are going to war and others are moving up to more highly skilled jobs. Women are being brought in to take their places. The women will begin at the same rate of pay as men, so they have got to be as good."

She dismissed with one wave of her hand a question concerning comments of a Western factory executive to the effect that many women factory workers are not "serious" and "flirt too much with men."

"When I was production supervisor of a mill in Old Hickory, Tenn., we had a mixed group of men and women—and we didn't have any trouble," she said. "Women lend themselves to factory discipline and organization as well as men."

Mrs. Herrick has been through the labor "mill" as an industrial worker herself. After her marriage at 21 and the birth of her two sons, she went to work in a Buffalo plant and later became production supervisor of the duPont Mill in Old Hickory. She quit in '27 to study economics and labor relations at Antioch College and ran a boarding house to support her family while she earned her degree.

Today she lives in a roomy apartment in a remodeled New York factory—and does all her own housework.

Parley Called To Oppose Bus Change

Opposition to the proposal of the Washington Public Utilities Commission to eliminate the bus line along Alaska Avenue between Sixteenth Street Northwest and the bus terminal at Silver Spring will be voiced at a mass meeting of the Allied Civic Groups, a federation of civic associations throughout Silver Spring, tonight.

The meeting, called by Berry Clark, president of the group, will be held at 8 p. m. in the hearing room of the Montgomery County Liquor Dispensary Building. Preceding the mass meeting, leaders of the opposition movement will hold a brief meeting in the County Service Building.

An official of the Capital Transit Company will attend the meeting to explain the company's viewpoint on the proposal. Joseph Hayes, chairman of the meeting, has appealed to all persons affected by the proposed bus elimination to attend.

A hearing on the proposal has been set for September 15 in Room 500 of the District Building in Washington.

The PUC's proposal to curtail the bus route makes no offer of substitute transportation facilities, and emphasizes that persons living along the route may use the Georgia Avenue trolley line.

Under the PUC plan, local service will be given along Sixteenth Street from Eastern Avenue in Silver Spring to Fourteenth Street and Colorado Avenue, with one express bus in the morning and evening rush hours. It is estimated by the Allied Civic officials that about 1100 people would be affected by the order.

Wardens Launch Canvass for Scrap

Wardens of the Seventh Precinct of C Sector in Silver Spring last night began a systematic house-to-house canvass urging residents to gather all available scrap.

The metal will be collected by the wardens September 19 and piled in the triangle at the intersection of Glen Ross Road and Luzerne Avenue. It will be left there for several days and then turned over to junk dealers.

Proceeds of the junk sale will be used for the purchase of air raid and warden equipment.

New First-Aid Club Is Organized

A new organization to be known as the Silver Spring (Md.) First Aid Club was formed last night by a group of residents who have passed the standard and advanced courses. It is the first club of its kind in the community.

Objectives of the club will be to promote first aid, to practice what they have learned and study newer methods which have developed since they took their courses.

The group plans to meet twice a month at various homes. Programs will include movies of bombings from the war zones and practical demonstrations of first aid. Only persons who have passed the standard course will be eligible for membership. All members must pass the advanced course to retain membership.

Mrs. Allen Anderson was elected president; Joseph Frizzell, vice president; and Miss Marion U. Rueth, secretary-treasurer. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Fred B. Vickery, Woodside Parkway.

August Traffic Off 45% in Va.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—The State highway department reports a drop of 44.98 per cent in traffic in Virginia last month compared with a year ago.

In making the figures public, the department said "the real impact of tire and gasoline rationing on rural highway traffic was felt for the first time in August."

The decrease brought August travel 10.26 per cent below July, whereas ordinarily August travel is greater than in July. The traffic flow was measured at key stations throughout the State.

Overtime Pay Allowed Sanitorium Employes

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 10 (AP).—Overtime pay, already being received by attendants at State mental hospitals working longer than their regular hours, has been arranged also for attendants at State tuberculosis sanitoriums, Governor O'Conor announced today.

The decision to include the four State tuberculosis institutions at Sabillasville, Mount Wilson, Salisburybury and Henryton, followed a report to the public works board by Dr. Victor F. Cullen, superintendent of the institutions, on the difficulty of hiring enough attendants for the hospitals.

D. C. Hails the Parting Host At Dinner for Willard Head

Managing Director Harry P. Somerville of the Willard Hotel, who next Tuesday will end a 10-year association with that hostelry, last night was feted and toasted by men high in the Nation's life as a "swell guy and a real hotel man."

The occasion was a testimonial dinner tendered him by the hotel's trustees and attended by representatives of 25 of the city's larger hotels, by officials of innumerable civic, fraternal and charitable organizations, and by District and Federal Government personages.

"I am indeed sorry to see you go . . . it has been grand to have you in Washington . . . my very warm and personal regards . . ." so read one of the messages delivered to Somerville during the dinner.

It was signed by President Roosevelt. Another expression of regret at the hotel man's impending departure also came from the White House—this one signed by Steve Early, Marvin McIntyre, Edward M. Watson and others.

Farley Joins

Former Postmaster General James A. Farley added his word of regret in a note from New York, and asked Somerville to drop in when next he was in that city.

Personal tributes came from Joseph W. Wyatt, a trustee of the Willard, who declared "the owners and trustees of the Willard are grateful to you for your devotion to your work, for your accomplishments and for having guided the Willard through the vicissitudes of ten extraordinary years."

And from L. Gardner Moore, manager of the Shoreham Hotel and president of the Washington Hotelmen's Association, who paid him what he called the finest tribute possible in the hotel business: "You're a real hotel man, Harry."

And from Alfred McGarrahy, of the Knights of Columbus, who, speaking on behalf of the many organizations (with a combined membership of 15,000) represented at the meeting, declared: "We love you, we respect you and we thank you for what you have done in these past ten years. If you're not going to be with us in the future, God has certainly favored the city to which you are going."

"What . . . a Spot"

At the conclusion of the dinner Somerville, rising in acknowledgment of the many tributes, opioned, "What a hell of a spot to put a poor little rooming housekeeper on."

He'd tell the truth, he vowed—"I might steal, but I'd never lie." The people he'd miss first in Washington, said Somerville, will be "my employes and department heads who have worked to keep a going institution." Secondly he'd miss his friends.

"I didn't know I had so many," he declared, "until I announced my resignation. Their friendship is the most priceless asset I've acquired in my 10 years here."

On Tuesday, he said he would leave for a month's vacation in the Poconos. Beyond that, Somerville said, he had no plans.

Among the guests were Kermit Roosevelt, jr., and Paul Frizzell trustees; Thomas W. Brahany, president of the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, who acted as toastmaster; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy; Rear Admiral William B. Young, chief of the Navy's division of supplies and accounts; Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the Labor Department's conciliation division; Commissioner Guy Mason; Thomas Green, executive director of the American Hotel Association, and many others—about 85 in all.

Organizations represented included the Rotary Club, the Board of Trade, the Greater National Capital Committee, the Early Birds, Knights of Columbus, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Community Chest, Gridiron Club, President's Cup Regatta, the Alfalfa Club, the Variety Club, the Overseas Writers' Club and the Hotel Greeters' of America.

Senator Green Asks Easier Rules For Loyal Italians

By the Associated Press

Senator Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island suggested to the Justice Department yesterday the reclassification of the United States' 600,000 Italian noncitizens as "loyal aliens."

He wrote Attorney General Biddle that the experience of the first eight months of the war justified their removal from the "enemy alien" classification.

Green said only eight one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the noncitizen Italians had been subjected either to internment or parole under Justice Department orders.

"In other words," he asserted, "99.92 per cent of them are free from the suspicion of being unfriendly."

Their classification as "enemy aliens," he added, had led to discriminations in employment and to a denial of their right to fish in New England waters and had subjected them to the curfew on the West Coast, "all because Italy, occupied by the Germans, and under German domination and duress, declared war against the United States."

Calvert Board Plans To Continue Fair

The directors also reported that a new exhibition hall will be completed in time for the fair, with all farmers asked to give a day or two of their time towards finishing the structure. Exhibits formerly were on display in the town hall.

Count de Benque, Well Known in D.C., Buried a Pauper

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—A French count who was a secret agent for France and Italy in the last war, and a gay figure in Washington in postwar days, was buried today—in a pauper's grave.

The body of Count J. Dutar de Benque, 56, had lain unclaimed in the Bellevue Hospital Morgue for 10 days before it was taken to the city graveyard.

He died of injuries he received last May when he fell down an elevator shaft.

Police said De Benque was arrested last year on a grand larceny charge concerning the theft of 1500 blueprints of military aircraft pumps from a New York engineering firm.

He had told police, they said, that he had retired from secret service work after the war, and attributed the theft to a grudge against one of the engineering firm's officials. He was convicted and given a suspended sentence with a year's probation.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorcee Wistfully Wonders if Former Husband Would Consider Marrying Her Again; Hopes Rise On Hearing From Him, Since He Joined the Army

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young divorcee, mother of a small son, two and a half years old. I have been separated from my husband for over a year. I got my divorce because he asked me to divorce him, and because he was not very good or kind to me. He was unable to hold on to any job for long. Since that time, I have worked hard. I am now employed in a Government department, on a permanent civil service appointment, at $1440 a year. But my heart is aching for my little boy, whom I had to leave with my mother (almost a thousand miles away), because I feel that war-time Washington is no proper place for children.

Recently, I received two letters from my former husband, who is now in the Army. In these leters, he told me that he still loves me, that he is missing the boy, that he has made out a salary allotment to him, and that he wants to see me again before he goes overseas, as he expects to do. He also expressed the hope that I had ceased caring for "a bum like him." He said he knew that he hadn't been very good for me, and hoped that I would soon meet and marry another man who was more worthy of me.

My question is this: Do you think he would ever reconsider and want to be married to me again? He never amounted to much before; but do you think that he could reform and permanently live a better life? I love him more than anybody except our little boy, and would be glad to forgive him and take him back, if he cared to straighten out. Do you think I have a chance of being happy with him again? (I can truthfully say I would make any man a good wife).

Man Has Permanently Quitted the Marriage

DEAR L. S. T.: It is plain, from what you say, that your marriage fell to pieces because your husband was emotionally "dead set" against perpetuating the contract—largely, I suppose, because he felt he just couldn't bear to be permanently tied to a "family man's" routine responsibilities. The fact that he never held any job for long shows an irresponsible streak; and the fact that he was not "very good or kind" to you shows that he was continually chafing against his economic obligation to you and the child. He resented having to provide for you; or having to make answer for his chronic partial failure to do so. When he finally asked you to get a divorce, he was telling you, in effect, that he was quitting on the husband's job, too—just as he had worked himself out of (or walked out of) the various wage-earning jobs he "couldn't keep."

His failure to make good as a husband had its origin in weak instability of character; not in lack of fondness for you. As his recent letters testify, he cares for you still (after his fashion); but, obviously, he just hasn't got what it takes, of stamina and stability, to take proper care of wife and child. In other words, he is too much of a child himself, psychologically, to function faithfully and well in the "protector-and-provider" role.

Even more than you do, perhaps, he needs something or somebody to lean on. And for that reason, he probably finds the paternalistically managed soldier's life far more to his liking—despite its hazards and hardships—than the citizen's way of life: which challenges a man to display productive and dependable social initiative or acknowledge himself a failure. As a private in the ranks, he is "one of the boys," looking to higher authority for maintenance and a sense of direction. He is scotfree of the burden of social planning; and therefore sufficiently comfortable, emotionally, to feel and express, at long last, some sentimental concern for you.

Could Only Tolerate Mother-Type Wife

However, you note that his display of concern doesn't include the slightest inkling of desire or intent to return to double harness with you. Indeed, nothing could more clearly signify his secret relief to have you "off his hands," than his affectionately expressed hope that you may soon meet and marry another man who is more worthy of you. This amounts to saying that he wants you to forgive and forget him and be happy. And, if you are to be happy, this (in my opinion) is what you must do. I believe that any attempts to resume the marriage—even if he would assent to them, which appears unlikely—would lead again to friction and separation. As has been demonstrated, you are not the woman to "make a man of him." If you were, the marriage would not have dissolved. Perhaps the only woman who could keep him in tow, as a husband, would be one who was able and willing to take care of him as though he were a child; and she would be a fool to assume the slippery burden.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Hollywood Looking Glass

Dorothy Lamour, seen recently at a preview on Hollywood's main stem, looked something gorgeous in a brand new ensemble of Cossack influence. Beginning at the top, there was a towering black hat laced down its front with purple lacings. Next in line, a Cossack cape of black velveteen also laced with purple. Even the shoes suggested boots in their cut.

Even in the midst of war and shortages, inventive women manage something new. Anna Neagle, just back from England where she spent nine months making her latest picture, "Wings And The Woman," reports the girls wearing long mufflers—and she means long—wound once around their throats, the ends falling on either side like a stole. Seems the gadgets are worn for warmth and comfort by the boys in the fighting planes, and the girls have found them comfortable additions to their own ensembles, particularly when they must work in the damp and cold.

We hear rumors that these stole-mufflers are about to turn up here in America, colorful additions to sweaters and skirts on autumn mornings not quite cool enough for coats. Smart also with box coats and fur jackets.

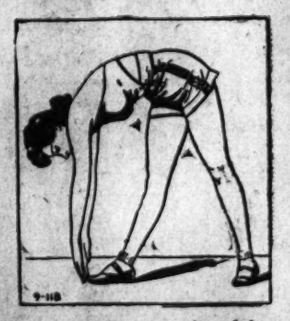
Don't Waste Time Exercising

This is the fifth in a series of 18 articles by Ida Jean Kain in which she offers a physical fitness program for women during wartime. Slimming the waistline is the theme of today's article by Miss Kain.



The main point when doing this bending exercise to slim the waist is to keep the stomach muscles pulled up, the hips under.

In busy times like these you can't afford to waste time exercising. You know that—and, you can't help but stop and think there might be a technique that cuts down your exercise time. There is!

It's not how much exercise you take, but how you take it. If you will just give exercise the right twist, you can get beautiful results.

Suppleness is a direct test of fitness, so let's begin with the waistline. I'll say here and now that you are an exception if you do not need suppling exercises. The combination of stretching, twisting and bending will do it for you, but there is a technique to every single movement.

When you stretch, concentrate on the up-pull through the midsection, in that expanse between the ribs and hips.

Keep your shoulders down and relaxed but stretch between ribs and hips until you actually feel taller and slimmer.

Then, when you twist around to the side, hold your hips squarely to front. Stand with feet 18 or so inches apart, and parallel, and keep hips front while twisting at your waist.

Finally, bend at your waist—but bend while continuing to stretch up. You're not just trying to reach over and touch fingers to the floor. Anyone can do that. What you want to do is bend over and touch the floor with the right twist and upstretch.

Stand erect with arms upstretched but most of the stretch between the ribs and hips. Twist to side. Now, bend. Keep your shoulders and hips in line and make those midriff muscles give. Then stand erect, stretch up again, and bend to the other side. The main point in slimming your waist is to tug at the waist muscles. In bending, keep the stomach muscles pulled up, the hips under.

You put the same principle to work for you by stretching up through the midriff and circling the trunk down, around and up. Go away over to one side—almost as if you meant to bend over—and then bend forward while continuing to pull up with those stomach muscles and keeping your hips under you, not letting them jut out. This is not easy to do at first, but as you catch on to it you will see why it's so effective. It may not sound new to you, but it's the correct version of waistline slimming. It wrenches inches off that measurement.

Even the weight gainer has to watch her waistline exercises. But tomorrow we'll talk about the dietary measures that put on curves.

What the Thyroid Gland Does

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

FOR SOME reason that is not very clear to me, my mail of late has been full of inquiries every day about the thyroid gland and goiter. I say the reason is not clear to me because usually when I get a lot of inquiries on one subject it is because I have written on it. But I have had no articles on the thyroid for some time. Besides, according to our experience in my part of the world, goiter is diminishing. Still the letters keep coming in.

Perhaps it is the war. It is well known that in any time of great stress, anxiety and tragedy, goiter increases. Any sudden shock will do it. Soldiers have been known to come out of battle with a fully developed case of exophthalmic goiter.

The primary symptoms of the exophthalmic form of goiter—staring eyes, trembling, sweating nervousness—are the symptoms of a fear reaction. So the war might be the explanation of my readers' interest in the thyroid.

I will endeavor to answer the letters en masse by explaining as best I can in this and the following articles the functions the thyroid performs in the body and how it goes wrong.

The thyroid gland is located at the base of the neck, is divided into two parts which lie on each side of the Adam's apple and each is about the size of the ball of your thumb.

It is a highly cellular organ, which means the cells elaborate a secretion. The secretion is absorbed by the blood and goes to all parts of the body. All secretions do something. What does the thyroid secretion do?

Well, we know pretty well what it does: at least, we know what it does when the gland is normal and healthy. It stimulates every cell in the body to activity. Cells have to be kept up to a certain level of activity — the, general activities common to all cells consist in absorbing food, using it, breaking it down and sending the by-product back to the blood to be excreted.

Cells also have special functions — muscle cells contract and do work, nerve cells carry impulses, etc. But the basal metabolism, as the physiologists call it—the breaking up and utilization of food product and air—is presided over by the thyroid gland.

Your body heat is what it is because the thyroid stimulates all the cells to activity: their use of chemicals makes heat, just as the use of a fire makes heat by utilization of chemicals.

That is why the best test for the condition and activity of the thyroid gland is the so-called basal metabolism test.

The Style Critics

"Did you ever see so many purple outfits in all your life?"

"Never! And all on the wrong people. Look at Eunice Blowsy. She looks positively common."

"Another thing, did you ever see so many horse-faced women in witches' crowns?"

"Never! They just can't resist them. It does seem that Valerie Flagstaff would have better sense, though."

"She'd make any kind of monkey of herself to be in style . . I wish you'd look! Lucinda Beaker in that green feather toque! She looks just like a parrot!"

No woman with a prominent nose can ever resist green feathers. Say, look at that crocheted snood on Sonia Putterby."

"I bet she made it herself . . . That's a cute beret old Mrs. Dizzard has on."

"It's last year's. I can tell by the back."

"Who is that aged woman she's talking to? . . . The bareheaded one with the cane . . and the yellow bow in her hair?"

"Oh, that's Maude Chubby's grandmother."

"Where is Maude today?"

"Over there by the sandwiches—see in the purple tweeds"

"She WOULD get into tweeds—with her hips."

"She doesn't look as bad as Ducky Waddle does in that sculptured black satin."

"No, no Zenobia Stuffer, in that dirndl."

"Look at Susie Breeze over there without a hat trying to look casual."

"These people without hats make me tired. They look so sloppy and undignified. I wish you'd look at Marcella Martinet strutting around in her uniform!"

"She'd never miss a chance to wear it. She doesn't know how to wear her cap though."

"Is that a uniform Pam Steppit has on "

"No, just a suit. She's trying to make it look like a uniform."

"But all that insignia?"

"That's just eagle wings and thing she got at a costume jewelry sale. Isn't Delilaht Lusher a sight . . . with all those jabots and clips and things "

"She's dressing up last year's basic dress."

"Well, you certainly see some weird get-ups at a place like this."

"Don't you! I haven't seen a woman here I'd really call smartly dressed except us—I mean—you. You really look terribly smart today."

"Oh, so do you!"

Next Month

Next month the prospect will be brighter,
For all the bills will be lighter,
And my paycheck won't so rapidly shrink;
Of my duties I'll do much organizing,
And then follow Miss Kain's exercising,
And have much time to just "set and think."

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Lack of facilities in Truthtown for wartime cocktailing is the problem of the hour, according to Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, winner of last year's national achievement award.

Mrs. St. Vitus, just returned from attending the races at Saratoga, tennis week at Newport, and several fashionable war relief lawn parties on Long Island, called a meeting yesterday of "representative women" at the Hotel Swank to "do something" about the cocktail emergency.

"I have discovered through a personal survey," she said, "that it is frequently impossible to get a seat at the more popular cocktail bars in the late afternoon. Now where on earth is a dollar-a-year man, a visiting executive, a member of Congress, a high government official or an upper-bracket war worker to take his women friends or his secretary for relaxation, if not to a cocktail bar? And how can these men—and women, carry on if they don't have their cocktails? I tell you we are all entirely too complacent about this war. If we don't watch out, we will lose it."

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, Truthtown's eccentric dowager, proposed that the so-called social parasites convert the ballrooms of their mansions into cocktail bars.

"But where would we get the labor to serve the drinks?" protested Mrs. Rufus Rossiter. "Virtually all of us are trying to get along at present with only a houseman, a maid and a cook. This should be made a Government porject."

A committee headed by Mrs. Antelope was appointed to take up the matter with the Senate Committee for Public Meddling

War Divorce

Mrs. Atterbury Husk has left unexpectedly for Reno in search of a divorce, The Torch learned last night. Trouble is understood to have arisen over Mr. Husk's refusal to don the livery of the Husk chauffeur (who recently was drafted) and drive Mrs. Husk downtown.

Mrs. Husk is the heiress of the late Josiah Grabb, tinted potato chip tycoon. Mr. Husk was a salesman in the Grabb organization at the time of his marriage. He is now an assistant vice-president of the company and devotes a large part of his time to walking Mrs. Husk's dachshund, Sylvia.

The Small Silver Set

Mrs. Vandeventer Vann 4th, recent bride, has called a meeting of other recent brides to make plans for establishing a small silver white elephant shoppe at which disposal may be made of the multitude of small silver pieces which modern brides are receiving. Due to rising prices, income taxes, strained budgets, etc., these pieces have become the wedding presents of the day. "I have 75 pickle forks," said Mrs. Vann, "also 87 cheese knives, 17 gravy ladles, 21 bud vases, 110 berry spoons, 35 sugar spoons, and an uncountable number of bud vases, candle sticks and bonbon dishes. No doubt there are many brides of other years who would like to pick up these pieces in exchange for bookends, salad bowls and hand painted trays."

Beauty On the March

Here are some beauty hints for the woman in uniform. They come from R. K. O. dress designer Renie:

MAKE-UP must be natural. Lipstick is okay, so is natural powder or foundation. Leave it at that.

COIFFURES must be smooth, trim, look short. Cut your hair short, or curl it up. If you insist on long hair, coil it, braid it, roll it, when you're in uniform. There is no place for a glamour girl mane under a uniform cap. Kill the bangs or pompadour. Only the ignorant wear a military cap on the back of the head.

NAILS must be short. Use colorless or medium polish.

JEWELRY should be limited to a tailored wrist watch and—if you have one—your wedding ring. A uniform is no background for the coy clip.

GLOVES should be plain gauntlets of pigskin or kid.

HANDBAGS slung from straps over the shoulder are good. Small ones fastened to the belt are better.

STOCKINGS should be medium weight, of a color blending with that of the uniform.

SHOES must be low-heeled oxfords, complete with both heels and toes.

GLASSES, if you wear them, should have sturdy frames. Avoid pixie effects like the plague.

SKIRTS must be of a length uniform in your organization. An inch below the knee is good.

Uniforms must be spotless, always perfectly pressed, worn straight. There is no place in a uniformed corps for sagging pockets, crooked stocking seams, visible slips.

Service Club Hostess Is Draftee's Last Link to Homelife; Camp Croft's "Ma" Fletcher Is Second Mother

Spartanburg, S. C., Sept. 10.—"Boy, this is great! The President's promising us a second front, soon. Just can't wait to get over there and get this job done!"

A sergeant at Camp Croft was talking to a couple of buddies in the Service Club coffee shop. "Me, too," was what both boys chimed back.

That seems to be the general attitude around here. Every enlisted man I've talked to the past two days is fired with a dual ambition: To "make" Officers Training School . . . and to get on the other side of either the Atlantic or the Pacific. "It's no difference to most of us whether they send us after the Japs or the Germans; just so they send us over soon," said a former golf professional from Youngstown, Ohio. He has been in training 11 months: hopes to get to enter Officers' Training sometime soon; and is "dying" to get across.

"All my outfit feels the same way," he said. "'Course we're not babies like some of the real homesick ones you find around here. Sure, we'd rather be home than in the Army; but we've got a big job to do, and we want to finish it soon's possible." He added, proudly, "You see my gang's mostly paratroopers. We're real men."

Wasn't he homesick when he first arrived? Weren't any of his paratrooper buddies occasionally seized with such a longing to get back to their families they didn't want to see anybody, talk to anybody, or be near anybody—even the ones in their own outfit?

"Sure I've been homesick," he said. "Who isn't? We never get over it. Comes times when every one of us feel we can't go on another minute; that we'll simply die if we don't see our mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers. But," he added brightly, "that's just a mood. It passes. Most of us learn the cure soon enough. Here at Croft, the best thing to do is contact Ma Fletcher. She knows exactly what to do."

Apt to Seek Solitude

"Ma" (Mrs. D. B.) Fletcher is the senior hostess at the Service Club. I dropped by to see her a few minutes later. Had to wait half an hour, while the row of chairs inside her office gradually cleared. One boy after another stepped over to talk with her, then came out of the office looking a good deal happier than when he entered.

A handsome, grey-haired woman with a sweet smile and a motherly glow in her hazel eyes, spoke up softly when I asked for Mrs. Fletcher.

"Here I am," she said, in a liquid, Southern voice. "What can I do for you?" She could do just one thing—tell me what she did to help ease the pain for homesick draftees who filled her office day in and day out.

"I do what I can—which isn't so much," she said modestly. "Only trouble is, I don't get half as much chance to contact the homesick ones as I do the others. The ones who really need somebody to talk to them are apt to stay to themselves; they're the last ones who come in here. My only hope is that one of the other boys will bring them in to me . . . or that they'll drop in, asking for stationery, and then I'll get to see them."

Knows They'll Write Home

Stationery is furnished free in the Service Club, but Ma Fletcher keeps it in her office, so soldiers will have to ask for it there. She can tell in an instant, by a glimpse at a soldier's drooping shoulders and downcast eyes that he is despondent. Many a draftee, who has asked, "May I have some stationery?" has had the answer, "Why certainly, son," from Ma Fletcher . . . and has looked up to meet as sympathetic a pair of eyes as you'll find anywhere in the world.

"Half the time a homesick boy is helped immeasurably by just talking to him about his home and his people," Mrs. Fletcher said. "Then, too, I generally suggest that the soldier might like to take some of the little trips to nearby towns where so many homes have been opened to them. I tell every boy who comes in about our dances at the Service Clubs—we have two regular ones each week; the open house on Friday; game night on Monday; the classical concerts on Sunday at 5, and the everybody-sing fest on Sunday night. If you can get a boy out to even one of those parties, he has such a good time, blues vanish within an hour. He'll never be so homesick again."

Four evenings each week a handpicked crowd of girls arrive at Camp Croft from nearby towns. Each one in the group is passed on by a secret committee, made up of leading women in the town from which she comes. No strangers are admitted, Mrs. Fletcher makes it plain that every girl attending a dance must have a written invitation well ahead of time; that no soldier can bring his "date" for the evening unless special arrangements and investigations have been made ahead of time.

No Shorts; No Slacks

Enforcing this rule is only one of the many problems that are ironed out smoothly by Mrs. Fletcher's practiced hand. Now and then strange girls slip into the dances by way of the adjoining cafeteria. Some of the girls who stay overnight at the guest house have to be "invited inside" before the hour grows too late. Visiting sweethearts and sisters are advised by printed and posted rules not to appear on the post wearing shorts or slacks.

There is no drinking problem at Camp Croft's Service Club. Mrs. Fletcher has arranged that beer is not to be sold either in the cafeteria or coffee shop after 7:30. Hard liquor is not served there at all. Boys and girls are not permitted to leave the dance floor and then return. Dances begin at 8 o'clock, and "Home, Sweet Home" is played at 10:30. Ten minutes later, the girls are back in the buses and started back to the towns from which they came. These rules are understood, and firmly enforced. Mrs. Fletcher takes her seat near the entrance to the dance floor and carefully checks everybody who enters. She takes special care to see that only girls with invitations and boys with tickets for that specific dance are admitted.

A mother herself—she has two married daughters and a 20-year-old son—Mrs. Fletcher also brought to her current job some other superior qualifications. A resident of Spartanburg for many years, she has been "Ma Fletcher" to countless students at Wofford College the past two decades. Dealing with homesick boys is an old story to her.

She's Cut to Order

She loves her job at Camp Croft. Wouldn't exchange it for any other in the world. But if current regulations are still in force next January, she will have to turn it over to somebody else. Newly printed rules governing appointment of Army Service Club hostesses specify that no woman under 45 can apply and any woman must resign at the age of 50. What a mistake it would be for anybody to take over the job "Ma" Fletcher has today . . . a job for which she is completely cut to order . . . and is adored by every one of thousands of boys who have come to her for comfort and advice.

Those printed regulations, incidentally, include a lengthy list of qualifications for would-be Service Club hostesses. But in "Ma" Fletcher's opinion, only two are necessary—love of humanity and common sense.

Every boy at Camp Croft who knows her can vouch, and will, that "Ma" Fletcher has both those in double quantity proportions.

"Grandest woman I ever met . . . next to my own mother," said a private from Minnesota, who vows he would have given up the ghost that first week at Croft . . . "if I hadn't dropped by her office one day for some stationery."

Officers—Your Future Looks Gay

With several farms to run—literally—on the side, Mrs. Reeve Schley has now taken on another venture, the United Officers Service Club.

While her husband busies himself with seeing that lease-lend supplies get to Russia, Mrs. Schley has taken over the running of their farm in Far Hills, N. J., and with a son, about to go into the service, she will have his farm on her hands, too.

But that has not stemmed her enthusiasm for this new idea (or rather one borrowed from New York) for an information center for officers. Headquarters will be at the Raleigh Hotel, which has donated space for the club, and will be open every day, including Sunday, from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Although it is still in the nebulous stage, the women interested in the club are busy signing up volunteers. So if you have three hours a week, plus a knowledge of your Washington, don't hesitate to let them know. There seems to be no end to this business of "taking care" of the needs of service men. But so far enlisted men have the edge on officers as far as attention goes. Is it music the officer wants to hear and is it swing or symphony? . . . is he interested in night clubbing? . . . art galleries? . . . or lectures? These, and many more, questions the club hopes to be able to answer for the many strangers in our midst sporting uniforms.

"It's just an experiment," said a spokesman, and who knows it may end up as a full fledged officer's club. Mrs. Schley, who has the reputation for being a "whirlwind" organizer, will return to town next week from Far Hills, N. J., and then things are expected to start rolling. Another person intensely interested is Mrs. Arthur Fowler. A meeting had been planned at the home of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon for Thursday of next week. However, the date has been postponed and will announced in a day or so. Meanwhile, Mrs. Benjamin Rogers, who has accepted the chairmanship of the venture, is busy on plans for this club which is sponsored by the War Hospitality Committee of the District. They plan to cooperate with all existing committees in offering services, information and recreation facilities.

BATHTUB GIN—

Reminds Miss Kellems of the New Deal Or Vice Versa, She Says in Speech

By Corrinne Hardesty
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 8.—Miss Vivien Kellems, who put aside her business executive duties to seek a Republican Congressional nomination in Connecticut, said today that the New Deal reminds her of bathtub gin, which she thinks is terrible because "I made some myself."

A daughter of two ordained ministers, Miss Kellems spent her time operating a steel grip manufacturing plant until the 1942 political campaigns opened. She plunged in and ran unexpectedly into a contest with Clare Boothe Luce, the publisher's wife. Today, on a business trip to New York, Miss Kellems denounced her opponent's husband, lambsted Wendell L. Willkie and deplored the New Deal—all in one breath.

Taxes, which she said are "an American Gestapo," were the basis of her attack on all three.

"Connecticut is the Nation's test tube," she said. "The present campaign is just an experiment in what is going to happen all over the country in 1944 when the Republican Party—like it was in 1928—swings in.

"Wendell Willkie and all the other over-age Republicans should go back to the Democratic Party where they belong. In this election we are going to revitalize the Republican Party and make it an instrument with which to win in 1944."

Miss Kellems insisted that her campaign is not a "hair-pulling contest with Mrs. Henry Luce."

"I'm campaigning to free Connecticut politics from the outside domination of New York millionaires such as Henry Luce (the publisher) and Sam Pryor," she said. The Luces live in Greenwich, Conn., as does Pryor, former Republican National Committeeman, and Eastern manager for Willkie in 1940. Miss Kellems lives in Westport.

Miss Kellems, who said she "came up the hard way" and "has felt the grip of New Deal taxes" likened the social legislation of the past ten years to "bathtub gin of the prohibition era."

"We went too far in trying to curb drinking with prohibition laws, and we got bathtub gin—I made some myself.

"We went too far with social legislation and with taxes for security, for old-age pensions and all the rest—they are like prohibition gin. They are raw. They need refining and revising and improving."

Miss Kellems, who declined to say what her 1941 income tax was, said she was for "taxes where you can see them," not wrapped up in a loaf of bread where "some one" told her 53 different hidden taxes were lurking.

"I'm for direct taxes where everybody can feel them," she said, "then people will be more aware of Government waste and extravagance."

Supples to Make Home in Capital

After a short wedding trip, Ensign Augustin Supple, U. S. N. R., and the former Miss Esther Katherine Makari will make their home at 3000 Connecticut Avenue. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Makari of Sheridan, Wyo., and Ensign Supple is the son of Mrs. Edward Augustin Supple and the late Dr. Supple of Boston, Mass.

The Rev. Walter J. Hays performed the nuptial mass that united the couple in marriage on September 5 at St. Peter's Church. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Raymond Makari, of this city, and she wore traditional white satin with a finger-tip veil held with a crown of seed pearls. Her flowers were white gladioli and orchids. Mrs. Francis Simmons served as matron of honor and David Supple was his brother's best man. Ushering were Lieut. John O'Neill, Ensign Werner Windus, Ensign William Knight and Ensign William Cochrane.

Birthday Party

Master Brian Skelton will be honored at a birthday party this afternoon given by his mother, Mrs. Elmer Skelton, at their home in Takoma Park.

Miss Hodges to Leave

Miss Dorothy Hodges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hodges of Takoma Park, Md., will leave in a few days to enter the Frederick Academy, Frederick, Md.

'Little Season' Succumbs to Frost: Goes Unmourned and Unsung

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 10.—Life is real, life is earnest and New York society's famous "little season" has succumbed to a heavy wartime frost.

For the duration, it is one with the dodo.

Ordinarily, the little season bursts into flamboyant flower in New York and fashionable country environs immediately after Labor Day.

Ordinarily, for this reason, thousands of rich beachcombers returned to town from such lush summer resorts as Newport, Bar Harbor and Southampton.

Ordinarily, on the days immediately following Labor Day, society turned the key in the lock of the family's famous summer chateau, Hangover Hall, and headed for the biy city.

Ordinarily, in the driveway without awaited a motor caravan, beginning with the Rolls and winding up a block later with the station wagon, ready to convey the J. Algernon Plush-Horses back to New York for the little season.

Well, the East Coast plush-horses will be doing very well this season if they can find a dray to take their trunks to the depot and a taxi to get themselves to the station, and when they land in New York they will find that the little season is as one with the snows of yesteryear.

Ordinarily, the gold coast along the north shore of Long Island is buzzin', cousin, with debutante balls by night and polo tourneys by day throughout September and October. (Bromo stock always picked up a couple of points during this period.)

But the girls who would have been debutantes this season have better things to do in the A. W. V. S. the interceptor command and the Red Cross. And the polo ponies have joined the horse marines.

Tuxedo Ball Canceled

Furthermore, the very climax of the little season, the one-and-only the super-duper autumn ball in the Nation's most haughty country district, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., has just been cancelled for the duration.

For 56 years, with the exception of two years during the last World War, the most rich and socially-swashay debutantes of New York have been presented at the autumn ball, probably the most exclusive debutante function in the East.

Tuxedo Park still has plenty of debutante material, the park notes. But in canceling the ball, the park association says with simple—and touching—dignity, that all its young men between the ages of 20 and 30, whether married or single, are in the armed services.

The fashionable restaurants and supper clubs are still open and doing a tremendous business, with at least half the men in evidence in uniform. But the returning beachcomber will find little or no private entertainment on a large scale.

Ordinarily at this season the big mansions that still crowd the upper East Side and the 12-to-20-room apartments on Fifth and Park Avenues would begin to show signs of life. In the old days madam would have written to Fifi from Newport, instructing her to remove the dust covers from the furniture and the cheesecloth from the family portraits.

Estates Are Boarded Up

But much of the cheesecloth and many of the slip covers are still in place. Because, in the argot, madam, the master and the kids have taken it on the lam to a New York hotel rather than home. Who can say whether there will be enough fuel, either oil or coal, available this winter to heat on the Eastern Seaboard a huge, pretentious town house or a 20-room apartment?

Before long the plush-horses will be packing the kids off to boarding schools anyway, then they figure they will be a lot happier, if not so haughty, in a cozy, warm two-room hotel suite rather than a cold mansion or a half-heated penthouse.

At the moment, small hotel suites are at a premium in New York because of this mass migration away from baronial mansions that have always been difficult and costly to heat at best.

Women Troops Learn Gunnery In New Zealand

Portrait of tomorrow: The first New Zealand group of women to be trained as antiaircraft troops are now starting their training at Wellington.

This move is part of the long-term expansion of New Zealand antiaircraft defenses and gives women the task of operating artillery predictors. The feminine troops are doing their studying in the radio-location wing of the artillery school.

Working in teams, the women are learning the intricacies of height and range finders and are also learning spotting on identification telescopes. These women will be sent back to their own districts to be put to work after they finish their training.

Women are enlisting by the hundreds under the New Zealand women enlistment set-up and reception and training centers for women in various command areas are expected to be completed this month.

Adrenalin Used to Lower Blood Pressure

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 10.—A discovery that adrenalin, the human body's quick fighting hormone, is easily converted into an antidote for high blood pressure, was reported today to the American Chemical Society.

The report was by Drs. K. A. Oster and Harry Sobotka, Mount Sinai Hospital, New York. Adrenalin comes from the adrenal glands. During fear, anger, fighting or anything requiring quick energy, the hormone is released into the blood. It not only raises energy but increase blood pressure temporarily.

An easy chemical reaction turns this adrenalin, in test tubes, into a dark, red powder known as Adrenochrome. The latter reduces high blood pressure. This ability had been overlooked by other investigators who tried the red powder only on normal blood pressure. It has no effect on normal pressure.

It is not in the least poisonous. It can be synthesized. A present drawback is difficulty to make it keep long. The Mount Sinai experiments were done on dogs and rats. Dogs' blood pressures are similar to humans. Dogs dropped from pressures of 180 down to 120, normal, in 2 to 24 hours. The pressures in animals remained normal as long as the antidote was given. Three grains were enough for a dog, and much less for a rat. The remedy is injected into bloodstream or into muscles.

Human beings have not been tried, but the discovery came from observing that humans with high blood pressures had a blood chemical that resembles adrenalin, and is known chemically as a precursor of adrenalin. The altered adrenalin has a chemical structure somewhat like vitamin K, whose effect is to stop or retard excessive bleeding.

Senate Passes Bill Giving Vote To Service Men

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House legislation giving service men and women a chance to vote by absolute ballot in November, and in future wartime primaries and general elections for Federal offices, without registration or poll tax payments.

Approval came on a voice vote after a two-hour debate in which Senators Connally (Democrat) of Texas, and Hill (Democrat) of Alabama attacked the bill with its poll tax exemption as unconstitutional and an invasion of States' rights.

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida disputed the argument that the bill was unconstitutional, and cited a Supreme Court decision in 1940 as giving Congress jurisdiction to restrict State control over elections for Federal office when the States themselves limited the Federal franchise.

Connally challenged the idea of a Federal franchise, declaring that "until this morning the States had the power to determine the qualifications of voters."

Referring to the fact that Senators Pepper and Brooks (Republican) of Illinois, sponsored the poll tax waiver, Senator Connally said "isn't it just as logical for the other States to demand that Florida and Illinois should have a poll tax?"

Senator Hill cited anew the objections of the War Department to extending the absentee balloting privilege to men and women serving outside the United States and Alaska. He read a letter from Secretary of War Stimson declaring that the task of transporting the ballots and other documents required would hamper military efficiency, and that extending the voting system to troops on foreign duty threatened to give away military secrets about the strength and location of America's armies

Senators Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island, sponsor of the legislation, and Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan urged that the State secretaries of state, who are charged with handling the absentee ballotings, exercise their full power to see that members of the armed forces are given a chance to vote, not only for Federal officials, but for all the local and State officers for whom they could vote if at home.

Army Camps Combed for Slayer of Two

By the Associated Press

Tomah, Wis., Sept 10.—Investigators delved into military records today for a clew to the rape-slayer of two social workers who calmly cashed their checks and brazenly produced an Army identification tag to vouch for his identity.

The manhunt itself was pushed not only locally and at nearby Army camps but in the neighboring States as well. The military and the Federal Bureau of Investigation cooperated closely with civil officers.

Miss Neil John Pietrangeli, 30, and Miss Dorothy Baun, 32, left Kenosha for Tomah by automobile Monday afternoon. They were found along a wooded road near Tomah the next morning. Both had been shot.

Information linking a uniformed man with the ruthless assault came from three widely scattered points today. A Tomah cafe operator told of seeing the fugitive drive away in a car resembling Miss Pietrangeli's after cashing a $11 check to Miss Baun.

A Chippewa Falls soldier, home on leave from his air corps unit, said he apparently had ridden with the killer as he fled toward Minnesota. He said the man gave him him a lift at Tomah about midnight Monday.

A Le Sueur, Minn., banker reported that he had cashed a $25 check, signed with Miss Pietrangeli's name and drawn on her account in a Sparta, Wis., bank. The uniformed man who offered it Tuesday morning boldly signed it also with the name of Robert Bailey, exhibited an Army serial number, and said he was Miss Pietrangeli's sweetheart and authorized to use her funds.

½ Million Now Voluntarily in Canada's Forces

Ottawa, Sept. 10 (INS).—Canada has one-half million volunteers now in active service in her army, navy and air forces, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King declared tonight in a dominion-wide broadcast marking the beginning of the fourth year of this country's entry into the war.

To emphasize the measure of Canada's manpower contribution to the fighting forces of the United Nations, King said:

"To equal in numbers alone Canada's voluntary armed effort, the United States would require, in proportion to its population, to have on active service in its armed forces six million men."

Allied Sub Sinks 2 Jap Transports

Chungking Friday) Sept. 10 (AP).—Two Japanese transports loaded with 2000 troops and supplies were torpedoed and sunk by an Allied submarine off the Fukien coast August 27, the Chinese Central News Agency reported today.

The agency said the transports were off the Min River estuary and headed south when attacked.

'Hyper-Emotional' Student Slayer of 4 Held Sane

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Sept. 10.—A specialist who examined Gregorio Cardenas Hernandez, head of the "laboratory murder house," today said in a published interview that the 27-year-old chemistry students slayer was "a born criminal," not insane.

The man police say has confessed to strangling four young women and burying them in his garden, was classified as a "hyper-emotional type who could convert himself into a beast" on certain occasions, and said that he had feigned insanity when first arrested. He now is held on a formal charge of "suspicion of murder."

A different version of Cardenas' character was supplied by his former wife, Sabina Lara Gonzalez, 21.

She called him "a perfect gentleman" despite that time she said he threatened to kill them both by crashing his motor car into a tree. That was because he wanted her agreement to a divorce, she said.

Police and press were seeking out others who knew Cardenas prior to the discovery of the four bodies in his garden. The newspaper El Universal had an interview with one girl who was quoted as saying that Cardenas performed chemical experiments in his laboratory while she watched.

When Cardenas passed a handkerchief with "an odorous solution" over her face, she said she bolted.

G. M. to Conclude Billion Credit Line With 250 Banks

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Wall Street Journal says General Motors Corp. is about to conclude a billion dollar line of credit with a group of 250 commercial banks, the biggest such deal in the history of American industry.

Announcement is expected to be made in the near future, the business newspaper said. Maturity and interest rates remain to be worked out.

The credit line will make readily available working capital for the big former automobile producer now virtually 100 per cent engaged in war production.

Ordinarily the Government provides financing of war work in advance or in progress payments. In the case of General Motors, the Journal explained, a large number of widely separated branches of military authorities are involved and such financing would be complicated.

Allied Bombers Again Smash at Battered Tobruk

Cairo, Sept. 10 (INS).—Allied heavy bombers followed up yesterday's daylight aerial assault against Tobruk by American and South African aircraft with another savage attack during the night, it was revealed tonight.

Already reduced from a harbor city of pink and blue stucco buildings to a mass of rubble, the bomb-scarred Libyan "siege fort" still remains one of the chief Axis North African supply bases, and as such is a frequent target of United Nations bombers.

Big American and South African aircraft, probably including giant U. S. Flying Fortresses, carried out yesterday's daylight raid, further disrupting Axis communications and supply lines.

In the night, heavy and medium Allied bombers followed up that assault with a new attack against shipping and port facilities, leaving large fires blazing.

Coroner's Jury Rules Socialite Was Murdered

Reno, Sept. 10 (AP).—A coroner's jury, disagreeing with the district attorney's suicide theory, held today that Mrs. Bridget McBurney Sargent, 29, New York social registerite here for divorce, was brutally killed by a "person or persons unknown."

After hearing testimony describing the bloody scene in the hotel room where Mrs. Sargent's body was found in bed Monday, the jury concluded that death resulted from razor blade throat wounds.

Mrs. Sargent's body was found by William James Howard Trott, jr., 31, son of a prominent Bermuda hotel man, the day before she was to have filed suit for divorce from Charles S. Sargent, jr., of New York.

John T. McLaughlin, attorney representing both Mrs. Sargent and Trott, who was also establishing a divorce residence, said it was his understanding they had planned to marry.

Praise of R.A.F. Irks Nazis

London, Sept. 10 (INS).—Germany officially developed a new peeve today—this time against Swedish newspapers for praising the Royal Air Force.

A Wilhelmstrasse spokesman, quoted on the Berlin radio, took umbrage particularly at reports of two Swedish newspapermen now in England.

The correspondent of Svenska Dagbladet declared that his meeting with British pilots about to start on a flight over Germany had been "a revelation to him and his colleagues," the Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said. And the Dagens Nyheter reporter called them "magnificent pilots."

Luscious Dessert Waffles Easy to Fix With Modern Device and Excellent Mix

Bernice Burns, home economist, Electric Institute of Washington, makes delicious dessert, using electric mixer and prepared waffle product, which she bakes to perfection on thermostatically controlled iron. Vanilla ice cream is placed between two gingerbread waffle sections, topped with ice cream and fresh peaches

If you want your husband or boy friend to smack his lips and exclaim "Mmmmm" about the waffles you set before him, don't pull a Katie Hepburn. That is, don't just dump the ingredients into the batter bowl without benefit of measurement and expect your waffle iron to turn out waffles of the prima donna class.

The modern streamlined waffle makers complete with thermostat on automatic models will indicate when the baker is hot enough to pour on the batter, and when the waffle is done, but it can't give the service of taking out too much baking powder, or adding another tablespoon of melted fat.

There's three things of major importance in waffle baking—proper mixing of ingredients and use and care of the iron. First, let's consider the use and care of the electric waffle bakers.

If you have a new iron, read the instructions which came with it to find out whether the grids should be seasoned before the iron is used for the first time, and if so, how to do it. Some models are preheated at the factory and no seasoning is necessary.

Just in case the directions have eluded you, here are some instructions to make safe using of the iron.

To Condition:

1. Apply a thin film of melted unsalted fat to the grids with a pastry brush.
2. Close the iron and turn on the current, or if an automatic model, set the thermostat at low.
3. Heat about 8 minutes.
4. Wipe off any excess fat with paper towelling.

Unless the waffle iron is left unused for a long period, one seasoning should be sufficient for the life of the iron.

To Use:

1. The grids of the waffle iron must be heated to correct temperatures for good results, because if the grids are not hot enough the waffles may stick or be spotted with white patches; if the grids are too hot the waffle will brown before the center is done; plain waffles require moderately hot grids. Special batter such as chocolate, molasses, cheese or fruit, requires slightly cooler grids.
2. To get the correct temperature of the waffle maker—set the heat control on automatic irons; for non-automatic irons, use the water test. If you want a moderately hot iron, drop water on and when white balls form and roll around on grids it will be correct temperature. If a cooler iron is desired the drops of water will bubble slowly and boil away.
3. In case the waffle sticks even though the temperature is right, add 1 or 2 tablespoons melted fat.
4. The amount of batter to be used is determined by the thickness of the batter and the size of the grids. When batter of average thickness is used fill the grids to within 1 inch of the rim, or 4 tablespoons of batter is usually the correct amount. Bake for 2 or 3 minutes or until steam ceases. Throw away first waffle, when using iron for first time.

Care After Using

1. Disconnect equipment as soon as last waffle is finished baking.
2. Leave the iron open until the grids are cool.
3. Wipe off excess fat from grids.
4. When iron has cooled, wipe off the outside with a cloth wrung out in soapy water. Rinse with cloth wrung out of clear water. Polish with a soft dry cloth.
5. If crumbs adhere to the grids, brush with a stiff wire brush. And if any batter has burned on the grids, slightly dampen steel wool and rub the grids to remove batter. Then reseason the grids.
6. Hang cord in place where it will not tangle or knot.

With your waffle iron in perfect working condition don't bemoan the fact that you can't make tender, crisp waffles. Anyone can get the waffle award if they will follow a reliable waffle recipe, making sure that they use level measurements and baking directions.

Most men like pancakes or waffles. Many men flap a respectable flapjack themselves. And the wife of this Army lieutenant who misses waffles for breakfast told me that she makes her waffles and pancakes from a fully prepared mix.

"No reason I can't make perfect waffles when all I have to do is add water, mix and bake as per directions given on the waffle mix box," said this young cook.

I inquired what she served with her waffles. She suggested that for fall and winter menus she likes sausages, fried apples and plenty of hot coffee.

The following are suggested menus including waffles:

Washington hostesses are finding that each day brings old friends and relatives to the city. If the newcomers are here over the weekend, Sunday brunch is an excellent time to entertain them. Brunch—a condensation of the two words breakfast and lunch, is a meal that can cover both meals. No more popular and sustaining food could be served than crisp waffles and fried chicken. With fruit as a starter, plenty of hot coffee and a light dessert—perhaps a bowl of fruit and a cheese tray, there will be little left to be desired.

Oysters Here To Give Health And Good Food

Yes, the oyster season is underway, bringing with it all the gastronomic joys to which millions look forward each year as August dwindles into September, the first of the "R" months.

Since you last saw the oyster, he has grown pleasingly plump and coolly delicious under the patient and meticulous care of oyster farmers who watch their crop with all the care a doting mother lavishes on her child. During the spring and fall he may have been transplanted from one undersea bed to another where the feeding is better. After about seven years of such grooming he is considered at his flavorful best and ready to go forth and do battle with the appetites of the most critical gourmets.

Most people, according to the fishery council, consider only the taste value of the oyster and know little of its health value. Copper, iron and manganese found in oyster meats are important in preventing a type of nutritional anemia; its calcium and phosphorus content are necessary in bone growth, and its iodine in the proper functioning of the thyroid gland. Oysters contain most of the essential vitamins; namely, vitamins A, B, C and G, which are all necessary in the diet for a healthy existence. The oyster's protein has an especially high nutritive value. Glycogen, similar to starch, is found in a readily digestible form. Because of this high mineral, vitamin, protein and glycogen content, oysters are one of our most important nutritive foods.

Reports from Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, director of the Oyster Institute of North America, indicate a good, normal supply, with quality running from "good to very good" on all sub-sea oyster farms. So for the taste, nutritive and economic value of the months to come, you'll have to consider the oyster.

If you'll write to the Fishery Council at 204 Water Street, New York City, they will send you special oyster recipes which are free to all readers of this publication.

Betty Crocker suggests:

● MARY'S OFF TO SCHOOL . . . lunch box on her arm. Let's peek inside the lunch box. A thermos jug filled with piping hot soup. Egg salad and lettuce sandwich. Peanut butter sandwich. Shiny red apple and spice cup cake.

Grand idea—to include that thermos of soup! Children need something hot in the mid-day lunch.

● SO EASY to make the soup, too—with our new product. It's soup in a package! We call it "Betty Crocker Vegetable Noodle Soup Ingredients."

● ALL YOU DO: (1) Open the package. (2) Empty contents into pan of boiling water. (3) Add butter. (4) Simmer. Our new soup product is just "made to order" for busy mothers!

You get the dry ingredients 99% ready to cook. Rich egg noodles, delightful seasonings, and seven scrumptious vegetables in flake form. The vegetables are "dehydrated": moisture removed while they're fresh and crisp. You can taste the garden flavors!

● IT'S FRESH-COOKED SOUP. Not warmed over. You cook the vegetables yourself for the first time. Real home-cooked soup. And so delicious, say my staff!

● GOES FAR, TOO. Each package makes six large bowls of soup! Enough for several lunch boxes, and lunch at home. That's thrift—as each package costs only 10c. Often less, when you buy several packages. Economical to buy three at a time!

Give Our Service Men a 'Howdy,' Urges Head of Overseas League

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

If gracious Mrs. Virginia Armistead Nelson, newly elected president of the Washington Women's Overseas League, gets her way, all the servicemen passed on the streets will be greeted with a pleasant, "Good morning" or "Howdy do."

Miss Reynolds

"Where food and recreation are concerned, many organizations and many individuals are doing a grand job," she averred. "But why can't we Washington women, and men, too, give a friendly salutation to the uniformed men we pass on the streets?"

"So many of the uniformed young men whom we see in downtown Washington each day have such serious expressions," she said. "They are alert enough—they see the officers they pass and salute them, but they look as if they are not expecting to see a friendly civilian face."

Emphasizing the fact that she did not advocate grinning at strangers, Mrs. Nelson quickly pointed out that servicemen in the uniform of our country should be classed as friends.

"Should any extremely proper woman be afraid of Emily Post, I feel confident Mrs. Post would not be a goblin and get them," she said, "if they gave a word or smile or a little gesture of greeting to the serious young men who are being trained to attack our enemies and defend our country."

No Coquetry

Should any woman follow Mrs. Nelson's suggestion, she says that she hopes prayerfully no woman, young, youngish or middle-aged, will dish out coquetish smiles. And if she does, a blank stare is the only thing deserved in return.

"These young servicemen of our country are not in the mood for silly flirtatiousness," she declared. "My guess is that 99 out of every 100 men on leave here in Washington would appreciate a verbal or smiling greeting from the right sort of woman as they pass along the streets of their country's Capital City. It would make them think of the friendly greetings on the streets of their home town had they not left their environment for service of their country. Soon they would think, 'Nice friendly people here are just like the good, friendly people back home. This is my home, too.'"

MRS. VIRGINIA ARMISTEAD NELSON

Mrs. Nelson's interests are divided between social service and writing. Before coming to Washington in 1930, she served for several years with the American Red Cross in disaster relief and rehabilitation work, having a part in the stupendous flood-relief program in the submerged areas along the Mississippi and Atchafalaya and Red Rivers.

For five years, Mrs. Nelson was on the editorial staff of the Nashville Banner—now does a column for the Nashville Tennesseean. In addition to her newspaper work, she found time to write the libretto of the three-act opera "Kalopin," the score of which was written by the noted composer, Charles Sanford Kilton. You'll find many of her poems included in several anthologies.

Belongs to 18 Clubs

When questioned about her club interests, she laughed and replied: Sounds terrific, but I belong to 18 clubs . . . most of them national organizations, and I hold office in six of them. Fully half of them hold only annual meetings, therefore are no drain on my time. I wouldn't want to give up any of them, for in each one I have cherished friends."

As for the league itself, membership of the Washington Unit of the W. O. S. L. comprises more than 160 American women who served with the American Expeditionary Force in World War I as ambulance drivers, canteen and clerical workers, doctors and nurses. Also, many mixed their duties as the occasion arose.

These women were as carefully handpicked in 1917 and 1918 as are the women today who are being accepted for service with the United States overseas forces. The national organization has 2000 members in 35 units throughout the country, according to Mrs. Nelson.

Individually, the women of the Washington unit of the W. O. S. L. either are doing whole wartime work—such as Col. Julia O. Fikke, superintendent of the United States Army Nurses Corps, and Lieut. Comdr. Sue Dauser, superintendent of the United States Navy Nurses Corps—and others are active with the American Woman's Voluntary Services.

As a unit, the Washington group assumed responsibility last winter for the recreational facilities at U. S. O. Service Men's Club No. 1, Pennsylvania Avenue at Ninth Street. Mrs. J. S. Steed is the hostess, and volunteer workers from the unit are on duty every night. They and their friends furnish the refreshments for the nightly parties and the big Saturday night dance. Groups of young girls who are relatives or friends of the club members act as sightseeing guides or dance partners to the servicemen.

The Sunday morning breakfasts served by league members are popular events. Buttered rolls and strawberry preserves are always there for the robust appetites. Second cups of coffee are the rule—three and four cups per person cause no eyebrow lifting.

Mrs. Fred S. Buschmeyer has been renamed chairman of the Girl Reserve executive committee and Mrs. Harold E. Saunders has been reelected chairman of the mothers' council.

The opening meeting of the Girl Reserve executive committee will be held at the central Y. W. C. A. on Monday at 12:30 p. m. The committee members are: Mrs. Dewitt Bennett, Mrs. Joseph Grigsby, Miss Grace Johnson, Mrs. George Lipscomb, Mrs. Stuart Rice, Miss Eleanor Roberson, Mrs. Harold E. This year's club meetings will be held at the Gill-Bert, 2460 Sixteenth Street Northwest, instead of at 2600 Sixteenth Street, as formerly, it was announced. Meetings are scheduled for the fourth Thursday of each month.

Mrs. James A. Robertson was retained as chairman of the revisions committee, while Mrs. Jason Waterman was named parliamentarian at the meeting.

Representing the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs on the Stage Door Canteen group, First Vice President Mrs. Charles P. Keyser called for volunteer workers.

Mrs. Bisno Elected Head Of B'nai Brith Unit

Mrs. Julius Bisno was elected president of the Montgomery Auxiliary of B'nai Brith, while Mrs. Charles Goldberg became vice president, at a recent meeting.

Other officers included: Mrs. George Mintzer, recording secretary; Mrs. Jacob Chlap, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Morris Seltzer, financial secretary and treasurer.

Reporting as highly successful the first of a series of group dinners for soldiers and their female partners given last week by the organization, Mrs. Harold Kramer, chairman of the war service committee, told members that the soldiers expresed appreciation of the "home atmosphere" in their thank-you letters.

Camp Fire Girls to Aid Salvage Drive

Camp Fire Girls in this area were enlisted in the salvage campaign, to operate on a more highly organized basis than heretofore, when group leaders met yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Irene B Caldwell, chairman of the council.

Mrs. Caldwell asked for the appointment of a local committee consisting of Mrs. M. E. Jansson, chairman; Mrs. R. L. Simmons, Mrs. A. E. Brandt, Mrs. Joseph E. Gray and Mrs. P. G. Marshall.

In addition to collection of rags, rubber, grease and small metals, the girls will cooperate with adults who are at work on the problem. A system of area and subarea teams, similar to that used by adult volunteers, is planned, through which collections and reports of available scrap will be made.

The national membership campaign begins September 27, but plans have been made in the Potomac area to concentrate this year on the need for additional group leaders. Miss Mary Fiedler, national field executive, will arrive in Washington for a two-weeks stay October 1, to introduce fall programs, organize new clubs and generally assist local executives.

Manor Park Chapter Of Y. W. C. A. Meets

Hadassah Unit to Plan More War Work

Increased fund-raising activities for Hadassah projects and organization of more Red Cross volunteer and war-bond-selling groups will be planned at the opening meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Division of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah to be held Tuesday night at the Jewish Community Center.

Announcing that "All-out for the war effort" would be the organization's slogan this year, Miss Celia Arnold, club president, stated at a recent board meeting that whatever builds morale and strength in Palestine—school luncheons, improved hospitals, aid to refugees—builds morale and strength for the Allied cause and is of immediate benefit to the war effort.

Miss Jessie Braier, chairman of the Committee on American Affairs, is directing fund-raising activities to assist Palestine in its war effort in the Near East.

Sen. Burton to Address Voteless D. C. League

Meet the best informed women in America—

the readers of The Washington Post

They know the score in Libya as well as the best recipe for chocolate cookies; they're smart as well as smart-looking; we'll back them against any group of women in the world.

Washington is more than just a woman's town—it's a town of smart women. The nation's bright, alert, ambitious girls have been drawn here by the twin magnets of Washington glamour and government jobs. The native Washingtonians haven't let the competition go unchallenged. Between the two groups Washington has become blessed with a really unusual feminine population whose interests take in far more than the average woman's scope.

Yes, Washington girls are interested in beauty and fashions and their personal problems! But they want the war news, too, and sensible editorial comment, and sound interpretation of the news.

Of course, Washington mothers want recipes and advice on bringing up children and running their homes! But they're not willing to lag one second behind their husbands in awareness of what's going on in the world.

That's why the smartest of these Washington women are the ones who are confirmed addicts of The Washington Post. They hail with real pleasure The Post's new women's section, collecting in one place in the paper all the material pertaining to things of interest almost exclusively to women. But they haven't forgotten that The Post is also the paper to read to keep up with the world—that The Post has the most wire services, the best war coverage, the finest editorial pages, the best columnists and special articles.

They'll admire your mind as well as your appearance, when you've sharpened them both with The Washington Post.

WAR NEWS

Most wire services. Most complete war news available in any Washington newspaper. That's why Post readers are Washington's best informed.

LOCAL NEWS

By actual space measurement, The Post publishes the most local news and pictures, day in and day out.

PICTURE NEWS

More pictures of all kinds. By actual count The Post publishes more pictures than appear in any other Washington paper.

OPINION

GOVERNMENT NEWS

Uncle Sam's employes find Jerry Klutts's "Federal Diary" the best source of news about government affairs. On Saturdays the column is contributed by government people themselves.

HOMEMAKING

Recipes, menus, household suggestions, patterns, child advice, diets, and other matters relating to home management are discussed thoroughly and expertly in the new women's section.

PERSONAL

News of important and interesting people, health, etiquette, fashions, beauty, Mary Haworth's advice on personal problems—these, too, help make The Post's new women's section invaluable.

ENTERTAINMENT

News of movies, theater, concerts, radio log. And material for self entertainment in the daily serial story, the Sunday complete novel, and the Sunday picture-magazine section, "Parade."

Abbott and Costello Do It Again on Keith Screen

'Pardon My Sarong,' With Nice Cast In Support, Is Packed With Laughs; 'La Cucaracha' Tops Supplementaries

LUNACY IS ON THE LOOSE again at RKO-Keith's.

As if they had not already maneuvered the matter with some conclusiveness, the capaciously incorrigible Messrs. Abbott and Costello currently are continuing their demonstration of the imperishability of the gaggery that made burlesque famous—or infamous, according to how you feel about it—and its adaptability, in slightly refined form, to the susceptibilities of upper-crust audiences. Their latest excursion into the violent ward is made in a volcanic little item—both literally and figuratively—which bears the title of "Pardon My Sarong" as gracefully as it would any other convenient irrelevancy.

In this one—which, foot for foot, probably encompasses more button-busting laughs than any of its predecessors in the A. & C. cycle since it was inaugurated with "Buck Privates" back there in 1941—the boys start out as Chicago crosstown bus drivers who somehow get off their route and turn up as the picture opens within stone's throw of the Pacific Coast. To elude the clutches of the law, they get aboard a racing yacht and founder on an uncharted Pacific island, where a gang of very tough highbinders are attempting to salvage a fortune in jewels from the sacred temple.

A faint trace of romance aboard the yacht and a heavy dash of Polynesian pulchritude creep into the goings-on now and again, but for the most part the action is dedicated to the rotund Mr. Costello's genius for disaster and Mr. Abbott's fine talent for egging him on into the deadly embrace of catastrophe.

As a considerate concession to high blood pressure, frequent recesses are taken from the story's more vigorous hilarities to introduce music and the dance. These intervals of tuneful relaxation range from the torchy ballads and torrid rhythms of the Four Ink Spots and the dancing Tip, Tap and Toe, respectively, in the Los Angeles hot spot, to the rhythmic songs and thighroid undulations of the synthetic South Sea Islanders.

By and large, the whole mad business adds up to a whale of a debauch in dementia and an elegant workout for the diaphragm.

Abbott and Costello, this time out, are working in top form and varying their usual procedure by keeping their crazy routines short and snappy. They even have thought up some new ones. As in the temple chase scene, for example. Mr. Costello is being run ragged up a long flight of stone steps, when he turns suddenly upon his pursuers and remarks that he's tired and all out of breath and has to rest a minute. So do they. So they stand there in friendly conversation until they all recover and Costello shouts, "Okay, come on, let's go!" That chase, however, is only a tune-up for the one preceding the final escape from the island. And then there's that storm at sea, the island betrothal feast and all the rest. Not a dull or sane moment. Participating in all this with the stars are Virginia Bruce and Robert Paige, as the pseudo-romanticists; Lionel Atwill, as head thug; Leif Erikson and Samuel S. Hinds, as cannibal tribesmen; Nan Wynn, as the singing princess of the insular beauties, and Marie McDonald and Elaine Morey, as the more alluring of her companions. No time out on anybody's part for "acting." The six musical interruptions are exceedingly easy to take, especially "Lovely Luana," "Vingo Jingo" and the Ink Spots' "Do I Worry?" and those three T's certainly can dance.

The less than hour-and-a-half length of the feature makes room for a considerable supplementary bill at Keith's this week. With Steffi Duna, Don Alvarado and Paul Porcasi in the principal roles, "La Cucaracha," the Technicolor musical of ancient vintage, revives with surprising effectiveness, despite the progress that has been made in natural color processes since it was first released. It looks as good as new. Two Disney short subjects score their usual hits—"Donald Gets Drafted," a ducky cartoon, and "Out of the Frying Pan Into the Firing Line," setting forth the value of kitchen grease on behalf of the Government. The newsreel completes a bill of titanic tomfoolery.

Blonde and Brunette Support Buffoons

VIRGINIA BRUCE AND ROBERT PAIGE who have the romantic leads—if battling one minute and making love the next is romance—in support of Abbott and Costello in Universal's production of "Pardon My Sarong," now on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater

Krupa Outranks 'Invisible Agent' On New Bill at Loew's Capitol

By Ernest L. Schier

"INVISIBLE AGENT." Universal picturization of an original screen play by Curtis Siodmak, starring Jon Hall and Ilona Massey, with Peter Lorre, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, J. Edward Bromberg, Albert Basserman, John Litel, Holmes Herbert and Keye Luke. Produced by Frank Lloyd and directed by Edwin L. Marin. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

In view of current headlines and the President's recent warning of further sacrifices on the home front, it becomes increasingly difficult to pass off as "entertainment" the kind of film which indulges in wishful thinking where our enemies are concerned.

To say that "Invisible Agent," current occupant of the Capitol screen, was undermining national morale might be stating the problem too broadly, but an unhealthy public attitude would certainly be the result of producing any more of these fantastically optimistic pictures.

The one bright spot in viewing the melodramatic thriller was the attitude of the teen-age audience, composing most of the packed house, who laughed raucously at the unbelievable situations and refused to be taken in by the plot, which portrays the Germans and Japanese as blundering fools.

Melodrama to Slapstick

Beginning as a spy melodrama, "Invisible Agent" follows the lines of its predecessors and ends up as a slap-stick burlesque. An American with a secret formula for making himself invisible is sent to Germany to uncover the plans for a Nazi attack on America. Once there, he throws the entire Gestapo into confusion by his ability to be heard and not seen. A series of ingenious traps are laid for him, but none has any great effect. The Japs certainly came up with a good one, though. By throwing a net filled with fish hooks over the talking shadow, they managed to hold him a little longer than their allies.

Leaving the frustrated enemy agents behind to kill each other off, the transparent hero makes his escape in a German bomber—the secret plans in one hand and a beautiful blonde in the other. Sort of anticlimactic, isn't it?

As the little man who isn't there, Jon Hall gets an opportunity to exercise his vocal chords while the prop men pull strings to convince you that he really is present. Ilona Massey is the beautiful counterspy who waits with bated breath for her dream man to take a more material form and then gives out with a shrill whistle of relief as he turns into the possessor of one of Hollywood's more publicized bodies beautiful. Peter Lorre and Sir Cedric Hardwicke, two capable actors, look very uncomfortable in their roles as the leaders of the Japanese and German spy rings. The supporting cast also includes J. Edward Bromberg, Albert Basserman and Keye Luke.

Soothing the Zoot Suits

What may seem to be a very simple matter to some continues to be an amazing phenomenon to others. The spectacle of a man beating a drum, or vice-versa, was largely responsible for bringing out, en masse, the "zoot suit" set, who sat in raptured awe as Gene Krupa, master of the skins, worked up a lather for the delight of his audience. The vocal chores of his orchestra were handled by Anita O'Day, who sang "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle" and then encored with "Drum Boogie," while the eminent maestroy took the spotlight with a solo passage that is guaranteed to soothe the savage breast. Ray Eberle caused the local maids to swoon with delight as he dished out in sirupy tones his rendition of two popular tunes of the day.

The balance of the stage show was made up by The Nonchalants, an acrobatic team with a smooth line of patter, and a burlesque overture by Sam Jack Kaufman, who is turning into quite a comic, and his orchestra.

The latest Fox Movietone News and a Walt Disney cartoon on saving fats for explosives round out the bill.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Sept. 10.

Orson Wells, who recently returned from South America, has lost none of his excitement. The Sat. Eve. Post is bidding for his services on that magazine's forthcoming radio series. And for the first time in its career, the New Yorker may do a second profile on the same subject, reporting Orson's adventures of the past five years . . . Wells' ex-wife is married to Charles Lederer, the writer director who is a favorite at San Simeon. When Orson was in Frisco, he learned that on the same floor of his hotel was a large suite occupied by Hearst's party—including Welles' former wife, their daughter, and Lederer. "Citizen Kane" phoned the suite to invite William Randolph Hearst to dine with him. A secretary informed that the publisher wasn't available. "Well, if I can't see Mr. Hearst," said Orson, "may I see the child he dangles on his knee? She's my daughter."

ORSON WELLES

In the room from which the President broadcast the other night he watched the various announcers who were introducing him over their hookups. Each announcer broadcast, separately; "The President of the United States." After Mr. Roosevelt heard each deliver this line separately, he told them: "Boys, next time get together" . . . David Selznick has assured Oscar Serlin that the asking price for the screen rights for "Life With Father"—$500,000 plus percentage—is reasonable. If the additional specifications can be settled, Selznick will buy . . . Seversky will do the full narration for Disney's adaptation of his "Victory Through Air Power."

The new 6-nights-a-week radio series for Coca-Cola will be broadcast from the Army camps in the outlying districts—camps which are off the usual entertainment route. And at the request of the Government the broadcasts also will be made from those defense factories which have been awarded "E" pennants . . . Jack Kirkland has discovered that there's one bit in his revived "Tobacco Road" which dates it. "The Lesters haven't changed through all the years," he sighed, but now there's prosperity on 'Tobacco Road.' Dude has a tire" . . . Al Jolson, now in England, has been able to preserve the tan he's kept for many years, despite his constant travelling. "No matter how bad things are," Jolson explains, "they're always better with a sunburn."

During the air-raid alert Monday morning Sherman Billingsley studied the crowd at his Stork Club and expressed the hope that the mob wouldn't become panic stricken in case the raid were real . . . A ringsider then told him this story, which took place in Indianapolis a few weeks ago. Blackstone, the magician, had started his performance when a message was whispered to him from the wings . . . "Ladies and gentlemen, I am now going to perform the most difficult trick of my career," he told the audience, "but to perform it, you'll all have to leave the theatre quietly." The puzzled audience never knew, until they were safely outside, that the theatre was on fire.

Leonora Corbett of "Blithe Spirit," who spent her one-day honeymoon with John Royal at Niagara Falls, couldn't disassociate herself from the theater. She learned that Brock Pemberton was rehearsing the new play, "Janie," at the Erlanger Theatre in Buffalo and the honeymoon couple went there. In honor of the newlyweds, Pemberton had a run-through of the entire play for them . . . Hedy Lamar, who has been touring the nation in a bond-selling drive, is receiving nation-wide publicity following each appearance. But at Fefe's Monte Carlo recently the lionized Miss Lamar asked only one question of Bur-Mar, the crystal-ball gazer at the club. It was the eternal question of women—"When will I be married?"

HEDDA HOPPER

Famous Name Comes Out of Past

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 10. Anna Sten, the girl Goldwyn tried to make a star by spending a million dollars on her, gets her first part in more than a year in Twentieth Century's "Seventh Column." She plays Greta, the wife of Gen. Mihailovitch, who probably will be portrayed by Phillip Dorn. It's the dramatic story of a mother and her two children who are taken as hostages by the Nazis as a means of making her guerilla chief husband give up the fight.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Edmund Lowe and Columbia are talking a long-term deal. This will mean a real comeback for Lowe, who looks better than ever.

The part in "The Immortal Sergeant" which George Sanders turned down, taking another suspension instead, gives a real break to Morton Lowry. Morton is the young actor who did such a fine job as the brutal schoolmaster in "How Green Was My Valley," but despite that has had tough going until now.

It was a foregone conclusion that as soon as Col. Darryl Zanuck resigned from Twentieth Century-Fox to devote all his time to Government work, Lieut. Col. Jack Warner would do likewise. So it won't be long now until he'll be saying goodby to the studio he has made famous.

Incidentally, his wife, Ann, and Designer Orry-Kelly escorted Elsa Maxwell east after Elsa had been the Warner's house guest for six weeks.

It is well known that Ann's former husband, Don Alvarado, is working on the Warner lot, but Jack sees no reason why Don should raise his cap to him every time he passes him by.

Rosalind Russell is wearing a heavy gold bracelet which contains a tiny watch and this inscription, "And so beats my heart for you," from Freddie Brisson.

Charlie McCarthy, who's always been so free of profanity, changed when he addressed our soldiers in Alaska. He said, "What the so-and-so, so-and-so kind of a place is this?"

In "Torpedo Squadron," which Sid James wrote and Twentieth Century will make in color, there will be some unexpurgated film John Ford took at the battle of Midway.

Million Bond Sale Expected From 'Mrs. Hadley' Premiere

Representatives of the District of Columbia war savings staff of the Treasury Department announced yesterday that one million dollars in war bond purchases is expected to be made through the premiere showing September 23 at the Capitol Theater of "The War Against Mrs. Hadley."

Tickets will be issued by banks, the Loew Theaters and other bond-selling agencies, with purchases of bonds of $25 maturity value and above.

The show will start at 8:30 p. m. and will feature Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter, Richard Ney and others. Following its run at the Capitol, the show will be released for national distribution.

Plans were announced following a meeting yesterday of Treasury officials with Martin T. Weigand, president of Kiwanis; M. K. Wilberding, president of Rotary; John A. Reilly, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association; Lanier P. McLachlin, president of the Board of Trade; F. P. H. Siddons, chairman of the Board of Trade's special bond committee; E. F. Shaw, secretary, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, and Carter Barron, division manager of Loew's theaters.

Hinda Plans To Shake All, Enter WAACS

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

That homey little lady of the Gayety, Hinda Wassau, one of the few people in overcrowded Washington who is really taking up space by public demand, was touched by the naked white flame of patriotism yesterday.

The thought had been shimmying through her mind a long time and yesterday, while dressing after an act at the Gayety, where she periodically builds public morale by removing the world's cares from the tired businessman's brow, La Wassau announced her decision. She intends to join the WAACS.

This, she asserted, indignantly at times, is no press agent stunt. It is, rather, a solemn decision seriously arrived at, by herself. La Wassau, in a third-floor dressing room with that bothersome window that people in nearby establishments sometimes look toward—the pikers who won't pay admission to the show. They want to see the show from their office chairs.

It isn't boredom in her success that is making La Wassau restless. She has been acclaimed "Washington's Adopted Daughter" by Ninth Street. She has, in the words of the theater management, "that strange something" which brought her out of the back line of a chorus. There's no use of going into when.

"I don't want to hold any office," she announced. "I just want to start fresh from scratch and go as far as I can. I've been thinking about it ever since the WAACS started."

This, too, it should be explained, was caused by no sudden fear that the Nation would perish without Wassau in line. Between her interests in baseball and the Timonium race track, Wassau, as an interested taxpaying citizen, has watched the trend of events and concluded "that the war is going O. K."

Everything, in fact, is all right. The audiences are growing bigger, balder and gayer, which Wassau believes is caused by a public inclination to "take the fun while you can get it—you may be dead tomorrow."

"But on taxes her notions are more emphatic.

"The tax program is all right, but it should not be overdone," said Wassau, consistent in conservatism.

So the general situation looks pretty good and Wassau wants to fight to preserve it.

She Feels the Urge To Join WAACS

'This Is Army' Seat Sale at Defense Booth

To expedite the sale of seats for "This Is the Army," the Irving Berlin all-soldier show, which has its Washington premiere on Tuesday, September 29, a special box office will be opened in the Civilian Defense Volunteer booth, across the street from the National Theater. This announcement was made yesterday by A. L. Berman, president of This Is the Army, Inc., the civilian agency which produced the show for Army Emergency Relief.

Tickets for every performance will be placed on sale at this special booth on next Monday, September 14, at 9 a. m. Seats will be sold nowhere else in Washington. The soldier staff attached to "This Is the Army" will man the box office, which will open its doors every morning at 9.

The booth was made available for this special occasion through the courtesy of the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office and Civilian Mobilization, which will share the office with the Army show during its Washington stand.

For any information concerning "This Is the Army," prospective theater-goers are urged to telephone Executive 3062 or 3063.

No Mail or Phone Orders

Because of the unprecedented demand for seats, mail orders and telephone requests will not be filled, much as the sponsors of the show would like to provide this accommodation.

"The tremendous success of the show in New York," stated Mr. Berman yesterday, "has created a condition in which the demand for seats greatly exceeds the supply. Since this is in every respect 'the peoples' show,' the management desires to distribute the tickets to the general public only at box-office prices. We therefore urge patrons to buy seats as early as possible to avoid disappointment at our special box-office, located in the booth maintained by the Civilian Defense Volunteers directly opposite the National Theater.

"We realize fully that it has been the policy of the National Theater to fill both mail and telephone orders, but this system, in view of the demand for the Army show, creates undue hardship on those who stand in line to purchase their own tickets. We are making every effort possible, therefore, to see that only those who buy tickets for the use of themselves, their families and friends, get them.

Warning to Public

"To safeguard the public, the management reserves the right to reject any ticket sold through ticket agencies or ticket brokers. The public can render a valuable service by reporting any violation of this ruling. In order to insure everybody seeing the show who so desires, we have booked 'This Is the Army' in Washington for a run of two weeks."

"This Is the Army," which opened in New York on July 4, has been playing to capacity business at every performance. A gross of approximately $800,000 will have been achieved for Army Emergency Relief before the show begins its Nation-wide tour here on September 29.

Irving Berlin, of course, wrote and conceived the entire show. He also appears in it with several of the original members his world War I musical, 'Yip, Yip, Yaphank," reintroducing the hit of that military hippodrome, "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up In the Morning."

Illiteracy Rate, Acute Shortage of Teachers Hamper Programs of Army, Industry Alike

An army of "functionally" illiterate people is holding up America's all-out war effort at a tremendous loss to the country in military manpower and war industry production, United States education officials said yesterday.

Commenting on this manpower bottleneck, Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, told a Post reporter yesterday that "many of the 10,104,000 people over 25 years of age who have not completed the fourth grade, are not admitted to armed forces or employed in war industries because of their inability to read or write."

Dr. Studebaker added that many of those classified as having more than a fourth grade education could very well be included among the "functionally illiterate," according to tests at Army induction centers, because these tests indicate that merely having more than a fourth grade education "does not guarantee that a person can read and write well enough to make practical use of those two fundamental skills."

Dr. Studebaker declared further, "the versatility of modern warfare demands men who are somewhat literate at least; and industry also finds it exceedingly difficult if not impossible, to train illiterate men adequately along technological lines."

"America's high rate of illiteracy," Studebaker added, "is all the more shocking when compared to the amazingly low degree of illiteracy in Germany and Japan. No other large nation has ever carried so many people so far in education as the United States, but our enemies have made sure their armies and industries are not handicapped by illiteracy."

War Department officials, when asked by The Post how much money was being spent on educating the Army illiterate, admitted that such a program was in force, but said they could not release any figures on the subject.

Commenting yesterday on another pressing educational problem, Benjamin W. Frazier, senior specialist in teacher training of the United States Office of Education, stated that "since Pearl Harbor the number of States which have reported shortages of teachers has increased from 50 to 100 per cent in vocational agriculture, physical education, industrial arts and trades and industries, business education, the natural sciences, including physics, chemistry, and mathematics."

Warning that this is "only the beginning," he cited the grave condition of American education at the close of the first World War, which lasted, as far as the United States was concerned, one year and seven months. At that time there was a shortage of 50,000 teachers, with 122,000 inexperienced ones entering the school systems.

"With the greatest war in history only beginning, the draft 'scraping the bottom' of the 1-A manpower barrel, and the older men and teenage boys getting ready for service, in addition to many women leaving teaching because of more inviting and higher-paying positions in Government and private industry, the gravity of the situation is mounting daily.

"At the present time there is a national shortage of approximately 50,000 teachers who must be replaced from new sources," Frazier said.

Commenting on the hazard of illiteracy and teacher shortage in this country, Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, declared: "Our country has neglected the basic training for manpower. There have been 250,000 draftees rejected solely because of illiteracy. Now the Army is going to great financial expense to train men in the basic knowledge of reading and writing when all the money they are spending for this purpose could be going into the manufacture of guns and tanks and airplanes essential for successful prosecution of the war."

Continued Senator Thomas, "there hasn't been a battle since Marathon that could not have been changed by 15 divisions of soldiers. Lack of education has denied the United States Army the use of 15 divisions up to the present time.

"College men and married men have been drafted, but there is a vast army of 250,000 other men who have been rejected because they have not been properly educated.

"This situation will continue so long as the great shortage of 50,000 teachers is permitted to exist. This condition is all the more puzzling because our experience in the last war, when we ran so short of teachers, has not taught us a lesson."

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA

Science has not yet found a preparation which will give relief to all hay fever and asthma sufferers. This is understandable when one realizes that both of these conditions can be caused by many things, such as pollens from flowers, wool, perfumes, animal hairs, improper diet, etc. However, science has discovered that many cases of hay fever and asthma get amazing relief from the administration of a certain vital food element. Allo-tan, a rich source of this important element, gives relief to thousands of sufferers year in and year out. Allo-tan is put up in inexpensive, easy-to-take tablets.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Even with STAGGERED WORKING HOURS

It Is WASHINGTON'S GREATEST PAYLOAD

Over a million and a quarter rides a day with TRANSITADS in this city is the size of it—A tremendous 80% average increase over last year. And the tide still rises. Staggered working hours, speeded schedules, reconditioning of all equipment—all available measure being applied to cope with the growing payload of public transit passengers. Because of gasoline and rubber priorities, the higher bracket income group as well as the great middle class ride in Washington's streetcars and buses.

THIS COMBINATION WORKS

Today's Number One Out-Of-The-Home medium grows apace in effectiveness, now lives longer with more live customers than ever before. Only in TRANSITADS can the advertiser deliver his full length story in dynamic big space full color to masses throughout every hour of every day—and night. Only in TRANSITADS can prolong selling pressure (average ride, 20 min.) be applied just before the customer reaches a store. Only in TRANSITADS can this high quality circulation be bought at a cost lower than 4c per thousand. Smart advertisers are realizing it. You can't stretch a Streetcar!

Appeals Board Backs Plea of Draft Objector

The District Selective Service Board of Appeals handled three appeals for reclassification from 1-A to 4-E for the week ended August 8, and granted one, rejected another and decided on 1-A-O for the third, it was announced yesterday. These men had been classified as available for immediate duty, and were appealing to be reclassified as conscientious objectors.

Fred Manthey, 27, statistical clerk with the National Labor Relations Board, will be assigned to a self-sustaining camp for conscientious objectors. He is a member of the First Congregational Church, but was not "motivated by any feelings except a personal aversion to bearing arms under any circumstances." Manthey is a native of Akron, Ohio, and a graduate of the University of Akron.

In Non-Combatant Group

First filed about a month ago, the appeal of William C. Bryant, former reporter in the Washington branch of the Wall Street Journal, to be reclassified from 1-A to either 4-E or 1-A-O, was returned by the board designated 1-A-O—duty with a non-combatant branch of the armed forces.

However, it was learned here yesterday that Bryant, who is 25, enlisted in the Medical Corps of the Navy a month ago, when he was first told by the draft board that he would "go in any branch the Army saw fit."

Rejected by the board was the appeal of Joseph E. Winkler, 29, under library assistant, for change of status from 1-A to 4-E

Approved were eight appeals for reclassification from 1-A to 3-A on grounds of dependency. They were made by James F. McNamara, 25; Edward J. Roche, 28; Floyd T. Hichenlooper, 33; Joseph Marks, 42; Ralph W. Kinison, 27; Nicholas S. Smilanich, 32; Chester M. Norris, 24, and Arthur Ceepes, 33.

Appeals Vetoed

Vetoed by the board were the following appeals for reclassification from 1-A to 3-A: Florencio C. Agustin, 35; John William Connors, 45; Earl V. Castle, 24; Aaron D. Schlopak, 25; Milton Abelson, 30; Jack H. Barnwell, 24; Frank M. McCeary, 27; Dianisio Javonillo, 34; George M. Higbee, 32; Henry F. Allen, 36; Charles J. Schreiber, 29; Douglas Justice, 38, recommended 60 days stay of induction; Carl Gallagher, 33; James E. Dillon, 21; Edward W. Howard, 30; Donald O. Tucker, 30; Edward J. Perkins, 32; Leonard V. Feldman, 39, recommended for 60 days stay of induction; Basil W. Artist, 27; Carroll B. Hutchinson, 24; William A. Johnson, 29; Carl F. Jones, 35; Nicholas P. Kremser, 33; Sam Glass, 28; Carter M. Bowen, 21, recommended for 60 days stay of induction; James M. Zazanis, 25; Talmadge Smith, 29; Isaac S. Schecter, 31; Orville R. Stewart, 40, and Daniel J. Leahy, 38.

The board denied the appeal of Charles W. Hopkins, 37, to be changed from 1-B to 3-A.

Appeal Approved

Approved by the board was the appeal of Robert G. Snyder, 31, chemist and dairy technician, Carry Ice Cream Co., to be switched from 1-A to 2-A on grounds of occupation.

Eight appeals asking for change from 1-A to occupational classifications were denied. They were William Yarnall, 30, teacher, physical education, Hyattsville High School; Vincent J. Mansfield, 24, guard, New York City Water System; Frederick A. Stickel, 20, student, chemical engineering, St. Peter's College; Harry Warshaw, 27, operator of a book store, recommended for 60 days stay of induction; Chinn Yu Lee, 38, bookkeeper accountant, Sperry Gyroscope Co.; Milton Belzer, 29, supervisor and repairman in Finance Office, United States Army; Thomas V. Woodford, 25, United States Army Technical School, Chanute Field, Ill., and John McGovern, 20, student Georgetown University Medical School.

Also announced yesterday by the District Selective Service headquarters were the names of 68 District men, inducted into the Army August 29, who will report back for duty at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

They are:

William E. Hargett, Leo H. Ross, Leonard E. Witkin, Daniel Ostrosky, Thurston W. Funkhouser, Murray Stein, Edwin P. McVay, Paul L. Wroe, Raymond V. Edelen, Antonio Fernandez, Harold A. Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

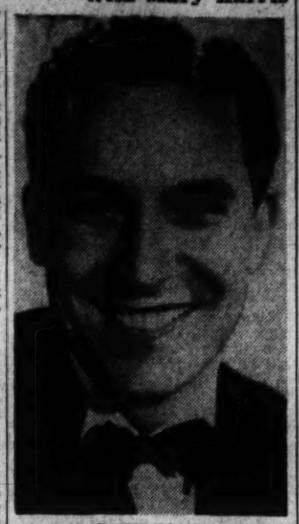
THE LAUGHS WILL HAVE IT at the opening of Paul Young's next Tuesday. Arthur Blake, whose satirical impressions have delighted White House audiences of highly placed New Dealers will be the emcee. He can best be described as a sort of male Sheila Barrett. Add on the parodies of Owen and Parker, last stars of Ben Marden's Riviera, and it's a sure thing that the fall debut of Paul Young's will be a succession of giggles and guffaws. Jill Raye, tricky little tap dancer, will also be on hand. At the moment of going to press Friend Paul was expecting a wire any second from Marion Powers, his finest singer of last season whom he also hopes to have in the line-up.

COSMIC COSMOS NEWS. The star studded sky (maybe we mean ceiling) of the Carlton's Cosmos Room will start twinkling next Friday eve, September 18. Ray Morton's highly recommended orchestra from Boston's Copley-Plaza will be on the bandstand. This is a 9-man unit with nary a girl singer. The vocals are mostly done by Maestro Morton who has been a singing star on the radio, in Manhattan's Rainbow Room and on a South American tour with Ruby Newman's band.

Pianist Marie Stanley will open at Mayfair next Monday. This talented lass was featured at Miami's Bar of Music last season, registered a resounding hit.

EXCITING VISITORS. Remember Bill Haines, topflight star of the silent days? He was recently in the Neptune Room, said he was running half a dozen business ventures, including a hairdressing school. . . At La Salle du Bois we saw Capt. Polan Banks, novelist and husband of the former Amalie Baruch, daughter of Bernard Baruch.

MAESTROS' DOINGS. Adrian Rollini, now in the Dubonnet Room, caught 59 fish on a recent excursion to Solomon Island, and 27 of them were big blue taylors. Adrian gave 'em all away. . . . In the excitement of the Troika opening not enough was said about the fact that Sasha Lukas is again wielding the baton and playing his matchless muted violin solos. . . . Ray Kinney, now at the Victory Room, says that Hawaiian music is experiencing a great upswing, with agents unable to fill the demand for South Seas diversionists. . . . Bandleader Ralph Hawkins of Crossroads expects to add one of the country's finest trombonists to his band. . . . And Maestro George Stein of River Bend is busily strengthening his orchestra line-up for the coming season. . . . The WINX radio time of the Rainbow Room's Milton Davis has been changed from 10:30 to 11:45 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for the coming season. . . . Herbert Curbelos, who will bring his band to the new La Conga when it opens on September 18, is well known in his native Cuba as a composer of popular songs. . . . Little Jack Little, now at El Patio, is working 17 hours a day between his radio engagements, El Patio and rehearals, is getting along with 5 hours' sleep in every 24.



PAUL KAIN

Trickiest novelty act of the year is Billy Romano's "ballroom styling" at the Casino Royal. Billy concocts dogs, elephants, giraffes and other fauna from rainbow colored balloons, giving them to ringsiders. . . .

PATRIOTIC MOVES. The Lafayette Hotel is helping war bond sales in a big way by devoting 50 per cent of its gross receipts every Friday, including those in the cocktail lounge and dining room, to bond purchases. . . . The Burlington menu patriotically admonishes diners, "help yourself to sugar but don't waste it. Be patriotic. Stir your coffee and tea." . . . Leonard John Mitchell, executive steward at Olmsted's, says he thinks it's the special duty of all Washington restaurateurs to provide good food and restful atmosphere for weary war executives and workers.

There's going to be new and hot rhythm in newspaper offices. Before his opening at Del Rio, Maestro Enric Madriguera sent sets of maracas to all the night club editors.

OF LOVELY LASSES. Melba, the so-beauteous dancer at the Shoreham, has never been in a beauty shop in her life. . . . Eve Knight of the King Cole Room has bought a new home in Arlington. She says it's "Gothic New England" style, has a statue in the garden, fireplaces and steps down from the living room (so the guests can fall out easily, we presume). . . . When we told Mary La Marr, songbird of the Lounge Riviera, about Eve's new place, she said, "Well, I haven't a house. But I have a new house coat. It's white with blue shutters." . . . Hi Hat's Marianne is looking like a flower garden in a pink and blue floral print of "paper taffeta" . . . We'd love to know where on earth Lola Lolik of the Balalaika procured those high tan button shoes she wears in the market place skit. And why doesn't she button them? . . . Bunny Hare of the Lotus is looking even more little girlish than usual in a frock of periwinkle blue with wide bands of white eyelet embroidery and a blue bow in her hair. . . . And warbler Marita of the Madrillon is fierily Latin in bright red with a cluster of scarlet blossoms in her black curls. . . . Stephanie and Carol, the delightful youngsters, now playing gypsy music at Restaurant "400" are both Philadelphia girls, but have never been to Washington before in their lives except for a day of sightseeing some years ago. . . . We have a picture of Peggy Norton, the new song, accordion and harp thrill of the Anchor Room, but wouldn't think of putting it in the paper. Because she's so much prettier than the goofy camera indicated. Another picture please, Peggy.

"Chick" Lloyd's big and bouncy orchestra opens in Uline's Summer Garden tomorrow night. It's one of the best of traveling bands. Tonight offers you a final chance to whirl to Jack Coffey's music.

AUTHENTIC MELODY TREATS. That weird but captivating blend of "Tangerine" and "One Dozen Roses" played in Viennese waltz time by Durward Bowersox and Sid Willoughby at Burt's Trans-Lux. . . . The new arrangement of "Kerry Dance" being given out on violin and double pianos by Jane Marlow and the Heintze Brothers at Restaurant "823." . . . The violin soloing of Enesco's "Rumanian Rhapsody," a prize concert number, by Michel at the Plymouth.

JOHNNY VALENCIA, guitarist and expert on Latin Americana, has joined Dick Koon's band in the Mayflower Lounge. Johnny's father is Colombian, his mother Cuban and he took his first music lessons in Spain.

The Starlight Roof closes for the season tomorrow night after a grandly successful summer. Much credit for this must go to Arthur Warren's strictly "smoothie" dance band. The Cafe Caprice of the Roger Smith Hotel will open on Monday with a new musical group whose identity thus far is a mystery even to the management.

Rich Girl-Poor Girl

Chapter XVII

ROSE said furiously,

"And I suppose you can come in here with your larger point of view and tell us how unjust we've been? I suppose you want the few people left in Riverport with a sense of independence and self-respect to grovel in the gutter when royalty passes by. I've lived in this town for 24 years and you've lived here just five months: You make me tired."

FAITH BALDWIN

"Why, Rose—!" he began, astonished.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said, flushed. "I didn't mean—I've an absurd temper. You will learn, Jon, after a while. At least I think you will." She added thoughtfully. "Only it's pretty irritating. You only see one side—"

"Don't you?"

"Perhaps. But it's the right side," she said defiantly, "and there are a good many of us who feel we'd like for instance to elect our own mayor and not a Sutton mouthpiece. There are a good many of us who feel that Riverport could do with a little less benevolence. Some day there will be enough of us to alter things."

They were at the school now, the big sprawling red brick building, the athletic field, now covered with snow, stretching out behind it. Groups of boys and girls were hurrying in. Three or four boys lounged against the iron fence which ran along the street frontage. One of them, big, dark, very bulky in coonskin coat, detached himself and came to the curb. "Here comes Teacher," he said mockingly, over his shoulder, as Jonathan's car stopped.

He was there to help Rose out. "Good morning, Miss Ward," he saluted politely, too politely.

"Good morning, Larry," said Rose abstractedly. She waved her hand at Jonathan . . . "Thanks for the lift," she said.

He called back, "I'll see you tonight," and drove away. As he drove he frowned. Swinging around the corner, he thought, so that was the Dexter kid. Well, I don't like him.

Jonathan Accepted Sutton Invitations

Before his first winter in Riverport had suffered a reluctant defeat at the green attack of spring, Jonathan had discovered that it was not as easy as he had believed to refuse the Sutton invitations. He spent two weekends at Lake Placid with Sally, her mother and father, Phil Dexter and several other young people, feeling considerably out of place, excessively uncomfortable and very chilly. He assured himself that he had "tried" to refuse, but was completely aware how feeble an excuse that would sound to almost anyone—Rose, for instance. Yet he justified these little holidays to his own satisfaction on the grounds that when they occurred he had no cases which needed his special care, and besides, the Suttons had been so very insistent and he owed the Senator a good deal. That formidable gentleman had waved away his hesitation as if it were so much smoke. . . . "Nonsense, my boy . . . All work and no play you know . . . besides, Sally's set her heart on it. If anything goes wrong with your people—well, they worried along without you for quite a spell, didn't they? They can call in one of the oldtimers."

Jonathan was a shade stiff in replying to that. But the Senator slapped him on the back with considerable force.

"Come, don't take it that way. Naturally I know that you want to build up your practice. Don't worry about that. I can help a good deal there. Did Geraldine Loring bring that kid of hers to see you?"

"She did," replied Jonathan, a little grimly.

The Senator beamed upon him.

"I thought she would. Told her to. She's been dragging him to all the high-priced specialists in Boston, New York, Syracuse and San Francisco . . . I told her you had plenty of common sense. I knew you'd satisfy her."

"Well," said Jonathan, "thanks just the same, but I didn't. I wasn't high-priced or specialist enough, I presume. I made the mistake of telling her the truth."

"And what was the truth? Don't be alarmed, I won't betray a professional confidence. Besides, Gerry's an old friend of mine so she'll tell me anyway. Out with it!" demanded Sutton, very much amused.

His Diagnosis Of The Loring Boy

He and Jonathan were alone at the vast dining room table in the Sutton house. Sally was answering a telephone call and Mrs. Sutton had disappeared at the close of dinner. Sutton pushed the brandy decanter over to Jonathan. Jonathan shaking his head, smiled slightly.

"Mrs. Loring's little boy," he reported clearly, "overeats. Both at meals and between meals. He also goes to too many motion pictures. And he is completely spoiled. Otherwise, there's nothing whatever the matter with him."

"Do you know," said the Senator cautiously, "I always thought that child a brat . . ." He roared with laughter . . . "privately, of course. And you told his mother so!"

"I'm afraid I did," admitted Jonathan ruefully. He looked up at his host. He said, "I am licensed to practice medicine. I haven't come to practicing deception yet. Medicine has its flaws. It isn't an exact science. But I refuse to tell a woman that her child suffers from nervous breakdown when he suffers from nothing more or less than a devilish disposition due entirely to his bringing up."

Sally's Father Suggests "Diplomacy"

The Senator sobered. He said, swirling his brandy around in the enormous glass. "And I admire you for it, my boy. But you must remember you are just beginning. A diet—a few sugar pills—tact—after all you hurt no one by these and you keep your patients. It's all very well to be honest and, shall we say to lean backward, in your job, whatever it is . . . but you'll reach the place some day when you can afford these luxuries and when people will pay you liberally for high-handed treatment . . . but until you do reach that place you'll have to learn to curb your inclinations and—well, be diplomatic, I'll fix it up with Gerry, of course."

"Thanks," said Jonathan curtly, "you needn't."

The Senator was annoyed. He wasn't accustomed to having his offers of assistance refused—and so brusquely. However, he regarded the younger man with something very like admiration. Sutton was at the top of the heap because of his methods, which were not peculiar to him alone, and which were a combination of authentic brains, real force, ruthlessness and vanity. Jonathan's methods, apparently, unless a word to the wise did prove sufficient, would be quite dissimilar and of a type which the Senator characterized as "soft." Not that it took softness to tell Gerry Loring the truth; that took strength. It was this strength in Jonathan Kimber which the Senator, if against his will, was forced to admire.

Sally came back from the phone. She said crossly,

"For heaven's sake, haven't you two stopped settling the affairs of the nation yet? Surely I'm just as important. Come along, Kim. Have you made up your mind to go to Placid with us, after all?"

"Of course he has," boomed the Senator, "do him a world of good. Needs it. It's all arranged."

So that was that, Jonathan went down beneath the wheels of the juggernaut and found the sensation not entirely unpleasant.

Jonathan's Visit To Lake Placid

Placid was amusing. He felt like a fool on skiis, stumbling around and sticking head first in snow banks to Sally's obvious delight. He looked like a fool, too, he believed, and he was a little alarmed at the cost of the equipment which it was essential to possess . . . But the air was chilled wine in a crystal cup, the sky was pure turquoise and Sally had never been prettier.

On the dance floor Jonathan acquitted himself well enough, thanks to Sally's recent instruction, and it amused rather than irritated him to find that Phil Dexter regarded him with open hostility, in the light of a rival. He said as much to Sally, during the second weekend.

They were dancing at the club. Her daffodil hair brushed his cheek. She asked, smiling, "Well, aren't you?"

Jonathan, considerably taken aback, exclaimed, "My dear child!" in tones of the utmost astonishment and Sally laughed up at him under the frowning regard of Dexter, revolving nearby with a chattering girl in his arms.

"That's not very complimentary," she reproached his lightly, "but perhaps you can be persuaded."

It was all very frivolous and, he admitted, a lot of fun. He hadn't, of course, had very much fun . . . as these young people regarded it . . . in all his life. He had worked too hard, been too occupied. It was at once relaxing and stimulating to be a part of Sally's world, a world of well-dressed, rather hard, but attractive youngsters, who danced well, and held their liquor, as a rule, even better, who talked glibly and idly of New York and Paris, London and Capri, Del Monte and Palm Springs, Budapest and Shanghai. There was something seductive in the smooth easiness of their well oiled lives, and Jonathan told himself that it couldn't possibly do him any harm, and besides, he owed it to the Suttons not to be gratuitously rude. Of their many invitations he had accepted a few only; surely those few could not be counted against him.

Private Lives

GENERAL'S JEEP
THAT MIGHTY ATOM, THE AMERICAN JEEP, IS MAKING HISTORY IN THIS WAR...OUT ON THE LIBYAN DESERT, BRITAIN'S GENERAL AUCHINLECK SNAGGED ONE FOR HIMSELF AND USED TO GO TEARING ABOUT THE BATTLEFIELDS WITH A UNION JACK ON THE BONNET.
HARMONY BOYS?
WONDER IF THE MUSICIANS' UNION BOSS, JAMES PETRILLO, HIRED THOSE SIX BODYGUARDS SO THEY COULD ENTERTAIN HIM WITH THE SEXTETTE FROM "LUCIA"?
WHEN SHE WAS VERY YOUNG
SHE GREW UP TO WRITE "THE WAYWARD"—BUT LIKE WISE CLARE BOOTHE ONCE PLAYED A SWEET LITTLE FAIRY IN AN OLD MARY PICKFORD MOVIE.

Maria Margharíti Balado is an accomplished young woman—she's known equally well as an actress, a dancer and a singer.

You don't recognize the name? And she so well known? Well, then, maybe you've heard of her by the name of Margo.

To get familiar at once, Margo deserves to be pretty well known, because she started her entertainment career at the age of seven and has been doing fairly well by it ever since. She learned to dance at six in her native Mexico City and made her stage debut there a year later. Later, when her family removed to Spain, Margo studied dancing with some of its best known instructors. It wasn't much later that she was internationally known for her interpretations of the dance, both Mexican and Spanish.

She comes by her musical background naturally. She's a niece of Xavier Cugat, the extremely popular orchestra leader, and has been seen and heard with him on his tours throughout the world. At present they are both heard on the "Caravan" show which is presented over WJSV and the Columbia network every Friday night at 10.

But to get on with Margo's triple-threat status. It was in 1934, while while she was singing and dancing with Uncle Xavier in Los Angeles that she was discovered by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, who went into a slight rave and signed her for the starring role in their first film, "Crime Without Passion." That she was a success as an actress is indicated by the fact that since then she's been seen in the Hollywood versions of "Lost Horizon," "Into The Light," "Winterset," and several others.

On the stage she's done very well in "Winterset," "The Masque of Kings," "Faust," and "The Outward Room." And, of course, she's been on any number of radio shows. Margo is quite a girl.

The new building will include administrative offices, classroom and other facilities made necessary to accommodate a growing use of the field by student fliers taking CAA-sponsored courses, and coming here from Shepherd State Teachers College at Shepherdstown, W. Va., and Southeastern University at Washington.

Ward Wins By 75 Votes In Md. Race

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 10.—The complete official count in the First Congressional District gave Representative David J. Ward a 75-vote margin over State Senator Dudley G. Roe today, an edge which absentee ballots were not expected to overcome.

Ward returned to the lead today when Cecil County, the last to report, gave him 1504 votes to 1316 for Roe. Yesterday Roe held the slender lead.

The official count changed some figures in the unofficial tabulation but not enough to give Roe the nomination. The incumbent picked up his biggest edge in Wicomico, his home county, where his plurality over Roe was nearly 1800 votes.

Kent and Queen Anne's both went solidly for Roe. Leon Andrus ran third.

Official Tabulation

The official tabulation by counties, not including the absentee ballots, follows:

County	Roe	Ward
Caroline	1157	631
Cecil	1316	1504
Dorchester	1390	1044
Kent	1571	874
Queen Anne's	2196	1293
Somerset	1005	1633
Talbot	1764	1088
Wicomico	948	2728
Worcester	1055	1675

Those returns already in from Anne Arundel indicated that Wilbur R. Dulin, Annapolis attorney, had defeated State Senator Louis N. Phipps' bid for renomination. Dulin apparently carried an almost complete ticket of county officers with him to victory. The Phipps faction appeared to have elected only one man in the county contests.

Special Session Asked

Eyes in the Eastern Shore were on the outcome of the Roe-Ward primary battle but Maryland labor leaders were thinking about the general elections in November.

They asked Governor O'Conor to call a special session for the purpose of repealing Maryland's declaration of intention laws. They said it deprived 100,000 war workers of their franchise by requiring a one-year wait between the declaration and the first vote.

O'Conor said today he would refer the matter to Attorney General William C. Walsh to ascertain if there were any constitutional barriers to such action or any provisions which would make a special session of the Legislature unnecessary.

Close Contest Also For Circuit Bench

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 10.—The official counts in Washington, Allegany and Garrett Counties will be necessary to decide whether Ellsworth R. Roulette or Leo H. Miller, Hagerstown attorneys, will be the Republican candidate for judge in the Fourth Judicial Circuit.

Returns which lack the results in one Allegany County precinct, and two precincts in Garrett County, show Roulette has a 63-vote lead. Miller carried both Allegany and Garrett and Roulette, Washington County.

The Democrats had no contest, Judge Joseph D. Mish being unopposed for the nomination.

40,000 in Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 10.—A survey made by a directory company here recently disclosed that Hagerstown has grown from a city of 32,445 in 1940, when the last census was taken, to one of 40,000 now.

'Force' Needed As Safeguard, Synod Agrees

By the Associated Press

Staunton, Va., Sept. 10.—The Presbyterian Synod of Virginia agreed today in adopting a report of its social and moral welfare committee that "force" is necessary "in order to produce and safeguard righteousness."

The report which was laid before the annual meeting of synod by Dr. Thomas H. Baldwin of Mary Baldwin said in part that "the church does not declare war on peoples; only upon their vices and impediments; this it held to be the proper course because the church proclaims a universal religion and belongs to all men of all races and nations.

To Safeguard Rights

"But," the report added, "we cannot do without force in the world, because force is necessary in order to produce and safeguard righteousness.

"If after prayerful waiting upon God, the Christian citizen comes to believe that something is at stake that is more important than the lives of particular individuals, or their property, or certain of their other rights; and if so believing, he gives himself to its achievement or conservation, it shall be given him in turn under the gospel, to walk in assurance, in exaltation, in self-realization, in the spirit of service."

The synod went on record yesterday as favoring presidential action to curb "the evils of whisky and other vices" near training camps and war industries.

Presbyterians of the Virginia synod contributed more than two million dollars last year to various church causes and benevolences, Dr. J. M. McBridge reported.

Committee Heads

After hearing reports of various committees, the synod voted to hold its next session in Richmond in 1943 at Union Seminary.

Dr. H. L. Riddle of Baltimore, chairman of the committee on revision of committees, named the following chairmen for three-year terms: Dr. R. A. Lapsley, Roanoke, home missions; the Rev. James Sprunt, Lynchburg, religious education; the Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth, Roanoke, educational institutions; the Rev. J. P. Patton, jr., Waynesboro, stewardship and finance; the Rev. J. B. Clower, jr., Virginia Beach, program and entertainment; the Rev. W. W. White, Portsmouth, records; the Rev. C. K. Poole, Romney, W. Va., social and moral welfare. William P. Martin, of Richmond, was reelected publicity clerk.

Norwegian Craft Sunk by U-Boat; Captain Seized

By the Associated Press

Another ship captain—skipper of a small Norwegian merchantman destroyed by enemy submarine off the northern coast of South America—was taken prisoner aboard the raider following the torpedoing of his ship, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

Seizure of the vessel's master boosted to 10 the reported number of merchant ship commanders who have been held aboard Axis U-boats in recent weeks. Maritime circles believe the Axis has adopted a policy of imprisoning key mariners in an effort to drain the Allied supply of men capable of directing United Nations' cargo craft.

Sinking of a medium-sized British merchantman in the Caribbean also was officially announced yesterday, raising the Associated Press score of announced western Atlantic cargo ship losses to 463 since Pearl Harbor.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

"The writer would love to be able to boast that he played this hand in an important tournament and made his slam brilliantly; the sad truth, however, is that the hand was never played anywhere, but simply composed by the writer," admits contributor R. W., of New York, in submitting today's deal for discussion.

Opening: K ♡.

"I send it, however," he continues, "as an amazing example of what can be accomplished by declarer's proper handling of the trump suit North and South reach an optimistic six-spade contract, which is cheerfully doubled by West. The king of hearts is opened and trumped by declarer, who lays down the ace of spades and learns some very bad news when East discards a small club.

"At this point, it looks like a set of at least two tricks, but the miracle is that the hand can be made, and not by double-dummy tactics, either. Simple 'over-the-board' deductions will do it. West must be held to one trump trick while declarer adds to his trick winners by ruffing. In the first place, declarer realizes that he must now get a 4-3 break in diamonds, and so he plays accordingly.

Makes "Star" Play

"A small diamond is led to the ace, and a heart return is ruffed in the closed hand. Now the king and queen of diamonds are cashed, with dummy discarding two clubs. With diamonds breaking, declarer sees a chance to make his bid provided West holds at least one club. If West is blank, he will simply hold off the diamond suit and ruff the first round of clubs instead.

"If West has one club, he must not be permitted to throw it off on the next diamond lead, as that would permit him to trump the first round of clubs. At this point declarer makes his 'star' play—he lays down the king of clubs before leading the fourth round of diamonds.

Thirteenth Diamond Set Up

"Now the fourth diamond is led, and West can only discard a heart while dummy trumps low. East drops the jack, setting up the thirteenth diamond in declarer's hand. Another heart ruff puts South in the lead. At this point declarer has taken nine tricks in a row, and the cards are like this:

	♠ K 10 ♡ 8 ◇ None ♣ 9
♠ Q J 9 ♡ A ◇ None ♣ None	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ None ♡ 10 ◇ None ♣ Q J 10
	♠ 7 ♡ None ◇ 7 ♣ A 3

"The good diamond is led from South, West has three choices, to each of which dummy must make a different reply. If West discards the heart act, dummy throws the club, and then declarer leads a club, obtaining a grand-coup position. West would be forced to trump high, and dummy would then let go the heart. North would win the next two spade tricks.

"If West trumps the diamond with his nine of spades, dummy wins with the ten and gives declarer a last heart ruff, after which the king of spades makes the twelfth trick. And finally, if West trumps the diamond with his jack dummy then discards the heart eight, leaving West without a good play. South makes six spades, doubled, giving up but one trick to West.

"The amazing part of it," R. W. concludes, "is that all this works the same way, even if West has a club instead of the ace of hearts."

Jews to Begin New Year Rites At Sunset

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Washington's estimated 30,000 followers of the Jewish faith await the setting of the sun tonight, signaling the approach of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year 5703, and the beginning of the high holy days.

Free from the fear that haunts their brothers in Gestapo-ridden Europe, worshipers tonight will bow into the hush of synagogues and temples for the simple Maariv devotions that will prepare them for tomorrow morning's more formal welcome to the new year.

Many of the devout will worship with the traditional prayer shawls across their shoulders and black hats or caps covering their heads.

Ram's Horn to Echo

Ten series of three short blasts from the ancient shofar (ram's horn) will echo through the holy places tomorrow morning, in a call for repentance and reflection among the adherents to Judaism. That will begin a 10-day penitent period, climaxed by the sacred 24-hour period of Yom Kippur—Day of Atonement, beginning at sundown on September 20.

Orthodox Jewry's observance of Rosh Hashanah will continue through Sunday while Reformed Jewry's celebration will end at sundown tomorrow.

Provisions for Service Men

Special provisions for Jewish service men stationed in this area have been made by synagogues, temples and Jewish service organizations.

Among them, the Jewish Community Center at Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest will sponsor services today at 7:30 p. m. and tomorrow at 10 a. m. Rabbi Isadore Breslau, spiritual leader of B'nai Israel Congregation, will deliver the sermons. Services will be in charge of Cantors Abrasha Rabofsky and Lazor Fenik.

Officials of First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, have offered use of the church to handle the overflow crowd of service men and war workers expected from the Rosh Hashanah services of the Washington Hebrew Congregation today at 8 p. m. and tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. Rabbi Morton Fierman will conduct the overflow service, for which tickets are available at the Temple offices, 822 Eighth Street Northwest.

Rabbi Gerstenfeld's Topics

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will speak there today at 8 p. m. on "Be Strong and of Good Courage," and tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. on "They That Go Forward."

Jewish sailors are particularly invited to attend Maariv services today at 7 p. m. and tomorrow and Sunday at 8 a. m. in the Naval Lodge Hall, 330 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. The Southeast Hebrew Congregation, of which Rabbi Chaim Williamowsky is spiritual leader, is in charge of arrangements.

2 Famed Cantors

Two world-famous cantors will conduct Rosh Hashanah services here.

One will be Cantor Adolf Vygoda, formerly of Europe, and now of Beth Sholom Congregation, Eighth and Shepherd Streets Northwest, who will chant at services there today at 6:30 p. m. and tomorrow and Sunday at 8 a. m. Rabbi M. H. Levinson will preach.

Another is Cantor Abraham Green, who will conduct services today at 7 p. m. and tomorrow at 8 a. m. at Joppa Masonic Temple, 4209 Ninth Street Northwest.

Mr. Silverstone's Topics

Worshipers of Tifereth Israel Congregation at Fourteenth and Euclid Streets Northwest, will hear Rabbi Harry Silverstone speak tomorrow at 7 a. m. on "The Meaning of Rosh Hashanah" and on Sunday at the same hour on "The Challenge of Rosh Hashanah." Maariv rites will be tonight at 7 o'clock.

Maariv services will be held today at 7 p. m. at Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I Streets Northwest, Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, spiritual leader there, will speak tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. on "The World Challenge to the Jew," and on Sunday at 10:30 a. m., on "This Is Our Day of Judgment."

Rosh Hashanah services also are scheduled for the Agudath Achim congregation, 909 Quackenbos Street Northwest; Kesher Israel, 2801 N Street Northwest; Beth El, 702 Jefferson Street Northwest; Ezras, 800 I Street Northeast; B'nai Israel, Fourteenth and Emerson Streets Northwest, and Ohev Sholom, Fifth and I Streets Northwest.

Marines Jailed For Checks

Two young Marines, who wanted to enjoy a "final spree before going overseas," were sentenced in Municipal Court yesterday to one year in jail on six charges of passing bad checks here and an additional ten months or $1000 on five other bad check counts.

"You are a disgrace to the uniforms you are wearing," said Judge John P. McMahon, in imposing sentence.

The defendants, Alfred E. Dickman, 18, of Piqua, Ohio, and Alphonzo L. Bookout, 19, of Springdale, Ark., pleaded guilty to the charges at their arraignment last week. According to Detective Sergt. D. A. Higgins of the check squad, the youths had bought some jewelry for girl friends after cashing checks totaling $465.

Military authorities have classified the youths as deserters, the court learned, and formal action may be taken on this charge upon completion of the sentences. The soldiers are said to have left their home station in New River, N. C., about a month ago.

Martinique-U. S. Deal Reported Completed

London, Sept. 10 (Thursday) (INS).—The Daily Sketch claimed today it had information that negotiations between the United States and the administration of the French Caribbean Island of Martinique had been successfully completed.

It said the United States will "control the island but only so far as to make it safe from U-boat activities and its ports from visiting Nazi agents."
